Comment Varied On Schaumburg's New Hospital

by STEVE BROWN

Reaction to Wednesday's announcement that Presbyterian St. Luke's Medical Center plans to build a $12.5 million hospital in Schaumburg drew a variety of comments from members of the Northwest Cook County Health Needs Study Committee.

The committee, which has been in existence for about a year, commissioned a $20,000 study last month to determine the health care needs in the area.

All of the members of the committee, the villages of Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Hanover Park and Roselle and officials from Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village and Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, agreed to abide by the decision of the study. The actual survey work is being conducted by the consulting firm of Ernest and Ernest.

In announcing the decision to build the facility, Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher said he feels the village had "kept its commitment and still believes that a great amount of good will come from the study."

He decided to pursue the possibilities with Presbyterian St. Luke's hospital.

"It was too good an opportunity to pass up," Atcher said.

ATCHER SAID that he talked to other members of the committee and received no negative reaction to the plans for the new hospital.

However, at least two members of the committee, Alexian Brothers and Northwest Community Hospital, deny that Atcher ever approached them on the matter.

Steve Skorcz, assistant administrator at Alexian Brothers, and Malcolm Macoun, president of Northwest Community Hospital, said Atcher had not contacted them

Both expressed surprise, disappointment, and puzzlement over Schaumburg's and Presbyterian-St. Luke's decision to go ahead; when the study partially financed by a $13,000 state grant, is not completed.

"We find it a great personal disappointment that Presbyterian St. Luke's made no overture to the existing institution before announcing their plans," Skorcz said.

In evpressing his puzzlement over the situation, Macoun said, "We had hoped to get an objective study from this committee before any further plans were made."

Both said they plan to bring the new development before the committee at its next meeting.

ROSELLE MAYOR Robert Frantz said he does not feel the action will negate the study in any way.

"I do not feel that this development changes anyone's committment to abide by the decision of the study," Frantz said.

He said that with the opportunity to get a prestige institution into the area, it would have been foolish to pass it up.

Hoffman Estates' representative to the committee, Richard Regan, said he would have to wait to see the outcome of the study before determining the impact of the Schaumburg plans.

"This study was a step in the direction of cooperation, transcending provincial attitudes. We should not allow this development to bias the study and we should be able to transcend the development and still have a spirit of cooperation, Regan said.

He added that while the study would deal with immediate needs of the community, it will also analye the needs of a large area for the future.

SPRUCING IT UP . . Schaumburg Firefighter Dennis Bohn works on a piece of equipment at the village's new fire station on Meacham Road in preparation for Sunday's dedication ceremony. The facility is the village's second fire station, and costs about $224,000.

Firehouse Dedication Set For Sunday

Looking around, a visitor will not find any big brass poles or even a siren on the top of the building.

In fact, if it were not for the big red trucks loaded with hoses and ladders parked all around, a casual observer probably would not even know that recently completed brick-and-glass building on Meacham Road in Schaumburg is the village's newest fire station.

Formal dedication ceremonies for the facility will take place at 2 p.m. Sunday by fire department and village officials.

Construction of the $224,000 building began last December. The station will eventually become the headquarters for the department, housing administrative and central alarm facilities for the village.

THE DEPARTMENT also operates another station on Schaumburg Road near Springinsguth Road.

One of the features of the new one-story building is the three-story tower which rises in the structure. The tower is a combination hose drying rack and training facility.

According to Chief Lloyd Abrahamsen, the tower can be used to simulate fires in various types of high-rise buildings. Different styles of windows were installed on each floor so that all conditions could be practiced. Each floor has a sprinkler system so that an actual fire can be set in the room.

Beyond the features of the building itself, the chief and Lt. Raleigh Kick also pointed to the reduced response time to calls in the eastern and northern parts of the village.

"We arrived at International Village in less than a minute on an ambulance call and the people there were really puzzled as to how we got there so quick," Kick said.

In the past, calls from the Woodfield shopping center or commercial and residential area on Algonquin Road took nearly ten minutes to answer. Now most locations are less than a minute away, Abrahamsen said.

Car Wash Saturday

Schaumburg's Jaycee-ettes will sponsor a car wash Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Larry's Standard Station, Schaumburg Rd., Schaumburg.

A donation of $1 per car will help the club provide service projects for the community.

Chairman of the project is Mary Read, 1515 Colwyn St., Schaumburg.

Project Red Ball Begins Next Week

Project Red Ball will officially begin July 23 for the Schaumburg Jaycees.

They will kick off the project, designed to save children's lives in the event of fire, on the day of the dedication of Schaumburg's Fire Station No. 2.

The Jaycees will be distributing decals door-to-door to be placed in the upper left hand corner of any window of the bedroom in which a child sleeps. In the event of fire in a home or an apartment, firefighters will first check rooms with the Red Ball decal. Valuable time can be saved in this way, say the Jaycees.

Residents not contacted by the Jaycees or wishing additional decals may obtain them at the Schaumburg Village Hall, any of the firehouses or from any member of the Jaycees.

Guess What...The Mosquitoes Are Still Pretty Thick

A survey completed last week shows that despite efforts by the Mosquito Abatement District, many area communities still are plagued by a severe mosquito problem this summer.

Officials from Arlington Heights, Barrington, Elk Grove Village, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect and Wheeling, reported the mosquito problem ranges from bad to severe.

The survey was taken by Schaumburg Village Trustee Jack Larsen. He took the action after the village board requested emergency action from the Mosquito Abatement District because of the severe problem that has developed.

The village passed an ordinance last year prohibiting spraying of insecticides in the village.

LARSEN SAID he made the survey to show that even though other areas have been spraying, they still have a problem.

He argued the spraying is an ineffective way to treat the problem.

Last week trustees approved the spraying as an emergency method because heavy rains caused the breeding of large numbers of mosquitoes.

Mayor Robert Atcher and Trustee Herb Aigner stated there was a need for immediate action. They both mentioned reports of children being bitten so severely they required hospitalization.

The two cited the need for the emergency spraying because of the exceptional situation.

After over 30 minutes of discussion on the matter, Larsen's motion to reconsider the amendment granting temporary spraying was defeated.

Hoffman Hallmark Chorus Sponsors Garage Sale

The Hoffman Hallmark Chorus will sponsor a garage sale July 29 from 10 a.m. until dark, at 133 Almond Ln., Hoffman Estates.

Proceeds from this sale will be used to finance both the regular activities of this adult mixed chorus and its proposed European concert tour next summer.

Ways and Means Chairman Beverly Pizzo will host the sale at her home, east of Roselle Road and off Higgins at the end of Almond Lane.

Next summer's tour will include two weeks on the concert circuit in Switzerland, Northern Italy and Austria.

MSD To Protest Zion Power Plant

The Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) announced yesterday it will formally protest the licensing of Commonwealth Edison Co.'s nuclear power plant on the shore of Lake Michigan at Zion.

The announcement was made following an executive session of the trustees — closed to the press and public — called because the district currently is involved in litigation with the power company.

Trustee Abe Eiserman suggested the board go into the closed door session when the subject of nuclear plants arose during the meeting of the MSD's Committee on industrial Waste and Water Pollution.

After the announcement Eiserman said the district decided to intervene by filing a petition with the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC). He said that avenue was chosen over the alternative of attempting to stop the licensing through the courts because the district will gain a tactical advantage by approaching the AEC.

EISERMAN explained that if the district intervened through the courts, the district would have the burden of proving the operation of the plant will be detrimental to the public interest. By petitioning the AEC, Eiserman said, Edison will have the burden of proving the plants will not be detrimental.

Commonwealth Edison Co. has constructed two nuclear plants at the site. Neither has gone into operation yet, however, because they have not been licensed by the AEC.

If there was no intervention prior to July 29, the AEC automatically would have issued the necessary licenses.

Eiserman said the legal staff of the MSD will immediately begin to prepare the petition to the commission and said he expects the AEC will then set a date for a hearing on the protest.

The MSD is on record as opposing all nuclear power plants because of the danger such plants potentially represent to the waters of Lake Michigan. The trustees voted yesterday to intervene in any licensing of such plants until there are "adequate guarantees against the pollution of public waters."

THE QUICK ACTION by the board short-circuited the plans of representatives of the League of Woman Voters (LWV) to request the district intervene.

Catherine Quigg, of 49 S. Greeley St., Palatine, vice president of the LWV's section on Pollution and Environmental Problems, did not give a planned statement because of the board's action.

In her prepared statement, Mrs. Quigg said the power plants will routinely discharge gaseous and liquid radioactive wastes into the air and water. She charged that those low levels of radiation have lethal effects because they induce cancer in the froms of tumors and leukemia and also cause genetic damage.

Mrs. Quigg said the LWV objects to the "pollute now, study later" policy and called the approach a "travesty on our health and that of future generations."

A week ago Eiserman accused the AEC of keeping secret from the public the radiation dangers to Lake Michigan from nuclear power plants. He said the standards set by the AEC governing radioactive wastes does not protect the environment. He added the core-cooling system criteria set by the commission for nuclear power plants will not protect against poisoned drinking water in the event of a coolant failure.

Gas 'Price Wars' Over? Pump Prices Going Up

Motorists are starting to feel the pinch of higher gasoline pump prices at many area stations. But to several local dealers, this marks the first time in several months that they can cut back on losses caused by price wars.

The price wars, in which dealers cut their pump prices to beat the competition, have been severe in the Chicago metropolitan area for more than two years. Pump prices this summer dropped to 10-year record lows, from 5 to 9 cents below the normal price of approximately 40 cents a gallon. Now, for the first time in several months, the majority of the larger oil companies are participating in a move closer to the normal price level.

"We've taken three years of this price war business," said George Beach, owner of the Touhy and Elmhurst Standard Station in Des Plaines. "It used to be that only 40 per cent of the people in our business failed every year. Now three out of four new owners go broke within a year.

"SOMETIMES you wonder if it's worth it," he says. "The margin of profit is so low that you have to cut back somewhere when prices are down. You have to cut back on help or somewhere else.

"For every penny the price goes down below the normal price we lose $1,000 a month without the support of our oil company," he adds. Even when they do offer price subsidies, dealers lose money. Oil companies usually pay 70 per cent of the price below the normal 40.9 or 40.4 cents a gallon price for regular gasoline. The dealer pays 30 per cent.

Beach is happy the price is inching upward. "We've been up at the 39.9 cents a gallon pump price for regular for five days," he says. Dealers are supposed to sell more gasoline when the price is dropped, but it doesn't work that way, he says.

"We lose money on every cent below the normal price," agrees W. J. Miseska, owner of the Rolling Meadows Shell Station. He is charging 38.4 cents a gallon for regular gasoline. "As soon as the price moves up to the normal 40.9 cents a gallon then I pump more gasoline," Miseska says. "This is because people stop looking only at the price and they come in for our service or the brand name.

"Sure, there are always discounters who sell gasoline to the independents for a lower price so they can charge less," he adds. "I call them cutthroats."

"The major oil companies started the price wars," Miseska says. "Now they are trying to stop them because everyone else started to cut their prices even more than they intended."

If dealers have been consistently taking a loss on gasoline during the recent rash of price wars, what keeps many of the dealers in business? "You have to keep your back room busy with service customers," says Miseska. "You have to work longer hours. You have to take Shell's suggestions on how to run your business."

Every service station has a clique of loyal customers, according to Paul Madsen, an attendant at Jim's Industrial Standard service station in Arlington Heights. The station moved up to the 38.4 cents a gallon level for regular gasoline about a week ago, he says.

"We've moved up in the last couple of days to 35.9 cents a gallon for regular," according to Vern Holmes, owner of Elk Grove Texaco in Elk Grove Village. "Most stations in the area moved up, too," he notes.

"We do increase our volume by 30 to 50 per cent when the prices are lower than normal," he says. "But the people who are looking for rock-bottom prices don't come here.

"The last time we were at the normal price of 40.9 cents a gallon was in February of this year," says Holmes. The oil company will tell you whatever increase or decrease there is in your price of gasoline. It's up to you to decide how much you raise it or lower it. He says he's maintaining good service but has laid a few people off as a result of the price wars.

MSD To Protest Zion Power Plant

The Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) announced yesterday it will formally protest the licensing of Commonwealth Edison Co.'s nuclear power plant on the shore of Lake Michigan at Zion.

The announcement was made following an executive session of the trustees — closed to the press and public — called because the district currently is involved in litigation with the power company.

Trustee Abe Eiserman suggested the board go into the closed door session when the subject of nuclear plants arose during the meeting of the MSD's Committee on industrial Waste and Water Pollution.

After the announcement Eiserman said the district decided to intervene by filing a petition with the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC). He said that avenue was chosen over the alternative of attempting to stop the licensing through the courts because the district will gain a tactical advantage by approaching the AEC.

EISERMAN explained that if the district intervened through the courts, the district would have the burden of proving the operation of the plant will be detriemental to the public interest. By petitioning the AEC, Eiserman said, Edison will have the burden of proving the plants will not be detrimental.

Commonwealth Edison Co. has constructed two nuclear plants at the site. Neither has gone into operation yet, however, because they have not been licensed by the AEC.

If there was no intervention prior to July 29, the AEC automatically would have issued the necessary licenses.

Eiserman said the legal staff of the MSD will immediately begin to prepare the petition to the commission and said he expects the AEC will then set a date for a hearing on the protest.

The MSD is on record as opposing all nuclear power plants because of the danger such plants potentially represent to the waters of Lake Michigan. The trustees voted yesterday to intervene in any licensing of such plants until there are "adequate guarantees against the pollution of public waters."

THE QUICK ACTION by the board short-circuited the plans of representatives of the League of Woman Voters (LWV) to request the district intervene.

Catherine Quigg, of 49 S. Greeley St., Palatine, vice president of the LWV's section on Pollution and Environmental Problems, did not give a planned statement because of the board's action.

In her prepared statement, Mrs. Quigg said the power plants will routinely discharge gaseous and liquid radioactive wastes into the air and water. She charged that those low levels of radiation have lethal effects because they induce cancer in the froms of tumors and leukemia and also cause genetic damage.

Mrs. Quigg said the LWV objects to the "pollute now, study later" policy and called the approach a "travesty on our health and that of future generations."

A week ago Eiserman accused the AEC of keeping secret from the public the radiation dangers to Lake Michigan from nuclear power plants. He said the standards set by the AEC governing radioactive wastes does not protect the environment. He added the core-cooling system criteria set by the commission for nuclear power plants will not protect against poisoned drinking water in the event of a coolant failure.

Last Of Roadside Stands

by LYNN ASINOF

The last roadside vegetable stand in Wheeling lies nestled between two symbols of modern development — the flat-topped municipal building and Wickes Furniture Co.'s spacious new store.

Leafy green vegetables brighten the wooden stand that sports a painted sign in front that says, "Koeppen's." Although members of Andrew Koeppen's family have been farming and selling vegetables in Wheeling for 53 years, they have never owned the land they farm. Instead, they rent their fields from land owners in the area.

"We started with about 110 acres," said Mrs. Koeppen. "Now it's about 18 acres. Years ago we used to grow soybeans and larger stuff, but now it's just vegetables."

BIT BY BIT, property owners sold the land that the Koeppens used to farm, since real estate in Wheeling became more valuable. The fields now wrap around the municipal building, providing a striking contrast of the new and the old.

"We grow just about everything we sell," said 15-year-old Jane Koeppen. "This stuff over here isn't homegrown yet," she said, indicating a wooden table laden with fresh produce. "We have to wait for it to grow.

"We've had to cut down a lot," she added, "because we don't have that much land anymore."

The Koeppens have two large wooden tables at their stand. One displays the homegrown carrots, cabbage, beans, beets and other vegetables. The other is for produce that is not raised on the farm.

"We keep them separate to show which is homegrown," Mrs. Koeppen said. "Being truthful to your customers — that's the main thing."

She said most of the people who buy at their stand come from the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove area. "There are new customers, sure," she said. "But some go back 15, 20, 25 years."

THIS WEEKEND the Koeppens hope to start selling their most popular item, homegrown sweet corn. The corn is late this year because of the cold spring and rainy summer weather.

"We usually start selling the sweet corn around the 13th," Mrs. Koeppen said. "This year there is a late growing season."

Members of the Koeppen family farm the land and run the stand as well. Although there are only three Koeppens at home now, son Jerry helps out on the weekends. A daughter who lives in Michigan also comes to help out occasionally.

The roadside vegetable stand is open from 9 a.m. to about 8:30 p.m., seven days a week from July until the end of October. Although the vegetables change with the crop seasons, the hours don't, and the Koeppens close their stand only when the weather is bad.

Water Supply In Area Estimated

In 1970, Major Robert O. Atcher said an adequate amount of water can be provided for Schaumburg for at least 100 years because the village lies directly over a large underground lake.

The picture is bleak in Hoffman Estates with John Hossack, director of public works, saying the supply from village wells may be depleted in a little over 20 years.

Hossack told the Herald Thursday Hoffman Estates suffers a water table drop of 16 feet a year. "We are pumping in a 600 foot level now in our deep wells and perhaps the margin may change when we go deeper, but at present it looks as if in 20 years we will be looking to other water sources," said Hossack.

Atcher said beyond the underground lake source, a retention basin system can be created in Schaumburg's creek beds.

Atcher added the village was following recommendations of water study experts and Schaumburg will not have a water shortage.

County Wheel Tax Suit Goes To Court Today

Arguments are expected to be heard today in the class action suit challenging the constitutionality of Cook County's tax on vehicles owned by unincorporated area residents.

The suit was filed in April on behalf of the Prospect Heights Improvement Association and the Cook County School Bus Co., Inc. of unincorporated Elk Grove Township. The case has been continued several times since it was first filed.

The tax imposes yearly charges on all vehicles in unincorporated areas. Similar to municipal vehicle stickers, the tax is $10-$15 for cars and various rates for trucks.

THE SUIT contends the tax is unconstitutional because it imposes a charge on only a portion of the county's citizens. According to Edward Berman, attorney for the plaintiffs, "It is collected from a limited number of county citizens who get no additional benefit from paying it."

The revenue from the tax had been slated for the county general fund, but two weeks ago, Cook County Board Pres. George W. Dunne announced the revenue would go instead to the sheriff's department. Cook County Sheriff's police are responsible for patrolling unincorporated areas.

Dunne made the announcement after listening to protests over the tax from a group of residents from Rich, Thornton, Bloom and Bremen townships.

One of the grounds for the suit was that while money was being collected from only some of the citizens, it would be used for all the citizens. Berman said Dunne's announcement would have no effect on the strength of his case. He did say, however, that the state's attorney plans to introduce Dunne's announcement as avidence on behalf of the county.

Last Of Roadside Stands

by LYNN ASINOF

The last roadside vegetable stand in Wheeling lies nestled between two symbols of modern development — the flat-topped municipal building and Wickes Furniture Co.'s spacious new store.

Leafy green vegetables brighten the wooden stand that sports a painted sign in front that says, "Koeppen's." Although members of Andrew Koeppen's family have been farming and selling vegetables in Wheeling for 53 years, they have never owned the land they farm. Instead, they rent their fields from land owners in the area.

"We started with about 110 acres," said Mrs. Koeppen. "Now it's about 18 acres. Years ago we used to grow soybeans and larger stuff, but now it's just vegetables."

BIT BY BIT, property owners sold the land that the Koeppens used to farm, since real estate in Wheeling became more valuable. The fields now wrap around the municipal building, providing a striking contrast of the new and the old.

"We grow just about everything we sell," said 15-year-old Jane Koeppen. "This stuff over here isn't homegrown yet," she said, indicating a wooden table laden with fresh produce. "We have to wait for it to grow.

"We've had to cut down a lot," she added, "because we don't have that much land anymore."

The Koeppens have two large wooden tables at their stand. One displays the homegrown carrots, cabbage, beans, beets and other vegetables. The other is for produce that is not raised on the farm.

"We keep them separate to show which is homegrown," Mrs. Koeppen said. "Being truthful to your customers — that's the main thing."

She said most of the people who buy at their stand come from the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove area. "There are new customers, sure," she said. "But some go back 15, 20, 25 years."

THIS WEEKEND the Koeppens hope to start selling their most popular item, homegrown sweet corn. The corn is late this year because of the cold spring and rainy summer weather.

'We usually start selling the sweet corn around the 13th," Mrs. Koeppen said. 'This year there is a late growing season."

Members of the Koeppen family farm the land and run the stand as well. Although there are only three Koeppens at home now, son Jerry helps out on the weekends. A daughter who lives in Michigan also comes to help out occasionally.

The roadside vegetable stand is open from 9 a.m. to about 8:30 p.m., seven days a week from July until the end of October. Although the vegetables change with the crop seasons, the hours don't, and the Koeppens close their stand only when the weather is bad.

Water Supply In Area Estimated

In 1970, Major Robert O. Atcher said an adequate amount of water can be provided for Schaumburg for at least 100 years because the village lies directly over a large underground lake.

The picture is bleak in Hoffman Estates with John Hossack, director of public works, saying the supply from village wells may be depleted in a little over 20 years.

Hossack told the Herald Thursday Hoffman Estates suffers a water table drop of 16 feet a year. "We are pumping in a 600 foot level now in our deep wells and perhaps the margin may change when we go deeper, but at present it looks as if in 20 years we will be looking to other water sources," said Hossack.

Atcher said beyond the underground lake source, a retention basin system can be created in Schaumburg's creek beds.

Atcher added the village was following recommendations of water study experts and Schaumburg will not have a water shortage.

County Wheel Tax Suit Goes To Court Today

Arguments are expected to be heard today in the class action suit challenging the constitutionality of Cook County's tax on vehicles owned by unincorporated area residents.

The suit was filed in April on behalf of the Prospect Heights Improvement Association and the Cook County School Bus Co., Inc. of unincorporated Elk Grove Township. The case has been continued several times since it was first filed.

The tax imposes yearly charges on all vehicles in unincorporated areas. Similar to municipal vehicle stickers, the tax is $10-$15 for cars and various rates for trucks.

THE SUIT contends the tax is unconstitutional because it imposes a charge on only a portion of the county's citizens. According to Edward Berman, attorney for the plaintiffs, "It is collected from a limited number of county citizens who get no additional benefit from paying it."

The revenue from the tax had been slated for the county general fund, but two weeks ago, Cook County Board Pres. George W. Dunne announced the revenue would go instead to the sheriff's department. Cook County Sheriff's police are responsible for patrolling unincorporated areas.

Dunne made the announcement after listening to protests over the tax from a group of residents from Rich, Thornton, Bloom and Bremen townships.

One of the grounds for the suit was that while money was being collected from only some of the citizens, it would be used for all the citizens. Berman said Dunne's announcement would have no effect on the strength of his case. He did say, however, that the state's attorney plans to introduce Dunne's announcement as avidence on behalf of the county.

For Minority Groups In Suburbs, 'It's Catch-Up Time'

by DOUG RAY

"We're going to scratch the score until Mercurochrome won't cure it."

The strategy of the newly formed suburban chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) comes from the lips of Clyde Brooks, a small black man from Elk Grove Village.

For Brooks and his family, the suburban chapter was a long time coming. Seven years ago they broke the racial barrier by moving into that village.

"I've been through all this overt racism, isolation and harassment," he said, and outlined the suburban SCLC's goal as to prevent the same problems from being perpetuated on other minorities living in the Northwest suburbs.

During the last three months, the SCLC has been "scratching," attempting to draw the blood of racism from the suburbs. The next step, Brooks said, is to attack the pocketbook of businesses, municipalities and individuals.

Now under way is an SCLC study of every Northwest suburban community, outling the educational programs, housing provisions and employment opportunities for blacks and other minorities. Brooks said the federal government will provide an initial punch to provide minority opportunities where they are lacking.

"COMMUNITIES here have been resistant," Brooks said. "Take a look at the police departments, the fire departments. . . blacks aren't represented. According to federal laws they must abide by the Civil Rights Act in hiring."

The organization is counting on that long arm in Washington to require more minority opportunities. Brooks is optimistic because it was a federal branch that helped him move into Elk Grove Village.

"We went to the subdivision and were looking for houses," he recalls. "But it seemed there weren't any left for us."

A letter to the Federal Housing Administration shortly cleared the air of alleged discrimination and the Brooks family became residents of the development where supposedly there were no homes available.

"This is catch-up time," he said. Don't continue to talk about being our brother's keeper, but where violations occur we must work to correct them. If federal funds are withdrawn, these villages will come across."

Brooks contends there are other less obvious ways to promote a black presence in suburbia. "Black products could be promoted. . . contract with black enterprises, municipalities could invest money in black banks. . . it's not just hiring."

BUT WHAT can the SCLC do to deliver action with a membership of only 200, of which 90 per cent is white?

It begins with an offer of help, according to Brooks. "We want to be a liaison to solve racial problems. If this is not possible, then we must draw the attention of the public and the federal government," he continued.

If the passive programs fail, the next step is to call for help from the suburban SCLC's "big brother," the Chicago SCLC, headed by the Rev. C. T. Vivian and with a membership of thousands, mostly black.

That was done two months ago in Hanover Park, where a cross was burned to protest a black family moving into a fashionable subdivision. The television cameras followed Rev. Vivian to a Schaumburg church and then to Hanover Park Village Hall, where news conferences were held to protest the racial act.

Action came in the form of the Hanover Park Human Relations Board, which is pledged to help minorities there. If the board does not function as agreed upon, Rev. Vivian, with Brooks at his side, likely will make another trip to the village, this time with placards and a Chicago boycott of chain stores also located in Hanover Park.

"YOU HAVE TO understand that suburbia isn't exposed to a heterogenous society and this promotes ignorance. The suburbs have to be prepared for a multi-racial society. . . it's coming and only a matter of time.

"Elk Grove, Des Plaines, Arlington Heights, all these communities won't be the same in 10 years." The suburbs must move now toward minority group acceptance."

Brooks says the contention that the SCLC "is a group of troublemakers" must be overcome.

"That's just another stereotype," he said.

Five slides or photos of the artist's work should accompany the application.

Harper College Officials Expect Overflow Of Cars

Harper College officials are making plans now to accommodate an anticipated overflow of 1,500 cars in the first part of the fall semester.

By using existing parking lots and grass areas, the college will be able to accomodate 4,000 cars. However, they expect approximately 5,500 cars will be driven to the college daily.

College construction plans had called for completion of new parking lots by September, but the schedule cannot be met. The delay is part of an overall delay in Phase II construction plans. Music and science facilities costing $3.3 million are also behind schedule.

A three-year state hold on college construction funds, a subsequent state review of construction plans and a more recent error in general contractor bidding have contributed to the delay.

According to Marc Savard, college administrator, several plans are being reviewed now to accomodate the excess cars. He said it is possible the college will rent parking space and shuttle students to the college.

"We want everyone to be advised of the problem before classes begin," said Savard. "And we urge everyone to cooperate and follow the security guards' instructions."

The college security force will advise motorists which lots are filled and direct them to available space.

Savard did not know when the new lots would be completed, but added the natural attrition in the beginning of the year will relieve the problem somewhat.

Sears Seeks To Subpoena 8 Newsmen

CHICAGO (UPI) — The prosecutor in the trial of Cook County State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan and 13 co-defendants Thursday filed motions to subpoena eight Chicago newsmen to testify in the case.

Special Prosecutor Barnabas Sears presumably would question the newsmen about a special televised re-enactment of the Dec. 4, 1969, weapons raid in which two Black Panther party leaders were killed.

The re-enactment was supervised by Hanrahan's office and allegedly gave a false account of some actions by the police raiding party.

Hanrahan and his co-defendants are charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice by covering up facts about the predawn raid on a West Side apartment in which Panther leaders Mark Clark and Fred Hampton died.

Sears sought subpoenas requiring testimony by Chicago Tribune columnist Robert Wiedrich; cameramen Charles Marshall and Edward Kaits of ABC-TV; WBBM-TV news director Al Mann and newsmen Harry Porterfield, Robert Berry of WBBM plus two unidentified WBBM-TV newsmen.

The request for subpoenas was presented to Cook County Circuit Court Judge Philip Romiti in compliance with a court policy requiring judicial approval of subpoenas for news media personnel.

Sears acted while the Hanrahan trial was in a one-day recess so attorneys in the case could participate in a legal seminar at Northwestern University.

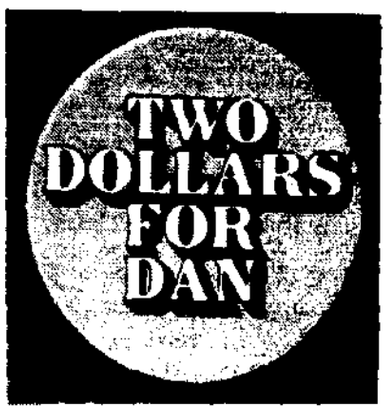
Dan Walker To Start Fund Raiser

Dan Walker, Democratic candidate for governor, will begin a two-day air tour of the state Monday to launch a unique fund-raising effort which his campaign organizers have labeled "Two Dollars for Dan."

Based on the principle of the "pyramid club" fad of the 1950s, the fund-raising effort will seek to elicit $2 contributions from at least 50,000 persons in an expanding chain-reaction effort.



The effort has been started with $2 contributions from eight Walker supporters, each of whom will hold living-room meetings with seven friends next week, with each asked to contribute $2.

The seven guests at each meeting will also be asked to conduct meetings with six friends; each person in the groups of six will be asked to invite five friends to a meeting, etc.

As the old pyramid club letters used to say, "If the chain remains unbroken," it would ultimately involve 109,600 contributors, for a total of $219,200. Target date for completion of the fund-raising campaign is Oct. 2.

Each contributor will be issued a two-inch lapel pin with the slogan, "Two Dollars for Dan."

JAMES J. BURNHAM, 850 Wellington Ave., Elk Grove Village, has been named organization chairman for the Regular Republican Organization of Elk Grove Township by township committeeman Carl R. Hansen.

Burnham "will assist me in maintaining a strong and active campaign team in the township," Hansen said.

Burnham was a member of the Elkhart, Ind., Republican Club from 1955 to 1959, when he moved to Evanston and joined the Republican Club there. He was a precinct captain in Evanston and worked in the 1960 campaign of President Nixon, and the 1964 campaign of Sen. Charles Percy and the 1970 campaign of Sen. Ralph Smith.

Hansen also announced the appointment of James E. Giesler, 902 E. Evergreen, Mount Prospect, as captain of Precinct No. 1 in Elk Grove Township.

Soviets Give Awards For Unfreedom Of Press

by DAVID NAGY

MOSCOW (UPI)—You can read it in the newspaper: unfreedom of the press is a tradition the Soviets cherish. They give journalism awards for it.

Pravda, the flagship newspaper of the Soviet Communist Party, won the Order of the October Revolution on the recent occasion of its 60th birthday for its performance "as a militant assistant of the Communist Party."

The giants of the Soviet media are quite candid about defining their job. They do it each year when they mark "National Press Day" in May. Says Pravda: "It is the duty of the mass propaganda media to ensure that the ideals of the Party and total opposition to any manifestations of bourgeois ideology become a matter of life and honor to everyone."

Says Izvestia, the daily beacon of Premier Alexei N. Kosygin's government: "All the mass media are a mighty weapon for the Party to use in the tremendous job . . . of shaping the new man."

THE JOB OF shaping the new man in his views of the world is aided by the banishment of any competing news source.

No foreign, non-Communist newspapers or magazines are allowed to circulate in the Soviet Union. Even the controlled journals of the Soviet bloc states are swept under the counter if they print bad news, as was the case with Poland's papers when they reported the riots that toppled Wladislaw Gomulka in December, 1970.

Only the Russian-language broadcasts of the Voice of America, the British Broadcasting Corporation and similar radio stations break the armor, but the Soviets jam them and only citizens with short-wave sets can hear what filters through.

The result, for most Soviet citizens, is a picture of a restive and riotous outside world crumbling approximately — if somewhat stubbornly — according to Karl Marx's game plan.

Soviet publications also say there is no such thing as a free press in the West. The general explanation is that the financiers who run western nations also boss and control the media.

One Russian journalism textbook puts an even finer point upon it, for students who are accustomed to understanding things in terms of exactly which Soviet agency controls which publication.

IT SAYS UNITED Press International speaks for the U.S. Congress, the Associated Press represents the State Department and the New York Times is "the semi-official newspaper" of the White House.

This approach runs into bumps every day, when the Soviet press quotes the U.S. press as its source for criticisms of U.S. policies. The Soviets ignored the contradiction until the Pentagon Papers came along, then, ideology produced a rationale. Moscow's media gave major, daily publicity to the Pentagon Papers and their revelations of secret U.S. policy in Vietnam, reprinting blocks of material from U.S. papers and finally publishing their own book from this material.

When that book was published, it was accompanied by an explanation of how the controlled U.S. press could have hatched such a scandal as the Pentagon Papers.

"What is involved here is not freedom of the bourgeois press," the Tass news agency said. "What is involved here is a complex political struggle among the U.S. ruling circles, which became aggravated because of the impasse which U.S. policy has reached in Southeast Asia.

"A NUMBER of influential organs of the U.S. bourgeois press, supported in secret by the powerful economic forces, dared to defy the government by publishing the secret documents."

The reason for that defiance, Tass said, was this: Everyone knows, or ought to know, that the big U.S. press lords support the Vietnam war and hate to see President Nixon end it.

Dan Walker To Start Fund Raiser

Dan Walker, Democratic candidate for governor, will begin a two-day air tour of the state Monday to launch a unique fund-raising effort which his campaign organizers have labeled "Two Dollars for Dan."

Based on the principle of the "pyramid club" fad of the 1950s, the fund-raising effort will seek to elicit $2 contributions from at least 50,000 persons in an expanding chain-reaction effort.

The effort has been started with $2 contributions from eight Walker supporters, each of whom will hold living-room meetings with seven friends next week, with each asked to contribute $2.

The seven guests at each meeting will also be asked to conduct meetings with six friends; each person in the groups of six will be asked to invite five friends to a meeting, etc.

As the old pyramid club letters used to say, "If the chain remains unbroken," it would ultimately involve 109,600 contributors, for a total of $219,200. Target date for completion of the fund-raising campaign is Oct. 2.

Each contributor will be issued a two-inch lapel pin with the slogan, "Two Dollars for Dan."

JAMES J. BURNHAM, 850 Wellington Ave., Elk Grove Village, has been named organization chairman for the Regular Republican Organization of Elk Grove Township by township committeeman Carl R. Hansen.

Burnham "will assist me in maintaining a strong and active campaign team in the township," Hansen said.

Burnham was a member of the Elkhart, Ind., Republican Club from 1955 to 1959, when he moved to Evanston and joined the Republican Club there. He was a precinct captain in Evanston and worked in the 1960 campaign of President Nixon, and the 1964 campaign of Sen. Charles Percy and the 1970 campaign of Sen. Ralph Smith.

Hansen also announced the appointment of James E. Giesler, 902 E. Evergreen, Mount Prospect, as captain of Precinct No. 1 in Elk Grove Township.

His Tears Won't Replace Stolen Bike

by BOB STRAWN

Glen is not a typical teenager.

He is a friendly boy who spends a great deal of his time riding a large three-wheel bicycle on the driveway in front of his Rolling Meadows home. He is also retarded.

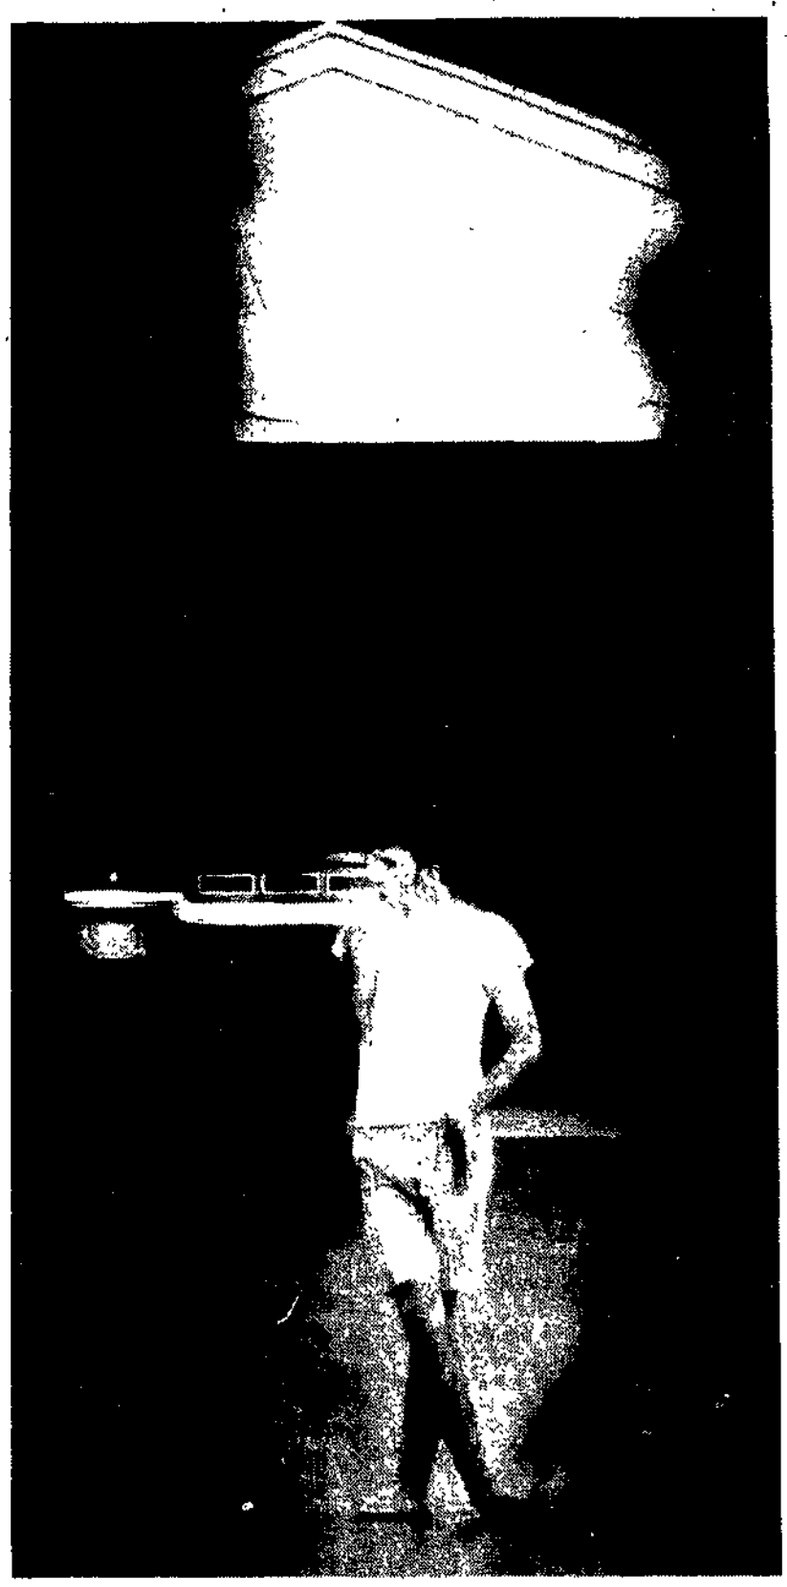
He frequently stops by the curb and waves at passing automobiles. He loves the summer because he can spend all the time he wants outdoors on his bike. That is, he could until Wednesday.

Wednesday morning the bike was stolen from his garage.

He spent most of the day in tears. When he wasn't crying, he would wander down the curb and look up and down the street hoping to see the three-wheeler. No longer does he wave at passing automobiles.

His mother told Rolling Meadows police that the bike was taken from their garage at about 11 a.m. Neighbors said they did not see the theft.

Glen had the bike for five years. It was his favorite thing in the whole world. He doesn't understand why someone would take it.



Career Program Signup Slated At Harper College

Students interested in enrolling in any of five new career programs at Harper College may call now for a preregistration appointment.

The new programs will be offered in the areas of air conditioning and refrigeration, medical technology, food service management, medical office assistance and legal technology. Students should call 359-4200, ext. 235, to make an appointment for preregistration, which is being held at the college between Aug. 1 and 4.

The legal technology program is the first of its kind to be developed at an Illinois Community College. The program, which will prepare students for employment as assistants to lawyers, offers a two-year associate degree or one-year certificate.

STUDENTS TAKING the medical technology program will be trained for employment as a medical office assistant or medical secretary in a physician's office, clinic or hospital. The program offers both a two-year associate degree and a 23-semester hour transcription certificate.

Also offered for the first time will be a certificate program in food service management. The evening program will supplement the associate degree program in food service management in operation since fall, 1969. After completion of the 15 credit hour program, students may continue to earn a degree. Graduates of the degree program will be qualified to work as food production supervisors, management trainees and small unit managers.

In response to community interest, the college is launching a pilot program to train students as medical laboratory technicians and operating room technicians. The two-year program prepares the student to take a written examination given by the board of registry of the American Society of Clinical Pathologists. Northwest Community Hospital and Alexian Brothers Medical Center will provide laboratory facilities for the program and share costs.

Another new two-year associate degree program will be offered in the area of air conditioning and refrigeration. Students will be trained to repair and maintain cooling equipment.

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — My husband has poor circulation in both legs but he is not a diabetic and the doctor wants to replace sections of the artery with plastic tubing. He says it is a simple operation. I have heard of one case where the operation was performed on one leg, and the other leg had to be amputated several weeks later. Was this amputation related to the artery replacement in the opposite leg?

Dear Reader — This type of operation has been performed on literally thousands of people at numerous medical centers and it has been a very successful operation. The plastic tubing is a synthetic material, and actually new cells grow through it and provide even a new lining of cells in the tube exactly similar to the cells that lined the original artery. The forerunner of this operation was replacing diseased sections of the arteries with artery grafts obtained from other people. Interestingly enough, these human artery grafts were not nearly as successful as the subsequent synthetic grafts have been. In properly selected cases I strongly recommend this operation.

The person who will do well with such an operation must have good open blood vessels below the blocked area that's going to be replaced. If the circulation in the foot and lower leg for example is bad because the arteries there are already blocked and obstructed, then putting in a graft higher up in the artery will not do any good. The whole idea is to replace a blocked area of the artery with an open tube which will eventually become a new artery. The operation isn't even too difficult under skilled hands.

I would imagine that the person you mentioned lost his leg because the artery was so badly obstructed in the entire leg that there wasn't ehough circulation. This wouldn't have anything to do with the replacement of the blocked artery in the other leg. Again we see the importance of fatty deposits in the arteries. Your husband's problem is the exact same process that affects the arteries in the heart to cause heart attacks or the arteries in the brain to cause strokes.

INDIVIDUALS who are prone to having fatty deposits in their arteries because of eating too much of the wrong kind of food, not getting enough exercise and smoking too many cigarettes can have a lot of things happen to them besides a heart attack. It includes strokes, senile mental changes, poor circulation to the legs, and in men, even poor circulation to some sexual organs leading to incapacitation in that area. You would think that with this long list of things that fatty deposits in the arteries do to people there would be greater willingness by people to adjust their lives to prevent this vast array of medical disorders.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

The only thing that can be said in favor of South's bidding was that he wanted to play the hand.

He did have a nice two-suiter but his hand was far stronger in support of his partner's rebid diamond suit and his real choice of bids should have been between a conservative five diamonds or an optimistic six.

Only a heart lead can beat six diamonds; no lead can bother a five contract.

West opened the king of clubs and continued the suit. South ruffed and studied the hand very carefully before leading to the third trick.

Then he came up with a winning safety play. He led a low trump!

East was on lead and could do nothing to keep South from taking the rest of the tricks. A third club would be ruffed in dummy; a heart, diamond or trump would be won; trumps would be drawn and dummy's diamond suit would be all winners.

Suppose South disdained the safety play and played out his three high trumps?

East would be left with a high trump. If South ran off diamonds East would simply ruff the third diamond lead and leave South with three losing hearts. If South led last trump East would win and the defense would run the rest of the clubs.

Climate Change Is Noted

NEW YORK (UPI)—Those weather scientists who anticipate the coming of another ice age connect this month's record low temperatures in the eastern United States with a long-term climate change on Baffin Island where massive new glaciers may be forming.

This island is a land mass in the eastern Canadian arctic 1,000 miles long, of more than 200,000 square miles, and with elevations up to 6,000 feet. The Canadian government maintains eight weather stations there because its weather is prognostic of weather elsewhere.

The accumulated records of those stations have been put through a fine analysis by R. S. Bradley and G. H. Miller of the Institute of Arctic and Alpine Research at the University of Colorado, which documents a climate change that set in around 1960 and continues into the 1970's.

Winters (September through May) are the accumulation seasons of snow and ice. Summers (June through August) are the melting and run-off season.

DURING THE 1960's there was a consistent drop in mean summer temperatures, meaning less melting and run-off. There was also a consistent rise in mean winter temperatures but it was accompanied by consistent increases in precipitation, meaning more snow and ice.

Bradley and Miller made field trips through Baffin Island in 1969 and again last year and confirmed the implication of their analysis. They found permanent snow banks in areas which in 1960 had been snow free. Other snow banks had increased greatly in size and large areas of ground once covered by plant life were buried.

Small lakes are now ice-covered the year round which in 1960 and before were open water in summers. Many of them, Bradley and Miller reported to the international science journal, "Nature," are accumulating ice due to consistent winter precipitation increases in excess of summer melts.

THEY FOUND TWO incipient glaciers in places which were snow-free in 1969. Glacier formation is not an immediate result of climate change, they said, but a delayed effect. Climate changes of the 1960's could accelerate glacier formation and growth in the 70's.

It may be Baffin Island climate was influenced by a replacing of cold surface water by warmer water in the central northern Pacific Ocean in 1961, they suggested. This abrupt water temperature change could influence atmospheric pressure paterns for the entire northern hemisphere. Baffin Island's geographic position makes it a sensitive barometer of the results of large-scale change in "these ocean-atmosphere interactions."

Thomas McGuire To Be Administrator

Law Enforcement Facility Slated

A training facility for law enforcement officers in Northeastern Illinois will be established effective Monday by the Police Training Institute of the University of Illinois Division of University Extension.

The institute has been awarded a $397,414 grant by the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission to finance the first year of a comprehensive five-year plan to expand operations and services. The commission, in turn, has received funding support for the program from the Federal Law Enforcement assistance Administration of the US Department of Justice.

Asst. Prof. Thomas F. McGuire of the institute faculty will be administrator of the new facility. He holds both bachelor's and doctor of jurisprudence degrees from Indiana University, and his law enforcement experience includes service as a patrolman, chief of police, and federal agent.

The facility will be temporarily located on the campus of Illinois Benedictine College, Lisle.

In the first year of operation, the educational program will include nine six-week basic police training courses and approximately 14 specialized training courses one to two weeks long.

Probable courses to be offered on the early schedule, in addition to the basic course of recruits new to the law enforcement profession, will include Police Supervision; Police Management; Training for Youth officers; Law for Police; Criminal Investigation, and others.

Prof. Charles R. Taylor, director, University of Illinois Police Training Institute, estimates that 554 law officers will receive training through the new Northeastern Illinois facility during that initial year. Such a program would involve a total of 2,224 student weeks and 3,580 instructor hours.

The facility is expected to service the training needs of municipal and county law enforcement officers in 10 counties: Winnebago, Boone, McHenry, Lake, DeKalb, Kane, Cook, DuPage, Kendall, and Will.

The Northeastern Illinois Project will be principally a resident facility, with overnight accommodations for the participating officers. The U. of I. Police Training Institute will lease the third floor of one of Illinois Benedictine College's residence halls for men, as well as classrooms and offices.

Since the Urbana-Champaign program of the U. of I. Police Training Institute already is operating at overflow capacity, with sizable waiting lists for practically all courses, the new facility in Northeastern Illinois will not cut down on the size of the existing operation.

It will, however, allow greater numbers of officers to be given instruction, and will provide increased convenience for those attending classes at the new facility, Prof. Taylor explained.

A staff of about 15 persons will be needed to operate the program in Northeastern Illinois. These will include an account and records manager, a coordinator of program resources, 10 academic faculty instructors, and three office workers.

Establishment of the new facility is one of three programs which will be put into effect as the Police Training Facility expands its service to the State, according to Prof. Taylor and Dean Stanley C. Robinson, University of Illinois Division of University Extension.

The other two, also financed principally by the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission, again partially through use of federal funds, will allow enhanced and enlarged emphasis on Police-Community Relations training throughout the state, and revision and up-dating of police training curricula.

Capital Punishment Backed

'Crime Encourages Fear'

I had an uncle whose Collie dog, Tippie, was gentle and loving and loved by all That dog was the apple of my uncle's eye. His neighbor was a chicken farmer. One morning, he discovered feathers and blood in the chicken yard. At first he thought a fox was the culprit but as time went on more chickens were slaughtered in the night. One morning my uncle discovered blood stains on Tippie's mouth and mane. He had stolen away in the night and snuck back at dawn. Tippie was a killer. My uncle really loved Tippie but he shot him and repaid the farmer his loss. Was this "cruel and unusual punishment?"

If a horse turns killer they shoot him too, so that he cannot continue killing. When a lion or tiger stalks a native village, the villagers will not rest until the killer is killed, himself. Is that "cruel and unusual punishment?"

What about the human "animals" that stalk our cities and kill people? They are just as beastly! They don't care who they hurt and delight in their evil, defying God's Command, "THOU SHALT NOT KILL!" Did Jose Torres think that stabbing Patricia Heinan to death was "cruel and unusual?" Did Richard Speck think that?

Why are these sub-humans being protected and coddled by society when it is that very society which they hate and attempt to destroy? Why should they get "life" sentences, when they are handing out "death" sentences to the innocent victims who happen to cross their paths?

No wonder people own hand guns.

Who isn't afraid these days?

It's Time Public Gets Information

I have been following the "negotiations" of teachers and the high school board of Dist. 211, Palatine. It's about time that the public was informed about the irresponsible actions of this board

Actually, in the beginning as a taxpayer I had some thought that this might be a case of teachers being greedy; however, the facts demonstrate a very reasonable teacher position. For example the teachers suggested that the board study a proposal to lower class size for low ability students. Obviously, these kids need all the help they can get a reasonable proposal. The board's answer "The community would be unhappy with the trend of lower class size for low ability students. It is discriminatory and useless." Does the community — parents of children who dearly need extra help — agree with this high-handed board statement?

The teachers also ask for moderate salary increases. The board in response threatens to freeze teachers salaries for three years This is not the middle ages Board members who act like all-powerful spoiled princes will only fail their community, and alienate their employees

Student Blasts Candidates

I would like to comment on this thing we laughingly call politics. To me, a high school student, it's all very time consuming and crazy. All these people running around pledging all sorts of things and everybody watching them fondly calling themselves Republicans and Democrats. I don't see what difference it makes what you are. If you're going to vote, why be stuck with three guys to choose from when you could have six, one you probably liked better any way. Besides, they all have one thing in common, they're all money grabbing liars. It's all very nice electing this guy president because he promises to get us out of the war, or get rid of a certain housing tax bill, but not only are these promises practically hollow, but the fact is he has to ask congress to pass it. That is IF he asks. I'm really glad I'm not old enough to vote, it's a rat race. It's very patriotic, of course, but I just can't see all the joy of taking time out of your day to vote for either a man in a wheel chair (whom we all feel quite sorry for), a man who promises us out of Viet Nam in 90 days (sure), or re-elect our dear Mr. Nixon who is still working on his promises of four years ago. I think our last president who wasn't out for money and/or fame was Teddy Roosevelt. Thank you for letting me express my opinion

She Lauds Cab Service

Palatine Cab Co. out of business? It's no wonder!

I've lived in Palatine for one and a half years. I've always used Palatine Cab and had quick courteous service while Mickey was there. I had become acquainted with the dispatcher from using the cab so often. She was always friendly and concerned about getting your cab right when you needed it.

Last week I called Palatine Cab to ask a favor. I had three sick children and was sick myself and couldn't get out to get groceries and medicine. I had made an order at a small market and asked if they could have a cab pick them up and deliver them to my home. The man said no. I then asked if he knew of another cab in Palatine. Again he said no. Not knowing who to call, I called Information. They gave me A-1 Cab in Palatine I called them and guess who answered? None other than the sweet lady that used to work for Palatine Cab — Mickey. I was really relieved. I knew she could help me. I told her my problem. She had a cab to me in five minutes. He picked up my order and brought it right to my door That's service! Hurray for A-1 Cab Co. and Mickey, because they are.

Irked By Oilgram

I am getting a little fed up by reading the propaganda you publish as reported by "Platt's Oilgram." I don't know what connection you have with this publication, but their only interest seems to be in getting the retail price of gas up in price.

We aren't getting any bargains in the Arlington Heights area as you would like us to believe. The so-called "normal prices" are like list prices on an automobile or an electric appliance.. They are the prices the producer would like to sell.

The going price for standard grade gas in the Arlington Heights area has been 29 to 32 cents for some time. If you go to Indiana-Illinois line on U. S 30, you will find it is 26 to 29 cents and has been for the last five years..

I just returned from Kansas City and the low price is 25 9 there. All across I-70 in Missouri it is no higher than 29.9. Last February it was 25 to 29 cents from here to Florida in most states

I think the Herald is doing its readers an injustice by printing the Platt Oilgram propaganda. You might do better to report them to the Federal Trade Commission for collusion in attempting to increase prices

I suggest Lea Tonkin drive around to find out what the price of gas really is in the area.

P W. Splittorff
Arlington Heights

Editor's Note: The Platt's Oilgram publication, a division of McGraw-Hill Co., surveys the daily ups and downs in sales and prices for the petroleum industry. It simply reports the charges suggested by retailers and the actual price charged, on the average, for major metropolitan areas. Variations do exist within any market area in the price an independent retailer chooses to set for his goods and services..

'Keep Parents At Poolside'

In regard to article on Stan Pace.

I disagree with his statement "biggest problem is mothers who hang over fences."

I've found working with Brownies that I have best results if the parents are in the program somewhere. Either as a listener, a helper or a follow up at home.

Children are children not adults and used to having a member of the family around. And even in some places the law states they should be.

I'm not saying they should be handheld, but the parents' money pays for the lessons and at times we're supposed to try and help follow through later. It's helpful to know what to follow through with. And as there are usually others at home, they can in a way be better prepared for their lessons to come.

The pool really looks nice this year and the children are enjoying the slides. Hopefully best changes will keep on coming.

Diane Peterson
Rolling Meadows

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Stan Pace, Rolling Meadows Park District aquatic director, was quoted in the Rolling Meadows Herald: "The biggest problem now (with the learn-to-swim clsses) is the mothers." He said he'd prefer to have the mothers leave, rather than remaining at the Rolling Meadows pool to watch their children.

Reader Criticizes Richard Cowen

Recognizing Richard A. Cowen as the political puppet of the area Republican Party and noting his improper handling of issues from the leadership chair leaves much to be desired, his believe that his remarks that "the Republican Party reformed itself long ago and has been a party of the OPEN DOOR for a long time" is to be REFUTED locally, and in Illinois

Mr Cowen, as Deputy Republican County Chairman, should reveal the OPEN Door policy I know an individual that carried a Republican Precinct Captain's badge for over five glorious years, submitted his credentials to Vic Smith, the Illinois Republican chief in Springfield for candidate consideration, almost denied the opportunity to address the local Republican organization, manipulated out of the organizational rejection or acceptance vote and still managed to gain considerable support of state Republican county organizations' The open door birthplace of the Republican Party is Ripon, Wisconson. The closed door Republican birthplace is ILLINOIS, where, on Nov. 7 the voters will acknowledge their swinging door votes so evident in the primaries.

Hasbrook Lauds Picnic Effort

On July 4th, the Hasbrook Civic Association held its traditional annual picnic at Hasbrook Park. In past years, this affair had been strictly a civic association activity. This year, however, we asked the Arlington Heights Park District to cosponsor with us and called upon the services of two center directors, Tom Richardson and Dan Grey We are all in unanimous agreement that this was one of the most successful picnics ever held, mainly because of the outstanding cooperation and effort they put forth in our behalf. Their enthusiasm, initiative, imagination and hard work cannot be too highly praised

Another outstanding "first" for us was a parachute jump into Hasbrook Park by Officer Scott Rudolph of the Arlington Heights Police Dept After the jump Officer Rudolph made a fine presentation on safety to all spectators in his capacity as "Officer Friendly."

Another highlight of our celebration was a fine exhibition by the Arlington Heights Fire Dept.

The Hasbrook Civic Association wants to publicly thank these people and their organization for their contributions and efforts in our behalf. The Village of Arlington Heights and the Park District certainly enhanced their reputations and their public image by their services on July 4th. It was a memorable occasion

Percy's Praised

I am sorry to see that Mr. Michael Torres feels that way (Fence Post, July 17) about our Honorable Charles H. Percy.

We were rejected by FHA, due to an "odd" ruling they have. We promptly wrote to the Senator . . . and promptly received a reply . . . and soon we will be in our new home.

Mr. Torres, kindly don't count your chickens until they're hatched.

Thank You

We were delighted with the article written by Monica Wilch regarding our Consumer Fraud Division's Mobile Unit, which was stationed at Randhurst on June 29th.

Miss Wilch certainly obtained much valuable information during her interview with Miss Mitchell, and she did an excellent job in reporting the facts in a very interesting and readable manner

Again we want to say thank you very much.

Wants 'No Easy Amnesty'

Why grant amnesty to those who chose to give up their country for their deep-rooted "ideals?" They found little else to keep them in the United States when they decided of their own free will to leave. Evidently the grass was not found to be greener in Canada where the boys are now talking about a desire to come back Why? The policies of this country that convinced them to relocate have not changed. The past four administrations have failed in their duty. Most all people will agree that war is rotten, but bear in mind that it is wrse for those who refuse to retreat when every spineless politician is weeping for the lily-livered pansies in Canada that refused to accept the responsibility of citizenship. that's a good way to breed contempt amongst our youth for any decent patriotism or loyalty to our country.

To give up one's country should not be as simple as crossing a border back and forth at one's desire and with the blessings of congressmmen and senators. These "statesmen" are required to "protect, serve and defend" the Constitution when they take office and yet they are wiling to undermine the necessity for national defense by crying for the deserters. Herbert Spencer said in the 19th century, "The ultimate result of shielding men from the effects of folly is to fill the world with fools." Times haven't changed a bit.

Granted, there are a lot of problems in this country, but it's the best country going, so don't forsake it. The best solution to any problem is to work within the framework of legality and justice to improve, not destroy, that which you have. Amnesty for the faint-hearted makes defense of one's country a bit absurd when you consider that the war is not yet over and the POWs have yet to eat a decent meal. General MacArthur once said, "The more warlike the spirit of the people, the less need for a large standing army, as in such a community every able-bodied man should be willing to fight on all occasions whenever the nation demands his services in the field."

There's no reason for getting mad at the ship and jumping overboard when it was the captain and his crew that ran it aground. The natives proved not too friendly in socialist Canada, I suppose. Hindsight is the reward for lack of foresight.

Capital Punishment Backed

'Crime Encourages Fear'

I had an uncle whose Collie dog, Tippie, was gentle and loving and loved by all. That dog was the apple of my uncle's eye. His neighbor was a chicken farmer. One morning, he discovered feathers and blood in the chicken yard. At first he thought a fox was the culprit but as time went on more chickens were slaughtered in the night. One morning my uncle discovered blood stains on Tippie's mouth and mane. He had stolen away in the night and snuck back at dawn. Tippie was a killer. My uncle really loved Tippie but he shot him and repaid the farmer his loss. Was this "cruel and unusual punishment?"

If a horse turns killer they shoot him too, so that he cannot continue killing. When a lion or tiger stalks a native village, the villagers will not rest until the killer is killed, himself. Is that "cruel and unusual punishment?"

What about the human "animals" that stalk our cities and kill people? They are just as beastly! They don't care who they hurt and delight in their evil, defying God's Command, "THOU SHALT NOT KILL!" Did Jose Torres think that stabbing Patricia Heinan to death was "cruel and unusual?" Did Richard Speck think that?

Why are these sub-humans being protected and coddled by society when it is that very society which they hate and attempt to destroy? Why should they get "life" sentences, when they are handing out "death" sentences to the innocent victims who happen to cross their paths?

No wonder people own hand guns.

Who isn't afraid these days?

It's Time Public Gets Information

I have been following the "negotiations" of teachers and the high school board of Dist. 211, Palatine. It's about time that the public was informed about the irresponsible actions of this board.

Actually, in the beginning as a taxpayer I had some thought that this might be a case of teachers being greedy; however, the facts demonstrate a very reasonable teacher position. For example, the teachers suggested that the board study a proposal to lower class size for low ability students. Obviously, these kids need all the help they can get a reasonable proposal. The board's answer: "The community would be unhappy with the trend of lower class size for low ability students. It is discriminatory and useless." Does the community — parents of children who dearly need extra help — agree with this high-handed board statement?

The teachers also ask for moderate salary increases. The board in response threatens to freeze teachers salaries for three years. This is not the middle ages. Board members who act like all-powerful spoiled princes will only fail their community, and alienate their employees.

Student Blasts Candidates

I would like to comment on this thing we laughingly call politics. To me, a high school student, it's all very time consuming and crazy. All these people running around pledging all sorts of things and everybody watching them fondly calling themselves Republicans and Democrats. I don't see what difference it makes what you are. If you're going to vote, why be stuck with three guys to choose from when you could have six, one you probably liked better any way. Besides, they all have one thing in common, they're all money grabbing liars. It's all very nice electing this guy president because he promises to get us out of the war, or get rid of a certain housing tax bill, but not only are these promises practically hollow, but the fact is he has to ask congress to pass it. That is IF he asks. I'm really glad I'm not old enough to vote, it's a rat race. It's very patriotic, of course, but I just can't see all the joy of taking time out of your day to vote for either a man in a wheel chair (whom we all feel quite sorry for), a man who promises us out of Viet Nam in 90 days (sure), or re-elect our dear Mr. Nixon who is still working on his promises of four years ago. I think our last president who wasn't out for money and/or fame was Teddy Roosevelt. Thank you for letting me express my opinion.

She Lauds Cab Service

Palatine Cab Co. out of business? It's no wonder!

I've lived in Palatine for one and a half years. I've always used Palatine Cab and had quick courteous service while Mickey was there. I had become acquainted with the dispatcher from using the cab so often. She was always friendly and concerned about getting your cab right when you needed it.

Last week I called Palatine Cab to ask a favor. I had three sick children and was sick myself and couldn't get out to get groceries and medicine. I had made an order at a small market and asked if they could have a cab pick them up and deliver them to my home. The man said no. I then asked if he knew of another cab in Palatine. Again he said no. Not knowing who to call, I called Information. They gave me A-1 Cab in Palatine. I called them and guess who answered? None other than the sweet lady that used to work for Palatine Cab — Mickey. I was really relieved. I knew she could help me. I told her my problem. She had a cab to me in five minutes. He picked up my order and brought it right to my door. That's service! Hurray for A-1 Cab Co. and Mickey, because they are.

Irked By Oilgram

I am getting a little fed up by reading the propaganda you publish as reported by "Platt's Oilgram." I don't know what connection you have with this publication, but their only interest seems to be in getting the retail price of gas up in price.

We aren't getting any bargains in the Arlington Heights area as you would like us to believe. The so-called "normal prices" are like list prices on an automobile or an electric appliance.. They are the prices the producer would like to sell.

The going price for standard grade gas in the Arlington Heights area has been 29 to 32 cents for some time. If you go to Indiana-Illinois line on U. S. 30, you will find it is 26 to 29 cents and has been for the last five years..

I just returned from Kansas City and the low price is 25.9 there. All across I-70 in Missouri it is no higher than 29.9. Last February it was 25 to 29 cents from here to Florida in most states.

I think the Herald is doing its readers an injustice by printing the Platt Oilgram propaganda. You might do better to report them to the Federal Trade Commission for collusion in attempting to increase prices.

I suggest Lea Tonkin drive around to find out what the price of gas really is in the area.

P. W. Splittorff
Arlington Heights

Editor's Note: The Platt's Oilgram publication, a division of McGraw-Hill Co., surveys the daily ups and downs in sales and prices for the petroleum industry. It simply reports the charges suggested by retailers and the actual price charged, on the average, for major metropolitan areas. Variations do exist within any market area in the price an independent retailer chooses to set for his goods and services..

'Keep Parents At Poolside'

In regard to article on Stan Pace.

I disagree with his statement "biggest problem is mothers who hang over fences."

I've found working with Brownies that I have best results if the parents are in the program somewhere. Either as a listener, a helper or a follow up at home.

Children are children not adults and used to having a member of the family around. And even in some places the law states they should be.

I'm not saying they should be handheld, but the parents' money pays for the lessons and at times we're supposed to try and help follow through later. It's helpful to know what to follow through with. And as there are usually others at home, they can in a way be better prepared for their lessons to come.

The pool really looks nice this year and the children are enjoying the slides. Hopefully best changes will keep on coming.

Diane Peterson
Rolling Meadows

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Stan Pace, Rolling Meadows Park District aquatic director, was quoted in the Rolling Meadows Herald: "The biggest problem now (with the learn-to-swim clsses) is the mothers." He said he'd prefer to have the mothers leave, rather than remaining at the Rolling Meadows pool to watch their children.

Reader Criticizes Richard Cowen

Recognizing Richard A. Cowen as the political puppet of the area Republican Party and noting his improper handling of issues from the leadership chair leaves much to be desired, his believe that his remarks that "the Republican Party reformed itself long ago and has been a party of the OPEN DOOR for a long time" is to be REFUTED locally, and in Illinois.

Mr. Cowen, as Deputy Republican County Chairman, should reveal the OPEN Door policy. I know an individual that carried a Republican Precinct Captain's badge for over five glorious years, submitted his credentials to Vic Smtih, the Illinois Republican chief in Springfield for candidate consideration, almost denied the opportunity to address the local Republican organization, manipulated out of the organizational rejection or acceptance vote and still managed to gain considerable support of state Republican county organizations! The open door birthplace of the Republican Party is Ripon, Wisconson. The closed door Republican birthplace is ILLINOIS, where, on Nov. 7 the voters will acknowledge their swinging door votes so evident in the primaries.

Hasbrook Lauds Picnic Effort

On July 4th, the Hasbrook Civic Association held its traditional annual picnic at Hasbrook Park. In past years, this affair had been strictly a civic association activity. This year, however, we asked the Arlington Heights Park District to cosponsor with us and called upon the services of two center directors, Tom Richardson and Dan Grey. We are all in unanimous agreement that this was one of the most successful picnics ever held, mainly because of the outstanding cooperation and effort they put forth in our behalf. Their enthusiasm, initiative, imagination and hard work cannot be too highly praised.

Another outstanding "first" for us was a parachute jump into Hasbrook Park by Officer Scott Rudolph of the Arlington Heights Police Dept. After the jump Officer Rudolph made a fine presentation on safety to all spectators in his capacity as "Officer Friendly."

Another highlight of our celebration was a fine exhibition by the Arlington Heights Fire Dept.

The Hasbrook Civic Association wants to publicly thank these people and their organization for their contributions and efforts in our behalf. The Village of Arlington Heights and the Park District certainly enhanced their reputations and their public image by their services on July 4th. It was a memorable occasion.

Wants 'No Easy Amnesty'

Why grant amnesty to those who chose to give up their country for their deep-rooted "ideals?" They found little else to keep them in the United States when they decided of their own free will to leave. Evidently the grass was not found to be greener in Canada where the boys are now talking about a desire to come back. Why? The policies of this country that convinced them to relocate have not changed. The past four administrations have failed in their duty. Most all people will agree that war is rotten, but bear in mind that it is wrse for those who refuse to retreat when every spineless politician is weeping for the lily-livered pansies in Canada that refused to accept the responsibility of citizenship. that's a good way to breed contempt amongst our youth for any decent patriotism or loyalty to our country.

To give up one's country should not be as simple as crossing a border back and forth at one's desire and with the blessings of congressmmen and senators. These "statesmen" are required to "protect, serve and defend" the Constitution when they take office and yet they are wiling to undermine the necessity for national defense by crying for the deserters. Herbert Spencer said in the 19th century, "The ultimate result of shielding men from the effects of folly is to fill the world with fools." Times haven't changed a bit.

Granted, there are a lot of problems in this country, but it's the best country going, so don't forsake it. The best solution to any problem is to work within the framework of legality and justice to improve, not destroy, that which you have. Amnesty for the faint-hearted makes defense of one's country a bit absurd when you consider that the war is not yet over and the POWs have yet to eat a decent meal. General MacArthur once said, "The more warlike the spirit of the people, the less need for a large standing army, as in such a community every able-bodied man should be willing to fight on all occasions whenever the nation demands his services in the field."

There's no reason for getting mad at the ship and jumping overboard when it was the captain and his crew that ran it aground. The natives proved not too friendly in socialist Canada, I suppose. Hindsight is the reward for lack of foresight.

The Lighter Side

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Reports that the United States has conducted cloud-seeding operations for military purposes in Southeast Asia have caused some concern in civilian weather circles.

In a letter to "The New York Times" this week, Paul Bock, professor of hydrology at the University of Connecticut, called the rainmaking effort "an unwanted precedent."

"It stimulates further development of other environmental weapons systems," he wrote.

To some extent I share this disquiet. Specifically, I fear it may spur the Soviet Union, China or some other world power to proceed with development of the dread snow bomb.

Sometimes called "the ultimate weapon," S-bombs, if perfected, would have the potential for paralyzing entire cities by causing unforecast snow to fall during the evening rush hour.

THUS FAR, the force of world opinion, which is aghast at the prospect of so inhumane a weapon, has been powerful enough to prevent construction of the S-bomb.

Meterological experts agree, however, that the S-bomb is technically feasible and that at least a half a dozen countries have the capacity for producing it.

The question is, how long will the voluntary restraints hold if military rainmaking continues?

That question has particular significance for the U S capital, which is especially vulnerable to snow

EVEN A snowfall from natural causes, duly predicted 24 hours in advance, causes panic in the streets, overloads the telephone circuits as loved ones frantically try to contact each other and brings all traffic to a standstill.

Whereupon, roving bands of salt freaks terrorize the populace by spreading tons of saline crystals all over the city

No imagination is required to visualize the horror that would ensue should a foreign power without warning dump a two or three-inch snow bomb upon Washington at the crucial 4:30 period when the disgorgement of bureaucrats is at its peak.

Suffice to say, the federal government would become immobilized for a protracted interval. Even the mere threat of such an attack could turn our nation into a pitiful, helpless giant.

With the era of "nuclear blackmail" on the wane, let us take no chances with "blizzard blackmail." It's not nice to fool Mother Nature.

C'mon, Bobby, Play Chess!

While the world chess championship apparently is going to be good for Bobby Fischer, at least financially, it is equally clear the antics of the U.S. player are affecting negatively the image of this country on world observers.

The primary objective of the championship series is not to foster better U.S.-Soviet relations, but certainly many hoped a byproduct would be realized in the form of increased good will throughout the world community, similar to that resulting from last year's ping-pong matches with China.

Fischer delayed the start of play in the first place for several days in a protest over money. When he finally was appeased he flew to Iceland where he caused further delay because he did not have his favorite chair.

The Brooklynite next staged a 35-minute protest during the first game last week by inspecting the hall for hidden cameras, contending that although he could not see or hear the electronic devices, the mere presence of the "evil eyes" distracted him.

Fischer subsequently resigned from that game and failed to appear for the next scheduled match, forfeiting in the process.

In response to Fischer's protest the game was moved backstage for Sunday's play, but the 29-year-old grandmaster kept the chess world guessing for 90 minutes before he appeared. Before he acquiesced, however, the Icelandic organizers were forced to break a $120,000 contract with a company which had obtained the film and television rights to the tournament.

Prior to his first move, Fischer launched still another objection to the presence of a hidden television camera relaying the moves to a paying audience in the main hall.

Finally he began to play and won the game the following day.

Some observers suggested, during that series of incidents, that Fischer is emotionally disturbed. On the contrary, it strikes us that Fischer may be trying to cause his opponent, Boris Spassky, to reach that state.

Most sports and games are won through a combination of skill, concentration and nerves. Chess, more so than any other, seems dependent on that triumvirate.

It is not inconceivable that Fischer's delaying tactics, quibbling and protests constitute well planned maneuvers designed to "psyche" Spassky out of his normal game.

According to chess experts, the Russian's moves in the third game may indicate Fischer has been successful in that aim.

The effect all this may be having on the game of chess is debatable. On the one hand it can be argued Fischer's antics degrade the game. Conversely, others feel the controversial American has brought life and personality to the game and its participants all over the world.

While that question will be answered only with the passage of time, it seems the time is appropriate for Fischer to stop his quibbling and get down to the task at hand.

There must come a time in every game for the psychological aspects to take a back seat to the actual playing.

We feel that time has come and hope Fischer will continue to devote his attention to playing chess and trying to win the championship.

Only then will the boos and jeering from the Icelandic audience, which accompanied his first victory, come to an end.

'Prosecutor Ed, Defendant Ed'

by ROGER CAPETTINI
Metropolitan Editor

It's interesting to note that "Defendant Ed" Hanrahan still takes time out to bad-mouth the judges in the Criminal Courts even though his political life is on the line in the same building.

And, as usual, his attacks on the judges are included in his mistitled "news releases" which are not news releases at all, but simply taxpayer-financed statements of opinion which constitute little more than campaign literature for "Candidate Ed."

One of the "releases" received here in July singles out Judge Robert J. Downing for criticism. "Prosecutor Ed" (who may have lapsed momentarily into "Defendant Ed") started the statement by conceding, "A verdict of not guilty should be returned in any case where the evidence does not prove the defendant's guilt." But, he continued, "Judges occasionally award not guilty verdicts 'on their own' when neither the evidence nor the law justifies that decision."

That's where Judge Downing comes in, according to "Judge Ed."

Here's the way "Prosecutor Ed" explains the story. He said a defendant, charged with nine counts of burglary, pleaded guilty in four cases and was sentenced by Judge Downing to three to nine years in prison.

Hanrahan's office, however, chose to prosecute the man on the other five charges. The evidence against him, according to "Prosecutor Ed," consisted of the man's fingerprints on the premises, an oral confession and eyewitness testimony.

"Nevertheless, Judge Downing found the defedant not guilty," cried "Judge Ed."

Quite an indictment — of the judge, that is. So much so, in fact, that it might cause a reasonable man to think there might — just might — be another side to the story.

Being the reasonable man I am, that's the way it struck me, so I decided to see how Judge Downing viewed the whole affair.

And, curiously enough, it turned out there is another version.

First, the defendant said in a pretrial conference he would plead guilty to the first four counts, but that he did not commit the other five burglaries. And that's the way he pleaded, even after he learned the judge was going to sentence him to three to nine years if he pleaded guilty to one or all nine of the charges.

Secondly, during the trials on two of the five counts, two policemen testified in regard to the oral confessions the man supposedly made at the time of his arrest, more than a year earlier.

The only trouble with that, Judge Downing noted, was that neither policeman ever made any mention of a confession when they filed their reports following the arrest.

The judge also noted in the court record that the policemen remembered, during the trials, many minor details they apparently didn't remember when they filed their reports, because those details were not mentioned there.

Judge Downing said that through their testimony it was obvious to him the police were harassing the man and were trying to clear up many unsolved burglaries with the arrest of the man for the four burglaries he later admitted in court. But the major factor influencing his decision, the judge said, came when the defendant took the witness stand and offered an alibi as to his whereabouts during the day and hours he allegedly was committing the burglaries. The man not only gave the name of the place he was working, but also the address, the pay he received and the names of at least one co-worker.

That testimony was given June 29. The trial then recessed until July 7. At that time, the judge said, he asked the assistant state's attorney if he was going to offer any evidence or testimony to contradict the alibi the man gave.

The assistant answered he was not. And he did not. He did not even try to contradict the man's alibi.

Now, if the prosecution cannot destroy an alibi, or indeed, even attempt to destroy it, it must be assumed the state could not do so.

In other words the man just may have been telling the truth. He just may have been working. He just may have been innocent of the charges.

And that possibility is in keeping with the first sentence of Hanrahan's statement — "A verdict of not guilty should be returned when the evidence does not prove the defendant's guilt."

Perhaps he doesn't read his "releases." Or perhaps he doesn't know what's happening in the courtrooms.

Either would be perfectly understandable. Being judge, prosecutor, candidate and defendant all at the same time must make for a very long day.

Wheeling Police: 'Politically Controlled'?

A few weeks ago I wondered, in a "Fence Post" letter, just what is developing in Wheeling Village Hall since Mr. James Stavros boasted that "we will do as we want."

At that time I thought the Police Department squeeze would begin in September in the event of Chief Horcher's retirement. Since then Mr. Horcher has become ill (from the pressures?). Since then the Director of Public Safety has continued in his created job which gives him direct control over the police and fire departments. Since then one patrolman has resigned, one sergeant has been suspended for three days for daring to ask to communicate with the village trustees to defend himself against their accusations and an "Acting Police Chief" Captain has been imported, from Heaven knows where or why, to try to fill Mr. Horcher's position during his illness.

One thing that, surprisingly, has not been questioned, but should be, is the way in which our Village Board appears to be playing fast and loose with taxpayers' money by allowing two expensive jobs of questionable necessity to be created; the Director of Public Safety, at no doubt considerably more than the $16,500 originally paid him as Administrative Assistant to the Manager ("He should be making more than the people he's directing", according to Manager Passolt) and the "Acting Police Chief" Captain at $18,000. If the manager job did not also include Finance Director, Zoning Administrator, and Director of Planning, then the Manager, assuming he knows his business, could be manager with an ordinary staff. This could also eliminate the need for an Administrative Assistant, as such.

It doesn't matter WHO originated the idea for Director of Public Safety for Mr. Stricker. At the time the new position was being promoted, Fire Chief Koeppen was assured by Trustee Bruhn that "the director's job would deal specifically with planning and paperwork and the actual running of the individual departments would remain the duty of the fire chief, police chief, and civil defense director" (Wheeling Herald, Feb. 1). According to this, how can Mr. Stricker suspend any one for anything? Does this "planning and paperwork" job also include disciplinary control over personnel? For an example of duplicity, see Ordinance 1176 creating the job and giving it much more power and authority than originally stated. In any event, I'm sure the job would never have become a reality without the approval of Mr. Stavros.

Now, about the "Acting Police Chief" Captain job. In most businesses, departments have a designated person to be "in charge" when the department head is absent. Didn't our Police Department have such a person who was "in charge," who already knows the work, the policies, the routines, and the employes? Why import an "acting chief" at $18,000 when there must be someone in the depatment with the training and experience who could pinch hit for Mr. Horcher? It just seems incredible that such a thing is necessary. Either the village government has more money than it knows what to do with or this is another move to gain more complete control over our police. I wouldn't be surprised to find that Peter Guttilla, our new "Acting Police Chief" Captain, was produced by Mr. Stavros for the job.

It is an insult to the intelligence of Wheeling citizens to think they will accept the protestations made with such wide-eyed innocence that "Mr. Stavros has nothing to do with the village hall." They remember the undenied statements made by Mr. Egan that there has been "only one trustee not elected by Stavros." They remember Mr. Stavros' constant attendance at Village Board meetings in the past. They remember his antics before, during, and after the last village election. For someone who has "nothing to do with village hall" his interest certainly seems unnatural.

Now, I wonder why this eagerness to control our Police Department. What are "they" trying to do to our village? We have been proud of our Police Department and hope we can continue to be proud. We don't want police administrators to be politically controlled puppets. We don't want our policemen browbeaten and not allowed to speak. This political meddling has gone too far.

Well, model airplanes today are alive, well and flying. In fact, starting Monday the Academy of Model Aeronautics (AMA) is sponsoring championships at the Glenview Naval Air Station.

TV's 'Experts'

Next to most singing TV commercials, my ulcers are violently activated by advertising in any form which uses "name" people (those in the public eye but not necessarily known by individual consumer). Examples: A prominent baseball or football player is portrayed as competent authority on merits of any product from foodstuffs through razor blades, shaving cream and all kinds of lotions; a TV personality is better than any doctor with respect to palatives, nostrums and quick-acting pain killers; stars of track, golf, swimming, bowling, boxing, boating, sailing, skiing or what have you have no par in excellent selection of clothing, recreational equipment, furniture or linens, tableware, autos and trucks, machinery — absolutely anything.

This rendeition to you is occasioned by my again seeing, for the umpteenth time this year, the warmed-over death countenance of Art Linkletter proclaiming, "You know me", and plugging health or hospital insurance. He is, to me, the most irksome of these insurance "experts", [illegible] alone in offering his god-given (intellect couldn't be credited) ability to properly appraise what you need in the way of insurance.

These two-bit health or Medicare-supplementary insurance firms have their multi-color insert ads in newspapers everywhere, urging "Don't delay—offer as this low premium must be withdrawn soon," and the offer continues year after year, at same price.

Of course one has to agree with what a well respected advertising executive said to me some years back: The advertiser of volume sale product will always key his advertising to people rated at eight-year-old discernment as to merit or advisability. Politicians use the same guide line. Did you note the display of "intelligence" in features, talk and actions of majority of those acting as delegates at the recent Miami presidential convention: I wouldn't entrust 90 per cent of them to haul my garbage.

So there you have it — I feel better, and hope you all do too.

C'mon, Bobby, Play Chess!

While the world chess championship apparently is going to be good for Bobby Fischer, at least financially, it is equally clear the antics of the U.S. player are affecting negatively the image of this country on world observers.

The primary objective of the championship series is not to foster better U.S.-Soviet relations, but certainly many hoped a byproduct would be realized in the form of increased good will throughout the world community, similar to that resulting from last year's ping-pong matches with China.

Fischer delayed the start of play in the first place for several days in a protest over money. When he finally was appeased he flew to Iceland where he caused further delay because he did not have his favorite chair.

The Brooklynite next staged a 35-minute protest during the first game last week by inspecting the hall for hidden cameras, contending that although he could not see or hear the electronic devices, the mere presence of the "evil eyes" distracted him.

Fischer subsequently resigned from that game and failed to appear for the next scheduled match, forfeiting in the process.

In response to Fischer's protest the game was moved backstage for Sunday's play, but the 29-year-old grandmaster kept the chess world guessing for 90 minutes before he appeared. Before he acquiesced, however, the Icelandic organizers were forced to break a $120,000 contract with a company which had obtained the film and television rights to the tournament.

Prior to his first move, Fischer launched still another objection to the presence of a hidden television camera relaying the moves to a paying audience in the main hall.

Finally he began to play and won the game the following day.

Some observers suggested, during that series of incidents, that Fischer is emotionally disturbed. On the contrary, it strikes us that Fischer may be trying to cause his opponent, Boris Spassky, to reach that state.

Most sports and games are won through a combination of skill, concentration and nerves. Chess, more so than any other, seems dependent on that triumvirate.

Credit Key To Communist-U.S. Trade

by LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you know where one of the Franklin Mint's silver medallions entitled "The Landing of St. Patrick in Ireland" can be bought, grab it.

Nobody knows eactly what the medallion, brought out at $15, is worth now.

"We simply can't buy them for love or money," says Gerald Rose of Harmer-Rooke & Co., New York dealer in coins and stamps.

A number of other artistic medallions and plates issued in limited editions by Franklin Mint and its competitor, Lincoln Mint, have appreciated sharply and many have not.

The business of commemorative medallions and plates is only about 10 years old in the United States, but it already is believed to have achieved a volume of better than $60 million a year.

LINCOLN MINT'S two silver plates done to original designs by Salvador Dali, the Easter Plate and "Unicorne Dionystique," which really represents Don Quixote, were brought out last year at $150. Today they are worth around $200, according to Keith Mervis of Carole Stupell, the fashionable New York silver shop. Franklin Mint's first Christmas silver plate, Norman Rockwell's "Bringing Home the Tree," brought out two years ago at $100, is valued at around $650 now, Mervis said.

Franklin's Mother's Day silver plate by Irene Spencer, issued a few weeks ago at $125, already is bringing $160 to $200 from collectors.

The most remarkable appreciation of all, Mervis said, is a transparent crystal plate brought out in 1965 at $35 by a firm in Paris called Lalique. Although it is not the work of a famous artist and merely shows two birds entwined in stylized flight, it's worth $1,000 today.

A porcelain plate in the British Spode style and commemorating the Shah of Iran's lavish jubilee celebration last year already has spurted from $125 to $180.

Except for the St. Patrick piece, the small silver medallions appreciate in value in complete series rather than as individual pieces, Rose of Harmer-Rooke said.

"Franklin Mint's bird series by Gilroy Roberts, which cost its subscribers about $550, is now worth more than $1,000. Individual numbers in this series have only gone up about 25 per cent."

COLLECTING PORCELAIN commemorative plates is an old custom in Europe, but the modern American industry started in the 1960s has stuck to silver so far. However, Franklin Mint plans a solid gold plate for early next year to sell initially at $2,200. It will be the first in a series called The American West and also will be issued in silver.

Both Franklin Mint and Lincoln Mint, as well as the dealers, say the keys to success in commemorative plates and medallions are to use only well-known artists, only new designs specifically for the sculptured medallion or the low relief plate, and the utmost precautions to see that editions are strictly limited and speculators are prevented from making quantity buys.

This means selling by mail to regular subscribers and through a limited number of top-flight retailers.

Franklin Mint also registers every piece it makes and requires retailers to register every sale with the national accounting firm of Price Waterhouse & Co. That way it can keep track of every piece, making detection of counterfeits easier.

Towle Silversmiths of Newburyport, Mass., thinks somewhat differently. Towle is bringing out a silver medallion bearing a reproduction of Michelangelo's "Pieta," the statue that was battered by a deranged man in Rome some weeks go.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Selling American goods to the Communists on a large scale in the long run depends on credit, and that's a problem no one seems able to solve.

For some weeks now, international trade circles have heard reports the Russians would like to abandon their traditional opposition to borrowing from the capitalist world and negotiate long term merchandise and capital goods credits worth as much as $15 billion in the United States.

It is known the Russians are after Export-Import Bank loans at roughly commercial rates to finance machinery purchases. They also want U.S. laws changed so private banks can lend more freely to Communist countries. New York's First National City and Chase Manhattan banks, among others, have discussed such possibilities with Soviet officials and are seeking liberalization.

With the U.S. balance of payments deficit soaring and the necessity rising for American firms to do business on a global scale, many firms that five years ago wouldn't have dreamed of seeking markets in the Communist world now are interested.

If the trade deficit is $6 6 billion this year, as many sources predict, it will more than doubl elast year's $2.9 billion, the first red ink entry since 1888. Many businessmen and government officials believe this burgeoning problem cannot be halted unless the United States taps the expanding market in the USSR and Eastern Europe.

"IN 1970, THE latest year for which we have complete figures, the free world nations, excluding Finland, had export earnings totaling $6 billion from the Soviet bloc," said Orville Freeman, president, Business International Corp. But the United States share was only $471 million, compared to Italy's $701 8 million and $647.3 million for France. Soviet bloc purchases from non-Socialist countries totaled $12 2 billion in 1970, Freeman added.

Another consideration is the increasing sophistication of Communist productivity, particularly in the area of consumer products. Yugoslavia, for example, is building an automobile factory which, in a few years, will be able to produce 500,000 cars a year.

Bernard Krief, whose Paris-based consulting firm already has opened offices behind the Iron Curtain, noted that American businessmen eventually will be forced to take advantage of opportunities in Soviet bloc countries to offset low-priced products that will be coming into their market.

The Nixon administration has taken a number of recent steps, beginning with the Export Administration Act of Dec. 31, 1969, designed to endorse the favorable expansion of trade with the USSR and Eastern Europe.

"In June, 1971, the administration eliminated the requirement that 50 per cent of all grain shipped to Communist countries had to travel in U S. ships. This was a significant step, since U.S. shipping costs are so high. The elimination of this requirement enable our farmers to be more competitive in world prices," said Ernie Rubin, eastern region director, Office of International Commercial Relations.

PERHAPS MORE important was the move last August by Congress which permitted the President to extend Export-Import Bank credits to Communist countries, although it has had little effect yet. Rumania and Yugoslavia are the only nations currently receiving these credits.

While American businessmen complain about the credit situation and lack of a convertible currency, the most nagging problem may be the length of time required to establish relations.

"It usually takes a minimum of three to four years to get to know the right people and be able to mount an effective marketing effort," said Lynn Clague, an East European specialist for Business International.

Naturally politics intrudes on the East-West trade scene, focusing on the question of "most-favored nation" (MFN) treatment. This means duties applied to Communist goods, if accorded MFN courtesies, wouldn't exceed the lowest rates applied to similar products the United States buys from other countries. This would cut prices on many Communist-produced items.

The Nixon administration favors extending MFN treatment currently enjoyed by Poland and Yugoslavia to the Soviet bloc. Its recently proposed Magnuson Bill S2620, which deals with this issue, will be considered by the 92nd Congress.

Tax relief for property owners who suffered casualty losses earlier this year is not restricted to just those in the June flood areas, we've learned from the Internal Revenue Service.

While it hasn't been widely publicized, casualty losses from the severe winter storms that hit many states early in '72 also qualify for immediate monetary recovery, via an amended 1971 income tax return. The tax-relief order includes any casualty losses from Feb. 1 to July 1, in officially designated disaster areas.

If you suffered flood or storm damage during this period, find out from the nearest Office of Emergency Preparedness whether you are within the boundaries of a designated disaster area. If so, you can amend the tax return that you filed on or before this past April 15, taking deductions for your casualty losses and thus qualifying for a tax refund.

ORDINARILY, taxpayers have only three months in which to file amended returns. The special order recently issued extended the filing deadline past the normal July 15. At present, it's open-ended; an IRS spokesman guesses that taxpayers will have "at least another two or three months."

"The IRS recognizes that getting the data together is going to be a problem for many taxpayers," says Don Siemer of the New York regional office. "In some cases, records lost or destroyed will include copies of the 1971 return. The IRS can furnish a copy, on request — but that takes time."

Available at many IRS offices in flood and storm areas is a room-by-room inventory form, developed in the Black Hills area first hit by the floods, and now being reprinted elsewhere.

Though the normal inclination of property owners is to concentrate on cleanup work and repair of the damage, they're advised by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants to pause long enough to assemble photographic and other evidence of the damage, before the evidence disappears.

Collect "photographs, copies of records of calls received by police and fire department and other emergency organizations; news clippings; testimony of a public appraiser; and any other evidence tying the damage directly to the storm," says the AICPA.

IT IS THE burden of the taxpayer to prove the amount of loss, the institute notes. "Deductible casualty losses are the difference between the cost of the property — or its value just before the casualty (whichever is less) — and the value afterward."

For the tax deduction, the amount of the loss must be reduced by any insurance reimbursement, and a standard $100 for each casualty ($100 off for each disaster, not each item of loss).

On personal property, such as autos or articles of furniture, deductible losses are computed on a piece-by-piece basis, the AICPA points out. On nonbusiness real property, such as homes, outbuildings and landscaping, the deduction is determined by decrease in value of the entire property.

For business property, there is no $100 exclusion. The deduction is determined by decline in value of the property's depreciated value or book value, less any insurance reimbursement.

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you know where one of the Franklin Mint's silver medallions entitled "The Landing of St. Patrick in Ireland" can be bought, grab it.

Nobody knows eactly what the medallion, brought out at $15, is worth now.

"We simply can't buy them for love or money," says Gerald Rose of Harmer-Rooke & Co., New York dealer in coins and stamps.

A number of other artistic medallions and plates issued in limited editions by Franklin Mint and its competitor, Lincoln Mint, have appreciated sharply and many have not.

The business of commemorative medallions and plates is only about 10 years old in the United States, but it already is believed to have achieved a volume of better than $60 million a year.

LINCOLN MINT'S two silver plates done to original designs by Salvador Dali, the Easter Plate and "Unicorne Dionystique," which really represents Don Quixote, were brought out last year at $150. Today they are worth around $200, according to Keith Mervis of Carole Stupell, the fashionable New York silver shop. Franklin Mint's first Christmas silver plate, Norman Rockwell's "Bringing Home the Tree," brought out two years ago at $100, is valued at around $650 now, Mervis said.

Franklin's Mother's Day silver plate by Irene Spencer, issued a few weeks ago at $125, already is bringing $160 to $200 from collectors.

The most remarkable appreciation of all, Mervis said, is a transparent crystal plate brought out in 1965 at $35 by a firm in Paris called Lalique. Although it is not the work of a famous artist and merely shows two birds entwined in stylized flight, it's worth $1,000 today.

A porcelain plate in the British Spode style and commemorating the Shah of Iran's lavish jubilee celebration last year already has spurted from $125 to $180.

Except for the St. Patrick piece, the small silver medallions appreciate in value in complete series rather than as individual pieces, Rose of Harmer-Rooke said.

"Franklin Mint's bird series by Gilroy Roberts, which cost its subscribers about $550, is now worth more than $1,000. Individual numbers in this series have only gone up about 25 per cent."

COLLECTING PORCELAIN commemorative plates is an old custom in Europe, but the modern American industry started in the 1960s has stuck to silver so far. However, Franklin Mint plans a solid gold plate for early next year to sell initially at $2,200. It will be the first in a series called The American West and also will be issued in silver.

Both Franklin Mint and Lincoln Mint, as well as the dealers, say the keys to success in commemorative plates and medallions are to use only well-known artists, only new designs specifically for the sculptured medallion or the low relief plate, and the utmost precautions to see that editions are strictly limited and speculators are prevented from making quantity buys.

This means selling by mail to regular subscribers and through a limited number of top-flight retailers.

Franklin Mint also registers every piece it makes and requires retailers to register every sale with the national accounting firm of Price Waterhouse & Co. That way it can keep track of every piece, making detection of counterfeits easier.

Towle Silversmiths of Newburyport, Mass., thinks somewhat differently. Towle is bringing out a silver medallion bearing a reproduction of Michelangelo's "Pieta," the statue that was battered by a deranged man in Rome some weeks go.

Credit Key To Communist-U.S. Trade

by BILL MILLER

NEW YORK (UPI)—Selling American goods to the Communists on a large scale in the long run depends on credit, and that's a problem no one seems able to solve.

For some weeks now, international trade circles have heard reports the Russians would like to abandon their traditional opposition to borrowing from the capitalist world and negotiate long term merchandise and capital goods credits worth as much as $15 billion in the United States.

It is known the Russians are after Export-Import Bank loans at roughly commercial rates to finance machinery purchases. They also want U.S. laws changed so private banks can lend more freely to Communist countries. New York's First National City and Chase Manhattan banks, among others, have discussed such possibilities with Soviet officials and are seeking liberalization.

With the U.S. balance of payments deficit soaring and the necessity rising for American firms to do business on a global scale, many firms that five years ago wouldn't have dreamed of seeking markets in the Communist world now are interested.

If the trade deficit is $6.6 billion this year, as many sources predict, it will more than doubl elast year's $2.9 billion, the first red ink entry since 1888. Many businessmen and government officials believe this burgeoning problem cannot be halted unless the United States taps the expanding market in the USSR and Eastern Europe.

"IN 1970, THE latest year for which we have complete figures, the free world nations, excluding Finland, had export earnings totaling $6 billion from the Soviet bloc," said Orville Freeman, president, Business International Corp. But the United States share was only $471 million, compared to Italy's $701.8 million and $647.3 million for France. Soviet bloc purchases from non-Socialist countries totaled $12.2 billion in 1970, Freeman added.

Another consideration is the increasing sophistication of Communist productivity, particularly in the area of consumer products. Yugoslavia, for example, is building an automobile factory which, in a few years, will be able to produce 500,000 cars a year.

Bernard Krief, whose Paris-based consulting firm already has opened offices behind the Iron Curtain, noted that American businessmen eventually will be forced to take advantage of opportunities in Soviet bloc countries to offset low-priced products that will be coming into their market.

The Nixon administration has taken a number of recent steps, beginning with the Export Administration Act of Dec. 31, 1969, designed to endorse the favorable expansion of trade with the USSR and Eastern Europe.

"In June, 1971, the administration eliminated the requirement that 50 per cent of all grain shipped to Communist countries had to travel in U.S. ships. This was a significant step, since U.S. shipping costs are so high. The elimination of this requirement enable our farmers to be more competitive in world prices," said Ernie Rubin, eastern region director, Office of International Commercial Relations.

PERHAPS MORE important was the move last August by Congress which permitted the President to extend Export-Import Bank credits to Communist countries, although it has had little effect yet. Rumania and Yugoslavia are the only nations currently receiving these credits.

While American businessmen complain about the credit situation and lack of a convertible currency, the most nagging problem may be the length of time required to establish relations.

"It usually takes a minimum of three to four years to get to know the right peoople and be able to mount an effective marketing effort," said Lynn Clague, an East European specialist for Business International.

Naturally politics intrudes on the East-West trade scene, focusing on the question of "most-favored nation" (MFN) treatment. This means duties applied to Communist goods, if accorded MFN courtesies, wouldn't exceed the lowest rates applied to similar products the United States buys from other countries. This would cut prices on many Communist-produced items.

The Nixon administration favors extending MFN treatment currently enjoyed by Poland and Yugoslavia to the Soviet bloc. Its recently proposed Magnuson Bill S2620, which deals with this issue, will be considered by the 92nd Congress.

A Technique For Resting The Mind

Transcendental Meditation — Key To World Peace?

by JEAN CAFARELLA

Are you tired, overwrought, nervous, or generally up tight? Have you suffered every type of Excedrin headache?

Hang in there, people — Maharishi Mahesh Yogi recommends for your transcendental meditation (TM for short).

Transcendental meditation involves ridding the mind of all thoughts and all experiencing of the senses. You sit in a chair, relax, and empty your head of frustrations.

For those who are wondering, transcendental meditation is not as strange as it sounds. Dennis Bottom, a teacher of TM, lectured to about 80 people at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library Wednesday night, explaining the meditation is not a religion, philosophy, sacrifice, diet or way of life.

TM is basically a mental technique for resting the mind and body, which is recommended for 15 to 20 minutes in the morning and late afternoon.

FOR THOSE WHO decide to practice TM daily, its advocates promise great things. They say TM will expand awareness, develop creative intelligence, improve perception, make people less tired, make them happier and (if enough people practice it) lead to world peace.

"When man's intellect fails," says Maharishi, "he picks up a stick. If only 10 per cent of the world practiced transcendental meditation, we would have peace."

There is some medical evidence that TM can make people more easy going. Bottom said TM gives the body twice as much rest as a full night of deep sleep.

Several doctors at the Harvard Medical Center found TM produced a 20 per cent drop in metabolism, which includes breath rate, oxygen consumption, and cardiac output. TM also reduces blood lactate, which is a sign of anxiety; the reduction therefore makes a person less nervous.

The theory behind TM involves three levels of experience: the senses, the thinking process, and pure consciousness.

"The mind is like an ocean, with activity of the senses at the surface and thought in the middle, while pure consciousness is the foundation," said Bottom. TM teaches that thoughts are most profound in the pure consciousness state, as heat is hottest near the fire.

As a thought reaches the sense stage, it has become complicated and diffused by what happens all around a person. Bottom said that TM tries to get back to the source of the thought, pure consciousness, which improves mental abilities.

TM IS NOT A process of concentration on a single idea. It is merely being "conscious." Nevertheless, the person remains alert should someone decide to talk to him during meditation.

By relaxing the body and mind before day and night activities, TM makes a person more alert, said Bottom. Tensions, aches, and pains are reduced, and practicers of TM find they are less tired by their work.

"It's like shooting an arrow at a target," said Bottom. "The experienced archer knows you must draw the arrow backwards in order to propel it forward more surely and accurately. In the same way, a person goes back into a restful state, which increases his energy to plunge forward into activities."

Bottom said this decrease in tension naturally produces improved behavior toward others. "You feel more stable, secure, and happy. This extends to your family and environment," he said.

The program for learning TM is done in seven steps. The first two steps are introductory lectures on what TM is, its history, and some explanation of technique. Next is an interview of a few minutes with the instructor.

THE LAST FOUR sessions are taken up with actual instruction on how to meditate. In a week's time anyone can learn the process. This is followed by periodic checks to make sure a person has not begun concentrating on the relaxation, which defeats the purpose. The relaxing must be entirely natural.

Many colleges are now offering courses about TM, and there is presently a bill in the state legislature stating that TM should be taught in all schools.

Mrs. Garrison Joins Medical Center Staff

Shirley Garrison, 1542 N. Kennicott, Arlington Heights, has joined the Alexian Brother Medical Center staff in Elk Grove Village as assistant to Robin Leach, public relations director.

She holds a bachelor's degree in marketing from the University of Illinois and was assistant production manager in the advertising office at Marshall Field and Co. department store, of Chicago, prior to raising a family. She has three children, Scott, 16, Julie, 14, and Brian, 9.

Hersey Band To Play At All-Star Game

The Hersey High School marching band will appear later this month at the National Football League All-Star game for the second consecutive year.

The band will do a pre-game show and play the National Anthem for the game between the Dallas Cowboys and the college all-stars.

The game will be Friday, July 28, in Soldiers Field. Television coverage will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Think You Can't Stretch Dollars? Come To Sale

People who complain that the dollar doesn't buy what it used to ought to make plans to attend a sidewalk sale sponsored today and tomorrow by the Bank and Trust Co. of Arlington Heights.

During hours of the sale the bank will be selling worn and mutilated money at discount prices. For example, a dollar bill can be had for 89 cents, $5 for $4.49 and $50 bills will be sold for $45.50.

The sale will be limited to $500 per hour between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. today and tomorrow. Also, each customer will be allowed to buy just one discount bill.

"After they buy their money we will invite customers to turn their mutilated bill in for a new one at 100 cents on the dollar," said W. C. Wolf, president of the Bank and Trust Co.

Wolf said the mutilated money is turned into the Federal Reserve Bank in Chicago where it is redeemed at full value for crisp new bills.

The money sale is being planned as part of the two-day sidewalk sale at the Arlington Market shopping center on east Kensington Road.

"When man's intellect fails," says Maharishi, "he picks up a stick. If only 10 per cent of the world practiced transcendental meditation, we would have peace."

There is some medical evidence that TM can make people more easy going. Bottom said TM gives the body twice as much rest as a full night of deep sleep.

Several doctors at the Harvard Medical Center found TM produced a 20 per cent drop in metabolism, which includes breath rate, oxygen consumption, and cardiac output. TM also reduces blood lactate, which is a sign of anxiety; the reduction therefore makes a person less nervous.

The theory behind TM involves three levels of experience: the senses, the thinking process, and pure consciousness.

"The mind is like an ocean, with activity of the senses at the surface and thought in the middle, while pure consciousness is the foundation," said Bottom. TM teaches that thoughts are most profound in the pure consciousness state, as heat is hottest near the fire.

As a thought reaches the sense stage, it has become complicated and diffused by what happens all around a person. Bottom said that TM tries to get back to the source of the thought, pure consciousness, which improves mental abilities.

TM IS NOT A process of concentration on a single idea. It is merely being "conscious." Nevertheless, the person remains alert should someone decide to talk to him during meditation.

By relaxing the body and mind before day and night activities, TM makes a person more alert, said Bottom. Tensions, aches, and pains are reduced, and practicers of TM find they are less tired by their work.

"It's like shooting an arrow at a target," said Bottom. "The experienced archer knows you must draw the arrow backwards in order to propel it forward more surely and accurately. In the same way, a person goes back into a restful state, which increases his energy to plunge forward into activities."

Bottom said this decrease in tension naturally produces improved behavior toward others. "You feel more stable, secure, and happy. This extends to your family and environment," he said.

The program for learning TM is done in seven steps. The first two steps are introductory lectures on what TM is, its history, and some explanation of technique. Next is an interview of a few minutes with the instructor.

THE LAST FOUR sessions are taken up with actual instruction on how to meditate. In a week's time anyone can learn the process. This is followed by periodic checks to make sure a person has not begun concentrating on the relaxation, which defeats the purpose. The relaxing must be entirely natural.

Many colleges are now offering courses about TM, and there is presently a bill in the state legislature stating that TM should be taught in all schools.

Think You Can't Stretch Dollars? Come To Sale

People who complain that the dollar doesn't buy what it used to ought to make plans to attend a sidewalk sale sponsored today and tomorrow by the Bank and Trust Co. of Arlington Heights.

During hours of the sale the bank will be selling worn and mutiliated money at discount prices. For example, a dollar bill can be had for 89 cents, $5 for $4.49 and $50 bills will be sold for $45.50.

The sale will be limited to $500 per hour between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. today and tomorrow. Also, each customer will be allowed to buy just one discount bill.

"After they buy their money we will invite customers to turn their mutilated bill in for a new one at 100 cents on the dollar," said W. C. Wolf, president of the Bank and Trust Co.

Wolf said the mutilated money is turned into the Federal Reserve Bank in Chicago where it is redeemed at full value for crisp new bills.

21 Years In The Life Of Jim Larabee, A Child Of Revolution

His name was Jim Larabee. He was one of thousands of kids who pass through the suburbs on their way to adulthood and who can be seen around us each day in their casual poses of adolescence.

He was the kind of young man who would seem gifted if there were not hundreds more in his generation who also are gifted with bright intellects and promising ways.

Like us all, Jim Larabee was a creature of his generation and because of the whims and shifts of time and history, he was to become a child of revolution, an agent of the changing attitudes which have come to be called the Movement.

HE WAS BORN at 4:50 a.m. on July 21, 1950 at Burnham City Hospital, Champaign, Ill.

As the years passed he journeyed with his family to Springfield where his father was in state government, and then to Arlington Heights, where he spent his senior year in high school.

He was a quiet, sometimes precocious child and as he grew from boy to man he used his charm, his grace and his wit to challenge the things he thought were wrong with his country.

His most recent years were spent on the road or in the heart of the revolutionary movement. It was a repudiation of his earlier years and typical of a lot of kids of his generation who broke loose from their roots to harken to different tunes of glory.

And finally, in a remote valley about 30 miles from Boulder, Colo., Jim Larabee came to rest. He had come there to become part of a loose commune of young people. The area is mountainous and dotted with tents and small shacks and peopled by the young and old children of the Movement. They nourish themselves with organic foods and they use drugs.

His friends came for Jim Larabee at 9:30 a.m. the morning of June 24. They came to his shack and called to him for breakfast. They found him dead.

JIM'S FRIENDS hitchhiked 10 miles to Neterland, Colo. to call for help. Sgt. Richard Watts of the Boulder County Sheriff's Department conducted an investigation and the Boulder County coroner ruled the death suicide.

There were two beds in the tiny cabin, but Jim Larabee was alone that night.

It was an end for Jim Larabee no one could have predicted, least of all the people of his home towns who saw him attempt to shake a complacent world in hopes of creating a new one.

In 1968, 1969 and early 1970 this country's young people were in a state of turmoil. Thousands were joining new legions to protest the war and the general drift of America. So fervent were the protests, so poignant the pleas for peace and justice in an unjust world that the Movement touched the children of the cities and suburbs.

White, middle class American children were carrying banners in the streets. It was a capstone to the violence of the 1960s and for the first time the Movement caught the soul of a few inhabitants of the remote and affluent suburbs.

HERE IN THE Northwest suburbs, the spark of revolution was tended by a small group of teenagers who managed to bewilder their parents and peers with strident voices for radical change.

Among the most controversial of their activities in those years was the Suburban Liberation Front, headed and motivated by Wendy Schreiber, then a student at Prospect High.

At one point Wendy gave out inflammatory leaflets at the high school and in Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights. The result was an uproar far beyond the scope and influence of the SLF. If anything, the fierce reaction of the community at large acted to push the young radicals closer together and bind them not only by philosophy but by exclusion.

In the midst of this was Jim Larabee. Then a senior at Arlington High, Larabee participated in the ebb and flow of the fledgling movement among suburban teens. Although he only spent one year at Arlington, the atmosphere was catalytic. It nourished his discontent and when he was through here, it propelled him into the street wars of the new decade.

Looking at the span of his 21 years, Arlington Heights and the Northwest suburbs were only a waystop on his road from moderation to revolution, yet the effects this community had on him here were profound enough to cause him to alter his course, and thus his life.

LARABEE CAME to Arlington High after spending his elementary school years in Champaign, and his early high school years in Springfield. His father, Thomas Larabee is a man respected in every community he has ever brought his family to live.

Tom Larabee Sr. came home from World War II as a navigator in the Army Air Corps where he served in the China-Burma-India Theater.

He operated a small launderette for a time and became active in the Champaign-Urbana community. He became active in the Republican party in Champaign County, ran unsuccessfully for the office of County Treasurer and eventually joined then State Treasurer William Scott's staff in the Warrants Division in Springfield.

The family moved from a pleasant neighborhood in Champaign to an equally nice one in Springfield where, in September, 1964, 14-year-old Jim Larabee entered Jefferson Junior High.

His records there reflect the pattern of his academic records through the university level. At Jefferson as anywhere, Jim Larabee could get the grades he wanted. He was bright and promising. He scored As and Bs in most subjects and carried one D — in French. He received a B in citizenship.

One of his school counselors in Springfield remembers him as a "pretty sensitive kid, well liked by the other students, a quiet boy." He was not a disciplinary problem and he is remembered there as "almost too good."

IN SPRINGFIELD he was an excellent student by the time he left. His high school rank at the end of his junior year was 135 in a class of 787. He was in Springfield's accelerated program and he was ranked in the 97th percentile.

There is an indication of his growing political awareness then and a hint that Jim Larabee saw the world around him in deeper tones.

Rick Larison, who knew Jim Larabee in Springfield and later at the University of Illinois, remembers him at Springfield High:

Jim Larabee at 14

"He was the most socially conscious person I knew. He was very concerned about the racial question. It amazed him that people were so ignorant of the problem and had no real concern . . . it was mainly just the idea that he couldn't see living in a world where people could be treated differently just because of their outward color."

The theme of racial equality followed Larabee wherever he went. Later, he was known to be one of the few white students at Arlington and at the University of Illinois who moved freely between black and white communities, who could attend a gathering of black militants and not suffer their abuse.

And once more from Larison, a hint of Larabee's future style:

"He couldn't see sitting around. He did as much as he could the way high schools were at the time, but that wasn't much. If there had been any radical activities in Springfield, I'm sure he would have been involved."

LARABEE'S GROWING awareness of the difference between black and white in this country may have been founded in Champaign or in Springfield — but without doubt his dismay and growing antagonism toward American justice crystalized in Arlington Heights.

It was here that Jim Larabee first refused to stand for the pledge of allegiance to the American flag.

It happened in an Arlington High classroom and according to a close friend at the time, it stemmed from Larabee's growing disenchantment with the conventions of day to day life.

"Jim was outraged with what was happening nationally," his former chemistry lab partner said.

The events which moved him then were the social explosions of the times. The Vietnam war, the street violence of the Chicago Democratic convention, the assassinations of American political leaders, the national bitterness against the war. The war, always the war, stirred the young people then. They were marching to Washington, to Chicago, to any high ground from which to shout their anger and frustration.

Until the Suburban Liberation Front and the national events of 1968 Jim Larabee was described as being deeply opposed to this country's politics, yet remaining passive in seeking his own solutions.

IN THE MONTHS just prior to his graduation from Arlington High those who knew Larabee then say he was moving in the direction from passive opposition to active participation in attempts to change the country.

"Before, he was kind of a pacifist until the realization that nothing he could do would help. 'Revolution is the only way,' " he said to someone who knew him well.

Later, while at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana, the metamorphosis from pacifist to activist became complete. He "became harder there," one friend said. "He was so involved in politics he couldn't come back . . ."

While at Arlington, Larabee retained an average grade point. He was vice president of the chemistry club, but foremost, he was a part of the Suburban Liberation Front. He participated in a July 4, 1968 peace rally at Pioneer Park in Arlington Heights but he was frustrated with the rock group and the peace signs. He said there was a better use for the money spent . . . that it could have been used more directly to fight the system.

At the age of 17, Larabee was graduated from Arlington and enrolled as a freshman at Urbana in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences as a political science major.

During the summer of 1968 he was part of a small group of suburban teens who enrolled in a free university for radical thought at Chicago's Roosevelt University.

There, controversial social reformers such as Staughton Lynd lectured to members of the Suburban Liberation Front and associated groups which had formed in the Chicago area.

In the fall of 1968 he began his short career at the University of Illinois. By this point Jim Larabee was harder and more committed to the Movement. He had experience by then not only with the SLF but with articulate spokesmen for social reform, with CADRE, the Chicago based draft resister's organization, the Student Mobe committee which organized massive student demonstrations, and with the streets of Chicago during the 1968 Democratic Convention.

He was to last slightly less than two years at the University of Illinois.

HE DID WELL the first year at Illinois. He was enrolled in the James Scholar program there, a prestigious academic honor, and maintained a 4.75 grade average. But in his second year, in the spring of 1970, Jim Larabee was destined to collide with his enemy, the Establishment, and to be expelled from the university.

In March, 1970, the campus of the University of Illinois was a place of unrest. The trial of the Conspiracy 7 was proceeding in Chicago, the college campuses across the nation were sounding clarions to all the angry young men.

At the University of Illinois, the first direct clash between students and university police was about to take place. By mid-day of March 2 the student union building, headwaters of the active student turmoil, was filled with dissident students and non-students.

In the afternoon, disturbances took place at the Electrical Engineering Building in protest of recruiters from the General Electric Co., a firm the radical students identified as profiting from the war.

Larabee was photographed in front of that building by campus security police. Later, the turmoil intensified and at confrontations both quiet and angry, Jim Larabee was identified again and again.

THROUGH THE SPRING of 1970 he took active part in the clash of issues at Illinois. In his way he became a victim of the political mayhem which electrified college students nationwide: The Cambodian invasion; Kent State; Jackson, Miss. These were not just names to him, they were drumbeats.

Students and others who saw him at the university then had mixed reactions about him. He was described by more than one observer as a "punk," a kid in a leather jacket who was a troublemaker. Others, more sympathetic, saw him as a campus activist who moved from one demonstration to another, each time more angered by what he saw.

Through a provision of Illinois law, a student at a state university may not drop out of school and thus avoid penalties of prosecution or dictum by school administrators. By the spring of 1970, Larabee was charged with numerous offenses by school and civil officials and was kept on status as a student pending the disposition of the charges.

He was now a Weatherman. Some say he was a leader on the campus, others just say he was just a member of that group. Either way, he was known by security officials and other students at the University as a traveler with the Students for a Democratic Society and, following the split within the SDS, a member of the "action faction," the largely underground Weathermen.

BY THE END of the summer of 1970 and through the spring of 1971 when he was brought to trial, he had six charges of various degree placed against him:

—he was placed on conduct probation and suspended dismissal on Sept. 11, 1970 for participating in anti-ROTC demonstrations on April 21, 1970.

—he was dismissed from the University on Sept. 30, 1970 for participating in strike activities on May 8, 1970.

—dismissed on March 8, 1971 for participating in anti-General Electric demonstrations on March 2, 1970.

—arrested in connection with his demonstrations against the ROTC and charged with interference with a public institution. To this charge he pleaded innocent, and ended forfeiting a $25 bond and paying court costs.

—arrested in connection with strike activities of May 8, 1970 and charged with mob action and disorderly conduct. He pleaded guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct and the state dropped the mob action charge. Fined $75 and court costs on Sept. 17, 1970.

—arrested on charges of theft by deception by passing bad checks stemming from an incident in June, 1970. Charges were dropped on Aug. 26.

—arrested on charges of theft in mid-September, 1970. Charges were dropped at the December, 1970 court date.

During his several court appearances, Larabee had a chance to speak directly about his involvement in action politics.

Champaign attorney Donald Tennant, who represented him at the dismissal hearings, described his client as "very honest, there was nothing false about Jim whatsoever."

SIMILARLY, a high ranking security official at the university speaks well of him:

"Jimmy was always a gentleman with me. I felt that he did have a future when he found himself. I felt he was searching for something that probably didn't exist. I don't think he knew what he was grasping for, but I think he definitely was reaching out."

Reaching out, but for what? Larabee's own testimony during the discipline hearings which would determine his status at school answers a part of that question. Asked by the examiner what he meant when he said earlier the university needed a good riot, Larabee responded:

"I think the university needed a good riot, but I don't know if March 2nd — I don't think it needed a riot over General Electric. It didn't certainly need a riot over the specific action. A riot is a sort of magical thing. I don't know if you remember Watts or Detroit or Newark . . .

"There were really heavy riots that happened in the black communities in the early '60s and everyone said why did these riots happen and they'd say well, it was this specific incident or police brutality, but that wasn't the reason the riot happened and that is basically what's happening now.

"I think with white youth that it's not the riots that happen in Santa Barbara, in Madison or Champaign or Carbondale or you know, any white, any community where there is a group of white youth, where riots have been happening, aren't precipitated by the specific events that's the ignition switch. There are ways to forestall riots. There's no doubt about it that the university could not, could not have operated in such a way that there would be no riot today at this university. There never would have been one in the same way they operated to cool out riots in black communities so I don't think that a riot was inevitable on March the second, but I don't know.

"America is changing. I don't know, that is probably wrong, the world is changing and students at the University of Illinois are a pinprick in the world and they know it, but the world is changing and it affects the lives of the students and they start — they are starting to make decisions on all different levels about the draft, about school, about what kind of occupation they want to have, what they want to do with their leisure time. They are making value judgments and they are starting at the bottom. They aren't starting with any given value judgments, they are starting from scratch or having to at least, and in going through this process of redefining what their existence means and what they are going to do with their lives."

NOW ROOTLESS and on his own, Larabee left the university and traveled around the country, mainly in the west. There is one report of him picking apples in Washington state. He is reported to have visited the Champaign campus off and on. Old members of the Movement recall seeing him there. They report he was living a hand-to-mouth existence but he was in good spirits and happy.

Once so deep in the political movement to change America, Jim Larabee could never really leave it. The lifestyle adopted by thousands of drifting college students, protesters and lone travelers is one which accommodates a variety of persuasions.

The new politics, the drug culture, the hard rock sounds, the communes, the casual labor for food are all part of a way the children of the adversity live. It is fact, not judgment, to say this life exists for part of an entire generation.

Larabee was part of that and was moving either in search of his particular answers or, having found them, was abiding by them when he came to Colorado.

There he took his own life. His friends there said later he was not feeling depressed or under pressure; he had developed an ulcer in his travels but nothing seemed to be bothering him at the moment.

MAYBE, ONE OF HIS friends speculated, that was why he ended it then, because he simply wanted it to end at a pleasant time.

His only image now is the one in photographs. He stares out from his 14-year-old face in junior high school or he stares in silence in a confrontation with a security officer during a university demonstration.

It is the face of a child of the 1960s and it evokes the words of Eugene O'Neill in "Long Day's Journey Into Night":

"Look into my face
My name is Might-Have-Been.
I am also called No-More,
Too-Late, Farewell . . ."

THE TIME: 2:15 p.m. The date: March 2, 1970. The place: Circle Drive of the Illini Union, University of Illinois. The participant: James Larabee, age 19, identified as No. 5. The reason: "To try and stop this process of arrest which was going on in full, in full swing, in the middle and ask why."

This story is the result of a team effort by Herald editors and writers. It reflects several weeks of research by Tom Wellman, Marcia Kramer and Barry Sigale. The story was written by James Vesely.

THE AFTERMATH. Larabee is forced to the pavement with other protestors during one of the pushing matches which characterized the first demonstration on the Illinois campus in which violence erupted.

The events which moved him then were the social explosions of the times. The Vietnam war, the street violence of the Chicago Democratic convention, the assassinations of American political leaders, the national bitterness against the war. The war, always the war, stirred the young people then. They were marching to Washington, to Chicago, to any high ground from which to shout their anger and frustration.

Until the Suburban Liberation Front and the national events of 1968 Jim Larabee was described as being deeply opposed to this country's politics, yet remaining passive in seeking his own solutions.

IN THE MONTHS just prior to his graduation from Arlington High those who knew Larabee then say he was moving in the direction from passive opposition to active participation in attempts to change the country.

"Before, he was kind of a pacifist until the realization that nothing he could do would help. 'Revolution is the only way,' " he said to someone who knew him well.

Later, while at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana, the metamorphosis from pacifist to activist became complete. He "became harder there," one friend said. "He was so involved in politics he couldn't come back . . ."

While at Arlington, Larabee retained an average grade point. He was vice president of the chemistry club, but foremost, he was a part of the Suburban Liberation Front. He participated in a July 4, 1968 peace rally at Pioneer Park in Arlington Heights but he was frustrated with the rock group and the peace signs. He said there was a better use for the money spent . . . that it could have been used more directly to fight the system.

At the age of 17, Larabee was graduated from Arlington and enrolled as a freshman at Urbana in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences as a political science major.

During the summer of 1968 he was part of a small group of suburban teens who enrolled in a free university for radical thought at Chicago's Roosevelt University.

There, controversial social reformers such as Staughton Lynd lectured to members of the Suburban Liberation Front and associated groups which had formed in the Chicago area.

In the fall of 1968 he began his short career at the University of Illinois. By this point Jim Larabee was harder and more committed to the Movement. He had experience by then not only with the SLF but with articulate spokesmen for social reform, with CADRE, the Chicago based draft resister's organization, the Student Mobe committee which organized massive student demonstrations, and with the streets of Chicago during the 1968 Democratic Convention.

He was to last slightly less than two years at the University of Illinois.

HE DID WELL the first year at Illinois. He was enrolled in the James Scholar program there, a prestigious academic honor, and maintained a 4.75 grade average. But in his second year, in the spring of 1970, Jim Larabee was destined to collide with his enemy, the Establishment, and to be expelled from the university.

In March, 1970, the campus of the University of Illinois was a place of unrest. The trial of the Conspiracy 7 was proceeding in Chicago, the college campuses across the nation were sounding clarions to all the angry young men.

At the University of Illinois, the first direct clash between students and university police was about to take place. By mid-day of March 2 the student union building, headwaters of the active student turmoil, was filled with dissident students and non-students.

In the afternoon, disturbances took place at the Electrical Engineering Building in protest of recruiters from the General Electric Co., a firm the radical students identified as profiting from the war.

Larabee was photographed in front of that building by campus security police. Later, the turmoil intensified and at confrontations both quiet and angry, Jim Larabee was identified again and again.

THROUGH THE SPRING of 1970 he took active part in the clash of issues at Illinois. In his way he became a victim of the political mayhem which electrified college students nationwide. The Cambodian invasion; Kent State; Jackson, Miss. These were not just names to him, they were drumbeats.

Students and others who saw him at the university then had mixed reactions about him. He was described by more than one observer as a "punk," a kid in a leather jacket who was a troublemaker. Others, more sympathetic, saw him as a campus activist who moved from one demonstration to another, each time more angered by what he saw.

Through a provision of Illinois law, a student at a state university may not drop out of school and thus avoid penalties of prosecution or dictum by school administrators. By the spring of 1970, Larabee was charged with numerous offenses by school and civil officials and was kept on status as a student pending the disposition of the charges.

He was now a Weatherman. Some say he was a leader on the campus, others just say he was just a member of that group. Either way, he was known by security officials and other students at the University as a traveler with the Students for a Democratic Society and, following the split within the SDS, a member of the "action faction," the largely underground Weathermen.

BY THE END of the summer of 1970 and through the spring of 1971 when he was brought to trial, he had six charges of various degree placed against him:

—he was placed on conduct probation and suspended dismissal on Sept. 11, 1970 for participating in anti-ROTC demonstrations on April 21, 1970.

—he was dismissed from the University on Sept. 30, 1970 for participating in strike activities on May 8, 1970.

—dismissed on March 8, 1971 for participating in anti-General Electric demonstrations on March 2, 1970.

—arrested in connection with his demonstrations against the ROTC and charged with interference with a public institution. To this charge he pleaded innocent, and ended forfeiting a $25 bond and paying court costs.

—arrested in connection with strike activities of May 8, 1970 and charged with mob action and disorderly conduct. He pleaded guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct and the state dropped the mob action charge. Fined $75 and court costs on Sept. 17, 1970.

—arrested on charges of theft by deception by passing bad checks stemming from an incident in June, 1970. Charges were dropped on Aug. 26.

—arrested on charges of theft in mid-September, 1970. Charges were dropped at the December, 1970 court date.

During his several court appearances, Larabee had a chance to speak directly about his involvement in action politics.

Champaign attorney Donald Tennant, who represented him at the dismissal hearings, described his client as "very honest, there was nothing false about Jim whatsoever."

SIMILARLY, a high ranking security official at the university speaks well of him:

"Jimmy was always a gentleman with me. I felt that he did have a future when he found himself. I felt he was searching for something that probably didn't exist. I don't think he knew what he was grasping for, but I think he definitely was reaching out."

Reaching out, but for what? Larabee's own testimony during the discipline hearings which would determine his status at school answers a part of that question. Asked by the examiner what he meant when he said earlier the university needed a good riot, Larabee responded:

"I think the university needed a good riot, but I don't know if March 2nd — I don't think it needed a riot over General Electric. It didn't certainly need a riot over the specific action. A riot is a sort of magical thing. I don't know if you remember Watts or Detroit or Newark . . .

"There were really heavy riots that happened in the black communities in the early '60s and everyone said why did these riots happen and they'd say well, it was this specific incident or police brutality, but that wasn't the reason the riot happened and that is basically what's happening now.

"I think with white youth that it's not the riots that happen in Santa Barbara, in Madison or Champaign or Carbondale or you know, any white, any community where there is a group of white youth, where riots have been happening, aren't precipitated by the specific events that's the ignition switch. There are ways to forestall riots. There's no doubt about it that the university could not, could not have operated in such a way that there would be no riot today at this university. There never would have been one in the same way they operated to cool out riots in black communities so I don't think that a riot was inevitable on March the second, but I don't know.

"America is changing. I don't know, that is probably wrong, the world is changing and students at the University of Illinois are a pinprick in the world and they know it, but the world is changing and it affects the lives of the students and they start — they are starting to make decisions on all different levels about the draft, about school, about what kind of occupation they want to have, what they want to do with their leisure time. They are making value judgments and they are starting at the bottom. They aren't starting with any given value judgments, they are starting from scratch or having to at least, and in going through this process of redefining what their existence means and what they are going to do with their lives."

NOW ROOTLESS and on his own, Larabee left the university and traveled around the country, mainly in the west. There is one report of him picking apples in Washington state. He is reported to have visited the Champaign campus off and on. Old members of the Movement recall seeing him there. They report he was living a hand-to-mouth existence but he was in good spirits and happy.

Once so deep in the political movement to change America, Jim Larabee could never really leave it. The lifestyle adopted by thousands of drifting college students, protesters and lone travelers is one which accommodates a variety of persuasions.

The new politics, the drug culture, the hard rock sounds, the communes, the casual labor for food are all part of a way the children of the adversity live. It is fact, not judgment, to say this life exists for part of an entire generation.

Larabee was part of that and was moving either in search of his particular answers or, having found them, was abiding by them when he came to Colorado.

There he took his own life. His friends there said later he was not feeling depressed or under pressure; he had developed an ulcer in his travels but nothing seemed to be bothering him at the moment.

MAYBE, ONE OF HIS friends speculated, that was why he ended it then, because he simply wanted it to end at a pleasant time.

His only image now is the one in photographs. He stares out from his 14-year-old face in junior high school or he stares in silence in a confrontation with a security officer during a university demonstration.

It is the face of a child of the 1960s and it evokes the words of Eugene O'Neill in "Long Day's Journey Into Night":

"Look into my face
My name is Might-Have-Been.
I am also called No-More,
Too-Late, Farewell . . ."

THE TIME: 2:15 p.m. The date: March 2, 1970. The place: Circle Drive of the Illini Union, University of Illinois. The participant: James Larabee, age 19, identified as No. 5. The reason: "To try and stop this process of arrest which was going on in full, in full swing, in the middle and ask why."

This story is the result of a team effort by Herald editors and writers. It reflects several weeks of research by Tom Wellman, Marcia Kramer and Barry Sigale. The story was written by James Vesely.

THE AFTERMATH. Larabee is forced to the pavement with other protestors during one of the pushing matches which characterized the first demonstration on the Illinois campus in which violence erupted.

A weekly series for and about your home and garden.

Bugs, Bugs, And More Bugs

This year seems to be particularly BUGGY. With the terrific inchworm attack only just over, word comes from downstate of another damaging invasion.

This attack will come from the Locust and Ash Plant Bugs. These insects are similar to aphids, in that they suck juices from leaves. However, feeding by plant bugs severely injures the leaves causing them to turn brown and curl up.

Honey locust in Central Illinois has been badly damaged, and reportedly few green leaves are left at the University of Illinois Campus.

The bugs have been seen here as tiny, wingless, triangular green nymphs with red or orange eyes. We can expect the most damage to occur in late June and there does not seem to be any natural controls for this insect. If the infestation becomes as severe as is predicted, spraying the trees with Sevin will give some control. The young immature bugs are most susceptible to Sevin.

Two perennial pests of ornamentals are prevalent this year in large numbers: Bagworms have hatched and are about one quarter inch long.

This is an excellent time to dispose of them with the new biological control, Bacillus thuringiensis. The material, a bacterial disease of caterpillers, is sold under various trade names such as Thuricide, Dipel or Biotrol. It is harmless to warm-blooded animals.

Cottony maple scale is appearing now, looking like popcorn strung on the branches of maples, and some other shade trees. Young scale crawlers will soon leave the popcorn-like egg masses and move to the leaves where they will feed until fall.

Scales are usually controlled by natural predators so don't be in too much of a hurry to spray unless the infestation is very severe, or the tree is very small. Malathion is the suggested spray.

When using any chemical or biological control, read and carefully follow the directions on the container. Any control system can produce unsatisfactory results if improperly applied.

Oak Yellowing Caused By Iron Chlorosis

The Pin Oak, one of Illinois' most magestic trees, often shows yellowing while growing in the northern area of the state. This is usually caused by iron chlorosis.

It can be easily recognized as the veins of leaves remain green while the remainder of the tree yellows. While chlorosis is evident on many trees and shrubs, it is most obvious in this region on pin oak, magnolia, maple, rhododendron, rose, azalea and fruit trees. They gradually die without proper treatment.

Chlorosis is caused by iron deficiency and the cure is easy. "For years we have been encouraging homeowners and landscapers to keep their pin oaks in good health by feeding roots with a root feeder and iron cartridges, and drenching the soil and spraying the foliage with Iron Chelate" said Vernon Heinz, manager of the Lake-Cook Farm and Garden Store located in Arlington Heights at 510 E. Northwest Hwy. "Now we have a new method to use if all else fails to 'green up' the tree," he says.

The farm store manager related that previously they incorporated a few grams of iron phosphate granules into holes bored into the tree. A run-down tree was able to show good color within a week.

Now trunk injection is made easy by the use of iron "Medicaps." This ready-made cartridge is inserted in holes drilled 1¼" deep in lower trunk area. "Landscapers who have used this procedure do report good success," Heinz states.

15,000 Bonsai Enthusiasts Expected At Dundee Show

Fifteen thousand Bonsai enthusiasts are expected at Hill's Nursery, Dundee, Ill. on August 18, 19 and 20, 1972, for the Fourteenth Annual Midwest Bonsai Show.

The annual trek of gardening throngs to this Fox River Valley town to participate in the "world of plant miniaturization" is a phenomenon which would have delighted old Arthur Hill, son of the founder of Hill's Nursery, who almost single-handedly began the culture of Bonsai in the United States during the early 1900's.

On a trip to Japan, Hill, who was already well established as the nation's premier grower of evergreens, was struck by the beauty and simplicity of the Bonsai art as it was being practiced in the Orient.

On his return to this country, Hill brought back a quantity of plants for making Bonsai. Four Japanese nurserymen accompanied him and stayed with him as instructors for several years. By 1910, Hill's Nursery was firmly established in the Bonsai world.

The Midwest Bonsai Show will feature "entries" from amateur and professional growers from throughout the country. The finest works of the Oriental art available will be on display for all to see, including Hill's own 73-year-old Bonsai Juniper — the oldest nursery-grown specimen known.

The Friday-Saturday-Sunday show is free to the public, 9:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. each day, and visitors are invited to browse through the shaded exhibit "gallery" to their heart's content.

A panel of the Midwest's leading Bonsai authorities will judge the entries on their merits. One of the judges will be Kaneji Domoto, world famous Bonsai expert now living in New York. Domoto will lecture and demonstrate Bonsai art and cultivation, including plant selection, care and feeding, pruning, transplanting, shaping and other Bonsai specifics. In a special 1:30 demonstration each day, he will shape a pre-selected large evergreen into a tasteful representative Bonsai.

The show also features the delightful Hill's Nursery display gardens — a collection of Japanese gardens unequalled in the Midwest. The site, on the corner of Rts. 31 and 72 in Dundee, is just 44 miles northwest of Chicago's Loop by tollway. Dundee is a mile north of the Rt. 31 exit.

Tips On Shady Lawn Problems

Shady areas often present a major lawn problem. But you can solve that problem, even if you have shallow-rooted trees like sugar maples in your landscape.

Use shade-tolerant grasses, says A. J. Turgeon, University of Illinois turf specialist. The fine leaf fescues — Pennlawn creeping red fescue, Chewings fescue and several other varities — mixed with Kentucky bluegrass do relatively well under trees. Merion Kentucky bluegrass does not do well in the shade, while A-34 is a new variety picked for its shade tolerance. Poa trivialis — rough bluegrass — does fairly well in moist shady areas.

Turgeon offers the following suggestions for shady lawn care:

Fertilize the grass and trees separately. Shade grasses require relatively little fertilization compared to full sunlight conditions. Trees may be fertilized by soil injection methods or by applying granular fertilizers to 12-18" holes spaced two feet apart under the dripline of the tree (and extending 25c beyond the dripline).

—Remove unnecessary trees. You can often improve the general appearance of the lawn by removing the trees that do not contribute to the landscape design.

—Prune remaining trees to remove dead or unnecessary branches and to allow more light to enter the area.

Prune shallow tree roots that compete with the grass for nutrients and moisture should also be pruned. But don't prune more than a few inches deep, and stay well away from the trunk. You can remove shallower roots without causing injury to the trees.

—Have the soil tested and apply lime if it has become strongly acid.

—Remove fallen leaves and other debris promptly by raking, sweeping or mechanical grinding. Leaves allowed to accumulate on the lawn may smother the grass.

—When you water the lawn, soak it thoroughly at least 6 inches deep. Apply the water slowly to prevent runoff.

—And fertilize in the early spring so that the grass will begin vigorous growth before the deciduous trees develop new leaves.

Cabinet Helps Outdoor Chef

Barbecuing can be more fun and less work if the home chef has a place to keep all his gear and supplies, and doesn't have to search for one thing or another each time.

One handy way to assure this is a storage cabinet of western wood, hung on the side of the house or garage. The cabinet is a simple box of 1x12-inch Douglas fir, pine or western cedar, about four feet wide by three feet tall.

With a shelf or two, it should hold all necessary items and a supply of charcoal. An outlet can be placed inside the cabinet for an electric starter or rotisserie motor.

A hibachi stored in the cabinet slides out onto the lower half of the cabinet door, which folds down as a counter. A larger barbecue, stored nearby, can be rolled up to the cabinet.

Cottony maple scale is appearing now, looking like popcorn strung on the branches of maples, and some other shade trees. Young scale crawlers will soon leave the popcorn-like egg masses and move to the leaves where they will feed until fall.

Scales are usually controlled by natural predators so don't be in too much of a hurry to spray unless the infestation is very severe, or the tree is very small. Malathion is the suggested spray.

When using any chemical or biological control, read and carefully follow the directions on the container. Any control system can produce unsatisfactory results if improperly applied.

Oak Yellowing Caused By Iron Chlorosis

The Pin Oak, one of Illinois' most magestic trees, often shows yellowing while growing in the northern area of the state. This is usually caused by iron chlorosis.

It can be easily recognized as the veins of leaves remain green while the remainder of the tree yellows. While chlorosis is evident on many trees and shrubs, it is most obvious in this region on pin oak, magnolia, maple, rhododendron, rose, azalea and fruit trees. They gradually die without proper treatment.

Chlorosis is caused by iron deficiency and the cure is easy. "For years we have been encouraging homeowners and landscapers to keep their pin oaks in good health by feeding roots with a root feeder and iron cartridges, and drenching the soil and spraying the foliage with Iron Chelate" said Vernon Heinz, manager of the Lake-Cook Farm and Garden Store located in Arlington Heights at 510 E. Northwest Hwy. "Now we have a new method to use if all else fails to 'green up' the tree," he says.

The farm store manager related that previously they incorporated a few grams of iron phosphate granules into holes bored into the tree. A run-down tree was able to show good color within a week.

Now trunk injection is made easy by the use of iron "Medicaps." This ready-made cartridge is inserted in holes drilled 1¼" deep in lower trunk area. "Landscapers who have used this procedure do report good success," Heinz states.

15,000 Bonsai Enthusiasts Expected At Dundee Show

Fifteen thousand Bonsai enthusiasts are expected at Hill's Nursery, Dundee, Ill. on August 18, 19 and 20, 1972, for the Fourteenth Annual Midwest Bonsai Show.

The annual trek of gardening throngs to this Fox River Valley town to participate in the "world of plant miniaturization" is a phenomenon which would have delighted old Arthur Hill, son of the founder of Hill's Nursery, who almost single-handedly began the culture of Bonsai in the United States during the early 1900's.

On a trip to Japan, Hill, who was already well established as the nation's premier grower of evergreens, was struck by the beauty and simplicity of the Bonsai art as it was being practiced in the Orient.

On his return to this country, Hill brought back a quantity of plants for making Bonsai. Four Japanese nurserymen accompanied him and stayed with him as instructors for several years. By 1910, Hill's Nursery was firmly established in the Bonsai world.

The Midwest Bonsai Show will feature "entries" from amateur and professional growers from throughout the country. The finest works of the Oriental art available will be on display for all to see, including Hill's own 73-year-old Bonsai Juniper — the oldest nursery-grown specimen known.

The Friday-Saturday-Sunday show is free to the public, 9:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. each day, and visitors are invited to browse through the shaded exhibit "gallery" to their heart's content.

A panel of the Midwest's leading Bonsai authorities will judge the entries on their merits. One of the judges will be Kaneji Domoto, world famous Bonsai expert now living in New York. Domoto will lecture and demonstrate Bonsai art and cultivation, including plant selection, care and feeding, pruning, transplanting, shaping and other Bonsai specifics. In a special 1:30 demonstration each day, he will shape a pre-selected large evergreen into a tasteful representative Bonsai.

The show also features the delightful Hill's Nursery display gardens — a collection of Japanese gardens unequalled in the Midwest. The site, on the corner of Rts. 31 and 72 in Dundee, is just 44 miles northwest of Chicago's Loop by tollway. Dundee is a mile north of the Rt. 31 exit.

Tips On Shady Lawn Problems

Shady areas often present a major lawn problem. But you can solve that problem, even if you have shallow-rooted trees like sugar maples in your landscape.

Use shade-tolerant grasses, says A. J. Turgeon, University of Illinois turf specialist. The fine leaf fescues — Pennlawn creeping red fescue, Chewings fescue and several other varities — mixed with Kentucky bluegrass do relatively well under trees. Merion Kentucky bluegrass does not do well in the shade, while A-34 is a new variety picked for its shade tolerance. Poa trivialis — rough bluegrass — does fairly well in moist shady areas.

Turgeon offers the following suggestions for shady lawn care:

Fertilize the grass and trees separately. Shade grasses require relatively little fertilization compared to full sunlight conditions. Trees may be fertilized by soil injection methods or by applying granular fertilizers to 12-18" holes spaced two feet apart under the dripline of the tree (and extending 25c beyond the dripline).

—Remove unnecessary trees. You can often improve the general appearance of the lawn by removing the trees that do not contribute to the landscape design.

—Prune remaining trees to remove dead or unnecessary branches and to allow more light to enter the area.

Prune shallow tree roots that compete with the grass for nutrients and moisture should also be pruned. But don't prune more than a few inches deep, and stay well away from the trunk. You can remove shallower roots without causing injury to the trees.

—Have the soil tested and apply lime if it has become strongly acid.

—Remove fallen leaves and other debris promptly by raking, sweeping or mechanical grinding. Leaves allowed to accumulate on the lawn may smother the grass.

—When you water the lawn, soak it thoroughly at least 6 inches deep. Apply the water slowly to prevent runoff.

—And fertilize in the early spring so that the grass will begin vigorous growth before the deciduous trees develop new leaves.

Cabinet Helps Outdoor Chef

Barbecuing can be more fun and less work if the home chef has a place to keep all his gear and supplies, and doesn't have to search for one thing or another each time.

One handy way to assure this is a storage cabinet of western wood, hung on the side of the house or garage. The cabinet is a simple box of 1x12-inch Douglas fir, pine or western cedar, about four feet wide by three feet tall.

With a shelf or two, it should hold all necessary items and a supply of charcoal. An outlet can be placed inside the cabinet for an electric starter or rotisserie motor.

TV Searches For Variety Show Stars

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Humorist David Steinberg, an ingratiating young fellow, arrived on CBS Wednesday night with his new summer comedy-and-music series as commercial video keeps searching for fresh variety show stars.

At all three of the major commercial networks there is definite concern over the lack of genuinely big names to be stars of weekly variety series. Veteran performers like Bob Hope and Jack Benny came to television as already-established headliners in radio and movies. But movies today generally don't conform to the tastes of traditional video watchers and there aren't many musicals being made Radio, meanwhile, has lost most of its biggest stars to video and films

Which is why the television networks, in their search for new variety stars, have given performers like Steinberg and Melba Moore and Bobby Darin and Ken Berry and Jerry Reed tryout series of their own this summer. Only a relatively few major variety stars in the ratings remain on video — people like Flip Wilson, Carol Burnett, Dean Martin

Thus the networks, in the main, have to develop their own stars these days It's true ABC-TV has landed Julie Andrews for the coming season, and CBS-TV will offer Bill Cosby in a variety series this same semester But neither, in rating terms, can be regarded as a shoo-in on the basis of their past video outings

So where do you get the big news stars for variety series? Well, the networks have decided that, in most cases, you don't So you develop an alternative. And that alternative now is the "attitude" show rather than the blockbuster star show, and rather than the host who is a "pointer" — that is, points out the next act and introduces it So we are in the video era of the "attitude" variety show, of which CBS-TV's Sonny and Cher series is an example

And that brings us back to Steinberg He is well known for his comedy stints on the home screen, and for his guest-hosting appearances on the late-night talk shows But he is a highly intelligent young man who would be the first to admit he is not yet a blockbuster star There was a time when NBC was interested in him as a possible variety show host, but a network source says it was finally decided he was too erudite to have mass audience clout. There's video for you, and Steinberg should take it all as a compliment

The fact is, he showed on his debut that he has wide appeal It wasn't a great show, but he displayed excellent audience rapport and ease at smoothing over the weak spots Not only was his monologue funny, but his sketch humor was highly able, and he even danced a bit Furthermore, he was a skilled foil for guest stars Leslie Uggams and Ed McMahon, showing unusual gifts as a reaction comic. And I liked the appealing, slightly put-upon but good-natured image he developed.

TV Searches For Variety Show Stars

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Humorist David Steinberg, an ingratiating young fellow, arrived on CBS Wednesday night with his new summer comedy-and-music series as commercial video keeps searching for fresh variety show stars.

At all three of the major commercial networks there is definite concern over the lack of genuinely big names to be stars of weekly variety series. Veteran performers like Bob Hope and Jack Benny came to television as already-established headliners in radio and movies. But movies today generally don't conform to the tastes of traditional video watchers and there aren't many musicals being made. Radio, meanwhile, has lost most of its biggest stars to video and films.

Which is why the television networks, in their search for new variety stars, have given performers like Steinberg and Melba Moore and Bobby Darin and Ken Berry and Jerry Reed tryout series of their own this summer. Only a relatively few major variety stars in the ratings remain on video — people like Flip Wilson, Carol Burnett, Dean Martin.

Thus the networks, in the main, have to develop their own stars these days. It's true ABC-TV has landed Julie Andrews for the coming season, and CBS-TV will offer Bill Cosby in a variety series this same semester. But neither, in rating terms, can be regarded as a shoo-in on the basis of their past video outings.

So where do you get the big news stars for variety series? Well, the networks have decided that, in most cases, you don't. So you develop an alternative. And that alternative now is the "attitude" show rather than the blockbuster star show, and rather than the host who is a "pointer" — that is, points out the next act and introduces it. So we are in the video era of the "attitude" variety show, of which CBS-TV's Sonny and Cher series is an example.

And that brings us back to Steinberg. He is well known for his comedy stints on the home screen, and for his guest-hosting appearances on the late-night talk shows. But he is a highly intelligent young man who would be the first to admit he is not yet a blockbuster star. There was a time when NBC was interested in him as a possible variety show host, but a network source says it was finally decided he was too erudite to have mass audience clout. There's video for you, and Steinberg should take it all as a compliment.

The fact is, he showed on his debut that he has wide appeal. It wasn't a great show, but he displayed excellent audience rapport and ease at smoothing over the weak spots. Not only was his monologue funny, but his sketch humor was highly able, and he even danced a bit. Furthermore, he was a skilled foil for guest stars Leslie Uggams and Ed McMahon, showing unusual gifts as a reaction comic. And I liked the appealing, slightly put-upon but good-natured image he developed.

Des Plaines To Host 32-Team Tournament

by JIM COOK

Provided the monsoon season subsides in Des Plaines this weekend, the 1972 State 16-inch Softball Tournament will unfold at two sites Saturday with the semi-finals and championship clashes Sunday.

For the seventh consecutive year, the Des Plaines Park District-hosted spectacle is sponsored by the Illinois Park and Recreational Society and will draw some of the finer teams in the state.

Thirty-two clubs have entered the two-day affair that will begin at both Algonquin School (Algonquin Rd. and Fifth Ave., one block east of Wolf Rd.) and Rand Park on Saturday and climax Sunday with the featured showdowns slated solely at Rand Park.

The contests will begin at 8:30 a.m. Saturday morning and run all day with semi-finals and championship series scheduled for noon on Sunday.

Each park district or recreational department in the state of Illinois was eligible to send one representative to the single-elimination tourney.

A showcase for area 16-inch softball, the Des Plaines extravanganza has always been one of the toughest tournaments in the nation. In the past two years, for example, the top three squads in the Des Plaines competition have placed first, second and third in the future-billed World Series of Softball

Such standouts as So-Bees of Berwyn, the 1971 State Champion and 1971 runnerup in the World Series and the Bruins of Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows, 1971 State Runnerup and 1971 third place World Series finisher, are tabbed in favorites roles for the 1972 edition.

Other area entries include the Wally Antonozek managed Villa Lounge Hustlers from Wheeling, Myron Silver's Rosati's Pizza out of Des Plaines, the Prospect Heights Raiders and Elk Grove-based Village Realty managed by Ken Kocolowski.

Schaumburg's entry is the Paddock Cannons managed by Rich Byrne while John Durso will lead Ned Singer's Sports Palatine representative.

Arlington Heights' Pit-N-Pub Cheetahs are managed by Don Schulze, the Rolling Meadows Raiders by Roy Woodruff and the Olson Care Enterprises Scrappers of Mount Prospect by Jack Olson.

Defending champion Berwyn drew the top seed in the tourney while the Bruins ranked second and Evanston third. A complete schedule for the tournment follows:

IN POSITION Brad Smith, Hersey's dazzling wrestler, methodically works toward another victory in his long, long string. Here he defeated Don Schulte in a first-round match. Later, though, Smith lost for the first time in two and a half years, 5-1 against Joe Amore of Glenbrook South in the finals of the state freestyle tournament hosted by Hersey. Smith had been undefeated and state champ for the past two years.

Fergie Is Cheated

Dear Sir:

National League All-Star manager Danny Murtaugh must have used a dart board to select his pitchers for the classic July 25. How else could he have overlooked Chicago Cub Ferguson Jenkins?

The rash of tough-luck games that he's lost this season is due primarily to his team's lack of hitting, but despite this, he's still managed to win 12 games. Only one other pitcher, Gary Nolan, had more wins as of Tuesday, but Murtaug still snubbed him.

What do you have to do? He's the NL's Cy Young Award winner in 1971, he's one of the workhorses in the league with nearly 200 innings pitched, his walks-to-strikeout ration is superb (37 to 119) and his 2.85 earned run average is better than some of the guys Murtaugh did pick!

Let's put the selection of all-star pitchers into the hands of the fans, too. At least we'll pick the most deserving ones

IRA HAS A BOOSTER

Dear Sirs,

This may sound stupid, but Ira Berkow really knows his beat. Berkow did some fine articles on the Cubs a while back in your paper and now has done a great first part feature on the Sox.

Why don't some of the Chicago writers dig up some interesting things like he has done? Maybe they are too close to the scene. All I know is he is the best man-local writer you run and I have yet to read a poorly done piece from his typewriter

Keep using 'him!

ABC, FRINK -- DOUBLE DISTORTION

Dear Herald Sports

I just heard the other day that Bill Frink was going to be working with the regular ABC-TV sports crew at Munich. Ugh! They must really be hurting to get a guy like this, so weak and nondescript

The other night he ended his show by saying, "In a late game on the coast, KC is going against the Angels with Joel Horlen doing the pitching Here's hoping OUR man comes out on top, Fahey!"

Fahey Flynn gave him a doubletake. Besides getting "KC" wrong (the A's have been playing in Oakland for several years), he intoned that Horlen was still with the Sox.

Flynn, although not a sports announcer, realized Frink's mistake and said, "Our man?"

Frink came back, "Is that what I said?"

"Yes, you did, Bill," chuckled Fahey.

Frink, now breaking into a giggle, replied, "Well, I said 'our' because there might be some A's fans in the audience."

Unbelievable!

If ABC carries through its plan to use Frink, it will add insult to injury. Not only will I have to watch the Olympics with all the ghosts caused by the new (bleep) Sears building, I'll also have the distorted, giggly face of Frink uttering his usual nothings from Germany

LETTERS CAMPAIGN

Dear Herald:

This may not be very timely because the White Sox have been doing poorly lately. But I would like to remind Sox fans that this is the last season the team has a contract for WFLD-TV (Channel 32) to televise its games.

I would hate to think of a whole summewed — if not with WFLD, then with some other station. I'm sure other Sox fans will agree. Even though the team is slipping now, they have played many exciting games all year. They are still in second place, pretty darn good for such a young team, and stayed close to Oakland for a while. It is no disgrace to lose out to a team as good as Oakland.

I would hatt to think of a whole summer with no Sox games on the tube. So, now for my pitch: Why don't all of us Sox fans write to WFLD and tell them how we feel? Don't think it won't make a difference if they get enough letters.

Now is the time for all good fans to come to the aid of the White Sox.

THE HULL THING — AGAIN

Dear Staff:

Although everyone is getting tired of hearing and talking abut Bobby Hull and his Great Escape. I think the other side of the story should be listened to.

What I mean is, almost everyone has been saying that they don't blame Bobby for going because anyone in his right mind would accept a chance for more money As usual, they all paint Arthur Wirtz and the Hawk management as villains.

Well, I for one (and I may be the only one) don't go along with this. You would think that Hull would show some loyalty for this city after all it has done for him (remember that fans pay the salaries). Besides, Bobby could have made as much or more in the next 10 years from his Hawk salary and outside endorsements combined as he will get from Winnipeg and the World Hockey Association. Don't forget that the Hawks offered Hull the biggest contract in NHL history.

I cannot agree with a player leaving just like that, for no other reason than money. Is there no more to hockey than dollars and cents? If so, that is a sad commentary on the world of sports.

Illini Cage Outlook: 'Bye, Bye Harv'

by TOM CARKEEK

The dissension that racked the University of Illinois basketball team last year will dissipate for the most part this season. But it has stamped its imprint upon the 1972-73 squad in one regretful, almost crippling way — it led to the transfer of center Bill Morris to the University of St Louis

And that gaping hole in the middle will cause head coach Harv Schmidt nightmares as he fantasizes his stand-in pivot man being eaten alive by the Big Ten's three seven-footers and Minnesota's Olympian, Jim Brewer. If the Illini had a center, they might have made a run at the first division this coming year. As it is, they will be lucky to finish the season above eighth place.

Nick Weatherspoon, the league's No. 4 scorer last year as a junior even though he didn't really have a good season, is back and will challenge for the Big Ten scoring title this year. He's a superb rebounder from his forward position, too.

"Spoon" will be helped, in fact, possibly even overshadowed, by transfer Jeff Dawson. This former Illinois prep shunned the state university for Duke but later got tired of riding the bench and headed back to Schmidt where he knew he could play. And he CAN play!

He practiced with the team all last year (under NCAA rules, a player switching schools must sit out a year) and Dawson, frankly, excites me. Besides his unquestioned ability as a proficient long-range shooter, he is a deceptive passer and is strong, quick and smart. He's just what Schmidt needed last year — a good outshooting guard. But now Harv has a good outshooting guard and it's the lack of a center that's got him on the ropes.

Who's going to play the pivot? Realistically, Schmidt has only two candidates: 6-10 senior Jim DeDecker and 6-6 senior Nick Conner. Both tried their hand at it last year when Morris fell out of his coach's favor (which was often), and neither came on like a Big Ten center, because the fact is that neither is a Big Ten center.

DeDecker, the most likely candidate for the vacated post because of his height, has two major drawbacks. He's not aggressive and he can't jump. I swear, at times last year I thought DeDecker would make Rip Van Winkle look ambitious

Conner, at 6-6, simply isn't big enough to neutralize the taller centers, and the way it appears now there will be only one other center in the conference under 6-9. Conner is an amazing jumper and his determination is a trait more team members could use, but he's simply out of his league when he tries to play center in the Big Ten.

So that leaves Schmidt in one helluva fix.

The only graduation loss from last year's squad is 6-4 guard and team captain Jim Krelle, a dedicated ballplayer and a "class kid," as Schmidt himself admitted. Schmidt benched his captain for all but about five minutes of his final home game last year and Krelle, always an emotional man, quit the team in frustration just prior to the last game. His loss was not overly critical for the final game, but it became symbolic in Schmidt's inability to deal with his players. This is an area in which Schmidt is painfully weak and if the Illini are to contend and at the same time if Harv is to keep his job he must rectify this situation fast.

But help may be forthcoming at guard and forward. In addition to Dawson in the backcourt, the Illini have developing juniors Garvin Roberson and C. J. Schroeder, who displayed signs of maturity on the basketball floor last year. Also, sophomore Otho Tucker will be up from the freshman squad, and a fine shooter like Tucker who also happens to stand 6-6 could be a main problem-solver in the backcourt.

At forward, Harv will be strengthened by his namesake, upcoming sophomore Rick Schmidt, a bullish rebounder with a nice outside shooting touch who tied with Tucker for freshman scoring honors. Schmidt will have to beat out Conner (assuming DeDecker wins the battle at center) and 6-6 Jed Foster to play opposite Weatherspoon in the frontcourt.

The Big Ten should be a tough basketball conference this season, although Minnesota and Michigan should be by far the class of the league. If the Illini had a center, they might have challenged for a first division berth with Weatherspoon and Dawson leading the rest of the team.

As it is, Assembly Hall fans will have to be content to unfurl their "Goodbye, Harv" banners and sit on their hands as the Illini try not to be embarrased.

9th District All-Stars Test Legion Leader Park Ridge

An interesting potpourri of talent is provided by the Ninth District American Legion all-star baseball team, which will take on Park Ridge tomorrow at 4 p m. at Recreation Park in Arlington Heights

Park Ridge, as local legion fans know, surprised everyone by beating Arlington Heights twice in three days last weekend to move into first place for the first time just before the specified deadline Sunday evening. Thus, Ridge earned the right to take on the all-stars

This will be the league's second annual attraction. Last year a big crowd turned out to see Logan Square rally for four runs in the eighth inning for a 6-4 victory.

As do most all-star units, this one has every ingredient desirable on the diamond. Explosive bats are featured throughout the 25-man squad, which has two players at each position except pitchers.

The eight-man pitching staff (six righties, two lefties) is to a man made up of forbidding arms which have been as stingy in giving up runs and hits as George Halas and Arthur Wirtz in giving out free bonuses

And don't forget defensive ability. This was a definite consideration in the selections made by league coaches. Plenty of fleet feet and sure hands will be on display.

All of this would suggest that any team bold enough to take on the all-stars would not stand a chance. But this is not the case when you consider the way Park Ridge has been playing Just the fact that it swept all three games from Arlington Heights this year speaks highly for Ridge, since Arlington had a 12-game winning streak earlier and win 20 of its first 23

More than one coach has picked Park Ridge as a likely league and tournament winner because of its all-around solidarity and fine pitching. Although the squad is handicapped by a heavy schedule during these few days, it will be able to substitute freely for this occasion.

Manager Bob Grybash of Palatine — who has Des Plaines' Merv Fink and Logan Square's Larry Nomellini as his coaches — will probably work each player in for about half of the game.

The pitchers who will toil the most will probably be those who are the most rested. Several are on teams which also have games bunching up about now. (There have been several rainouts lately and the Ninth District season must end by this Wednesday if the tournament is to begin Thursday as scheduled).

Boys named first at each position who will probably be starters are Steve Scholten of Des Plaines at catcher, Joe Bombicino of Logan Square at first base, Bert Newman of Arlington Heights at second, Randy Jespersen of Des Plaines at shortstop and Rich Luzinski of Des Plaines at third

Pitchers include George Pattec of Palatine, Ken Martin, Terry Smith and Mike Cook of Logan Square; Mark Leonhard and Jim Hopkins of Arlington; Larry Monroe of Des Plaines and Tom Clark of Norwood Park

Ten different high schools are represented on the squad as well as all seven Ninth District teams. Arlington Heights and Logan Square each placed six players, Des Plaines and Palatine each have five and Norwood Park and Schiller Park two apiece.

A new special attraction this year will be a baserunning contest before the gme, starting at 3:45. One runner will represent each team and be clocked all the way around the bases. They will be Mark Newman, Bobowski, Chen, Hauswirth, Steve Sarcia of Park Ridge, Wisniewski and Bellah.

Park Ridge's top pitchers thus far have been Greg Ciezadlo with a 6-1 record, Scott Jones with 4-2 and Fred Parker with 3-3 Hot hitters for Ridge are Russ Anderson and Ciezadlo with averages over .400; Charlie Fahrner and Mickey Drews with better than .300; and Bill Aimers and Jones, both in the high .200's.

All in all, it ought to be quite an exhibition — if the weatherman will change his recent script and cooperate.

by JIM COOK

Provided the monsoon season subsides in Des Plaines this weekend, the 1972 State 16-Inch Softball Tournament will unfold at two sites Saturday with the semi-finals and championship clashes Sunday.

For the seventh consecutive year, the Des Plaines Park District-hosted spectacle is sponsored by the Illinois Park and Recreational Society and will draw some of the finer teams in the state.

Thirty-two clubs have entered the two-day affair that will begin at both Algonquin School (Algonquin Rd. and Fifth Ave., one block east of Wolf Rd.) and Rand Park on Saturday and climax Sunday with the featured showdowns slated solely at Rand Park.

The contests will begin at 8:30 a.m. Saturday morning and run all day with semi-finals and championship series scheduled for noon on Sunday.

Each park district or recreational department in the state of Illinois was eligible to send one representative to the single-elimination tourney.

A showcase for area 16-inch softball, the Des Plaines extravanganza has always been one of the toughest tournaments in the nation. In the past two years, for example, the top three squads in the Des Plaines competition have placed first, second and third in the future-billed World Series of Softball.

Such standouts as So-Bees of Berwyn, the 1971 State Champion and 1971 runnerup in the World Series and the Bruins of Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows, 1971 State Runnerup and 1971 third place World Series finisher, are tabbed in favorites roles for the 1972 edition.

Other area entries include the Wally Antonozek-managed Villa Lounge Hustlers from Wheeling, Myron Silver's Rosati's Pizza out of Des Plaines, the Prospect Heights Raiders and Elk Grove-based Village Realty managed by Ken Kocolowski.

Schaumburg's entry is the Paddock Cannons managed by Rich Byrne while John Durso will lead Ned Singer's Sports Palatine representative.

Arlington Heights' Pit-N-Pub Cheetahs are managed by Don Schulze, the Rolling Meadows Raiders by Roy Woodruff and the Olson Care Enterprises Scrappers of Mount Prospect by Jack Olson.

Defending champion Berwyn drew the top seed in the tourney while the Bruins ranked second and Evanston third. A complete schedule for the tournment follows:

Later, though, Smith lost for the first time in two and a half years, 5-1 against Joe Amore of Glenbrook South in the finals of the state freestyle tournament hosted by Hersey. Fergie Is Cheated

Dear Sir:

National League All-Star manager Danny Murtaugh must have used a dart board to select his pitchers for the classic July 25. How else could he have overlooked Chicago Cub Ferguson Jenkins?

The rash of tough-luck games that he's lost this season is due primarily to his team's lack of hitting, but despite this, he's still managed to win 12 games. Only one other pitcher, Gary Nolan, had more wins as of Tuesday, but Murtaug still snubbed him.

What do you have to do? He's the NL's Cy Young Award winner in 1971, he's one of the workhorses in the league with nearly 200 innings pitched, his walks-to-strikeout ration is superb (37 to 119) and his 2.85 earned run average is better than some of the guys Murtaugh did pick!

Let's put the selection of all-star pitchers into the hands of the fans, too. At least we'll pick the most deserving ones.

Dear Sirs,

This may sound stupid, but Ira Berkow really knows his beat. Berkow did some fine articles on the Cubs a while back in your paper and now has done a great first part feature on the Sox.

Why don't some of the Chicago writers dig up some interesting things like he has done? Maybe they are too close to the scene. All I know is he is the best man-local writer you run and I have yet to read a poorly done piece from his typewriter.

Keep using him!

ABC, FRINK — DOUBLE DISTORTION

Dear Herald Sports

I just heard the other day that Bill Frink was going to be working with the regular ABC-TV sports crew at Munich. Ugh! They must really be hurting to get a guy like this, so weak and nondescript.

The other night he ended his show by saying, "In a late game on the coast, KC is going against the Angels with Joel Horlen doing the pitching. Here's hoping OUR man comes out on top, Fahey!"

Fahey Flynn gave him a doubletake. Besides getting "KC" wrong (the A's have been playing in Oakland for several years), he intoned that Horlen was still with the Sox.

Flynn, although not a sports announcer, realized Frink's mistake and said, "Our man?"

Frink came back, "Is that what I said?"

"Yes, you did, Bill," chuckled Fahey. Frink, now breaking into a giggle, replied, "Well, I said 'our' because there might be some A's fans in the audience."

Unbelievable!

If ABC carries through its plan to use Frink, it will add insult to injury. Not only will I have to watch the Olympics with all the ghosts caused by the new (bleep) Sears building, I'll also have the distorted, giggly face of Frink uttering his usual nothings from Germany.

THE HULL THING — AGAIN

Dear Staff:

Although everyone is getting tired of hearing and talking abut Bobby Hull and his Great Escape. I think the other side of the story should be listened to.

What I mean is, almost everyone has been saying that they don't blame Bobby for going because anyone in his right mind would accept a chance for more money. As usual, they all paint Arthur Wirtz and the Hawk management as villains.

Well, I for one (and I may be the only one) don't go along with this. You would think that Hull would show some loyalty for this city after all it has done for him (remember that fans pay the salaries). Besides, Bobby could have made as much or more in the next 10 years from his Hawk salary and outside endorsements combined as he will get from Winnipeg and the World Hockey Association. Don't forget that the Hawks offered Hull the biggest contract in NHL history.

I cannot agree with a player leaving just like that, for no other reason than money. Is there no more to hockey than dollars and cents? If so, that is a sad commentary on the world of sports.

Neely will be playing his first football game since last Oct 3 when the Dallas Cowboys open defense of their newly-won National Football League championsip with the traditional season-opening clash with the College All-Stars

And that game, too, was played in Soldier Field, the Cowboys losing to the Bears That was, incidentally, the last game the Cowboys lost The next day, back home in Dallas, Neely climbed onto his motorcycle, a brand new one, the first he'd ever owned

It turned out to be a bad trip. Neely wrecked the bike and his left ankle and although he doesn't like to talk about it, he will say "I won't be riding a motorcycle again. What I did was wrong and I'm paying for it now"

Oh, is he paying for it. Not only does the ankle still hurt after a full day of workous, but Neely was unable to get into proper shape to pass the Cowboys' rigorous fitness test As a result he's been spending extra time under the hot California sun doing grass drills as penance

But the former Oklahoma star promises to be ready to play in the All-Star game and Head Coach Tom Landry fully expects Neely to start his first game in nine months in the Chicago classic.

Neely may be playing in pain for awhile, but he's used to that. "I've had three knee operations in the last five years and now this," he says.

Amazingly enough, he had never missed an N.F.L. game until his maiden voyage on the new motorcycle resulted in multiple fractures of his left leg and a badly dislocated ankle. "I probably could have been playing in three weeks if it was only the fracture," Neely says. "It was the small bone that was broken. But all the ligaments were torn up in the ankle, too."

While his three knee operations were all in the off-season, Neely was frequently playing with the big hurts as well as the small ones. "I had my knee drained 21 times one season," he recalls.

Neely is not concerned about getting back into condition for the season. He's been this route before. "If this were my first injury, I might tend to baby it," he says, "but I know from experience that's not the best way to handle it."

It's Chargin' Time For Area Golfers

Next week is charging time for all those twilight golf teams which have a shot for first place in their respective leagues.

Those teams that are resting on top at the end of the week, namely Saturday, will represent their leagues in the 23rd annual Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament.

This year's Aug. 20 test will be held at Golden Acres Country Club, site of several past tourneys.

As of Thursday, 29 entries have been sent in for the 18-hole affair next month.

The following leagues are listed below along with the course they play on:

Mount Prospect Country Club — Monday Night League, Tuesday Night League and Friday Night League.

Rob Roy Country Club — Tuesday Night League, St. James League, Fastex League, Universal Oil League and St. Alphonsus League.

Golden Acres Country Club — City Products League, Chemplex Men's League, Twinbrook YMCA League and the three divisions of the Western Electric League.

Buffalo Grove Golf Club — Sara Lee League and Buffalo Grove Men's League.

Old Orchard Country Club — Scratch League, St. Colette's League, NSMA League and Arlington VFW League.

White Pines Golf Club — Tioga VFW League.

All of the teams that represent these leagues will be vying for these prizes:

- Large traveling team trophy.
- 4 silver Revere bowls for first place.
- 4 trophies for second and a like number for third.
- 8 golf passes for fourth.
- Dozen top quality golf balls for low net and a like quantity for low gross.
- $100 cash award for a hole-in-one.

As soon as the first-place team is determined, secretaries are urged to get the entry blank with accompanying check in the mail promptly. This will greatly aid the tourney committee in setting up the tourney.

Hersey Wins, Then Loses

Hersey split a pair of Summer League games at the beginning of the week before rain forced postponement of one contest.

The Huskies of coach Harvey Foster had little trouble with visiting Crystal Lake, 8-2, before losing at Barrington 6-2.

In the loss, the Huskies were nursing a slim 2-1 lead before, as Foster put it, "the roof fell in." The Broncos exploded for five runs in the top of the seventh inning. (They were the visiting team because the game was switched from Hersey's field).

Pitcher John Kanellis, Foster said, "pitched a beautiful game. It was a crime he had to lose it. We committed a couple of errors in that last inning and everything went wrong."

Before that, Hersey had pulled into a 1-1 tie in the fifth when Al Weichers singled, was sacrificed by John Caruso and scored on an error. The Huskies took their 2-1 edge in the sixth when Mike Broderick doubled, was sacrificed by Casey Frankiewicz and scored on a wild pitch.

Hersey	000	011	0—2-3-3

Hersey easily claimed a shortened, five-inning 8-2 victory over Crystal Lake before the rains came. Wally Hinrichs pitched and got relief help from Bob Marzec. Weichers was the only Husky with two hits.

Hersey scored a pair in the first inning when Jack Crimmins walked, Kanellis tripled him in and Gary Hart singled in another.

The third run scored in the next inning when Art Hoestrey singled and was promptly tripled home by Mark Krause. The lead became 6-0 with three more in the third as Crimmins singled and stole second, Kanellis reached on a fielder's choice, Marzec walked, one run scored on a groundout and two more on an error.

Crystal Lake	000	20—	2-4-1

All-Out Battle For Top Spot

With the season past the halfway mark, it's starting to look like an all-out battle for the 1972 track championship at Raceway Park, the busy quarter-mile oval at 130th Street and South Ashland Avenue in Blue Island.

Judging by the first half showings of the top Late Model stock car drivers, the championship looks like a bumper to bumper duel between the 'old man' of the track, the sensational driving Bud Koehler of Blue Island, who is the current point leader; Bill McEnery of Evergreen Park known as the 'Mayor of Gas City' and Ray Young, the tobacco-chewin' truck driver from Dolton, whom Koehler rates as his most formidable challenger. Ray Freeman of Crete, the 1971 champion, and Jerry Kemperman of Blue Island are also in contention, but will need a strong finish to overcome the three current leaders. Koehler has won seven season track titles and appears headed for his eighth.

All these top drivers will be back in action for the race programs that are held at Raceway Park every Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights, with a 30-lap feature for the Late Models and a 20-lapper for the Super Sixes, who share the limelight with the Late Models on each program. Sunday night's program will be climaxed by a Destruction Derby. Last week 17 cars took part in the Demolition affair.

Races each night start at 8 o'clock following time trials at 6:30. Parking is always FREE to the patrons. Servicemen in uniform are admitted free to the track. *Children, 11 years old and under, are admitted free when accompanied by an adult. (*Except special events).

It's Chargin' Time For Area Golfers

Next week is charging time for all those twilight golf teams which have a shot for first place in their respective leagues.

Those teams that are resting on top at the end of the week, namely Saturday, will represent their leagues in the 23rd annual Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament.

This year's Aug. 20 test will be held at Golden Acres Country Club, site of several past tourneys.

As of Thursday, 29 entries have been sent in for the 18-hole affair next month. The following leagues are listed below along with the course they play on:

Arlington Country Club — Arlington Elk's Club League, Ekco Products, Inc. and Friday Night League.

Mount Prospect Country Club — Monday Night League, Tuesday Night League and Friday Night League.

Rob Roy Country Club — Tuesday Night League, St. James League, Fastex League, Universal Oil League and St. Alphonsus League.

Golden Acres Country Club — City Products League, Chemplex Men's League, Twinbrook YMCA League and the three divisions of the Western Electric League.

Buffalo Grove Golf Club — Sara Lee League and Buffalo Grove Men's League.

White Pines Golf Club — Tioga VFW League.

All of the teams that represent these leagues will be vying for these prizes:

- Large traveling team trophy.
- 4 silver Revere bowls for first place.
- 4 trophies for second and a like number for third.
- 8 golf passes for fourth.
- Dozen top quality golf balls for low net and a like quantity for low gross.
- $100 cash award for a hole-in-one.

As soon as the first-place team is determined, secretaries are urged to get the entry blank with accompanying check in the mail promptly. This will greatly aid the tourney committee in setting up the tourney.

Hersey Wins, Then Loses

Hersey split a pair of Summer League games at the beginning of the week before rain forced postponement of one contest.

The Huskies of coach Harvey Foster had little trouble with visiting Crystal Lake, 8-2, before losing at Barrington 6-2.

In the loss, the Huskies were nursing a slim 2-1 lead before, as Foster put it, "the roof fell in." The Broncos exploded for five runs in the top of the seventh inning. (They were the visiting team because the game was switched from Hersey's field).

Pitcher John Kanellis, Foster said, "pitched a beautiful game. It was a crime he had to lose it. We committed a couple of errors in that last inning and everything went wrong."

Before that, Hersey had pulled into a 1-1 tie in the fifth when Al Weichers singled, was sacrificed by John Caruso and scored on an error. The Huskies took their 2-1 edge in the sixth when Mike Broderick doubled, was sacrificed by Casey Frankiewicz and scored on a wild pitch.

Hersey	000	011	0—2-3-3

Hersey easily claimed a shortened, five-inning 8-2 victory over Crystal Lake before the rains came. Wally Hinrichs pitched and got relief help from Bob Marzec. Weichers was the only Husky with two hits.

Hersey scored a pair in the first inning when Jack Crimmins walked, Kanellis tripled him in and Gary Hart singled in another.

The third run scored in the next inning when Art Hoestrey singled and was promptly tripled home by Mark Krause. The lead became 6-0 with three more in the third as Crimmins singled and stole second, Kanellis reached on a fielder's choice, Marzec walked, one run scored on a groundout and two more on an error.

After Crystal Lake added its only two, Broderick put frosting on the cake with a long home run blast in the fifth.

All-Out Battle For Top Spot

With the season past the halfway mark, it's starting to look like an all-out battle for the 1972 track championship at Raceway Park, the busy quarter-mile oval at 130th Street and South Ashland Avenue in Blue Island.

Judging by the first half showings of the top Late Model stock car drivers, the championship looks like a bumper to bumper duel between the 'old man' of the track, the sensational driving Bud Koehler of Blue Island, who is the current point leader; Bill McEnery of Evergreen Park known as the 'Mayor of Gas City' and Ray Young, the tobacco-chewin' truck driver from Dolton, whom Koehler rates as his most formidable challenger. Ray Freeman of Crete, the 1971 champion, and Jerry Kemperman of Blue Island are also in contention, but will need a strong finish to overcome the three current leaders. Koehler has won seven season track titles and appears headed for his eighth.

All these top drivers will be back in action for the race programs that are held at Raceway Park every Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights, with a 30-lap feature for the Late Models and a 20-lapper for the Super Sixes, who share the limelight with the Late Models on each program. Sunday night's program will be climaxed by a Destruction Derby. Last week 17 cars took part in the Demolition affair.

Races each night start at 8 o'clock following time trials at 6:30. Parking is always FREE to the patrons. Servicemen in uniform are admitted free to the track. *Children, 11 years old and under, are admitted free when accompanied by an adult. (*Except special events).

Generous Rebels Rally For 5-5 Tie

After a layoff, the Northwest Rebels got back into action Wednesday but their 11-3 record still didn't change. They ended in a 5-5 tie against Northbrook at Glenbrook North High School in a game halted after eight innings because of darkness.

The Rebels had the early lead before falling behind in the middle innings, then rallied for two in the eighth to salvage the deadlock.

"It was our first game in a week and a half because of rain and a light schedule, and we were rusty," said player-coach Frank May after his squad committed four errirs. "Rick Peckel pitched a good ball game but didn't get enough support. Four of their five runs were unearned."

Mike Pettenuzzo led the attack with three hits in four at-bats and Bruce Frase had two hits for the Rebels.

Northwest scored single runs in the first, second and third innings, answered by a two-spot for Northbrook in the second. Those two came on two singles sandwiched around a pair of errors.

The Rebels got started after two outs in the first when Pettenuzzo smashed a double and scored on Mark Frase's single. The second-inning tally resulted from an error and Bruce Frase's double and the third came when Pettenuzzo singled, stole second; went to third on a groundout and scored on a balk.

For the next four innings the Rebels were held scoreless while took a 5-3 lead with the help of two more errors and three singles.

The final rally in the eighth started when May pinch-hit and belted a triple. Bruce Frase singled him in, Bill Maffy also singled and Steve Smith's double scored the tying run.

The Rebels will be at Aurora Saturday and at Kankakee Sunday for a doubleheader.

Nebraska Flavor In Annual Game

There will be a decided Nebraska flavor to the 39th Annual College All-Star football game when the 1971 All-Americans meet the world champion Dallas Cowboys next Friday in Soldier Field.

This is the largest coaching staff in the history of the All-Star classic.

In addition, six Cornhuskers are on the All-Stars' playing roster. They are Quarterbacks Jerry Tagge and Van Brownson, Defensive Lineman Larry Jacobson, Running Back Jeff Kinney, Linebacker Bob Terrio, and Guard Dick Rupert. Terrio and Rupert are the only free agents on the team.

Piepenbrink Holds Narrow Lead In V.F.W. Golf League Standings

For the third time this summer, the Arlington V.F.W. Golf League had to battle not only the difficult links at Old Orchard Country Club but also the evening rain last Monday.

The league leader with just one week to go until the cutoff date for the Paddock Golf Tournament is still Piepenbrink Movers in spite of a near washout in its match with Nebel Insurance.

Scott Tree and Landscaping swamped the league's tailenders, Kehe, Foy & Snelten Insurance, 20-4 to take over second place. Kolman Plumbing and Fetke Insurance won their marches to place third and fourth, respectively.

Wayne Rolfs of L'Nor Cleaners captured the low gross honors with an even par round of 34 and Glen Campbell of Nebel Insurance took the low net competition with a 42-10-32.

Thrills, Spills Return To Racing At Waukegan

The tow trucks and fire crews had a busy weekend at the Waukegan Speedway last Saturday and Sunday night as promoter Gordon Sill's new diet of late model sportsman races, street car races and special added attractions is putting the old-time "thrills, chills and spills" back into local racing.

Fans are commenting that they haven't seen this kind of action since the track was clay (1968 and before) and the speeds recorded by the new late model sportsman drivers equals the best turned in by the modified stock cars when the track was clay.

(The one-lap clay-track modified record is :15.98 set by John Reimer on August 28, 1966. George Dukas set the late model sportsman mark of :15.91 on July 1, 1972.)

And some familiar faces from the pre-pavement days are making their way back to the speedway with Bob Hopkins, Tom Reuss, Chuck Chadwick and Tomm Urban now racing while entires are expected shortly from Ray Dixon, Toby Aaron and Dick Dornbusch. Wally Cizanskas, Skip Don and 9-year-veteran Bob Klemm have been regular competitors all season.

Meanwhile George Dukas of Zion and Ted "The Flying Fatman" Richter continue to pace the new sportsman class in their respective 1961 Chevrolet and 1965 Chevelle. Jack Hemmings of North Chicago still holds the hot hand in the street car events while Fred Nereni of Waukegan has three demolition wins to his credit.

Special added attractions this weekend . . . at no increase in admission price . . . will be a powder puff derby Saturday night and the popular backwards forwards race on Sunday. The roll-over contest will continue on both nights.

On Sunday night, July 30, a special STOCK CAR FOOTBALL match has been scheduled with opposing teams attempting to push, ram and bounce a Volkswagen football into the enemy's goal.

Barrington Nips Knights

Prospect had ample opportunity to put Barrington away Wednesday evening, but the Knights couldn't come up with the big inning that would have blown the game open.

Four single-run innings cost Prospect a 5-4 decision to the Bronchos as stranded baserunners haunted the Knights all night.

The losers broke through for a marker in the first when Val Graffitti singled and completed his tour of the bases on three wild pitches. Barrington countered for a 1-1 standoff after one, but an error on Jim Altobelli's grounder and Kevin Kelly's base hit rocketed the Knights back on top.

While Prospect was notching singletons in the fifth and sixth on safeties by Steve Mahanna, Graffiti, Mark Hartley, Altobelli, Ken Kallberg and Kelly's sacrifice fly, the Bronchos rallied for a pair in each the fourth and sixth to squeeze out the decision.

Kelly worked one inning for the Knights and apparently wasn't fully warmed up. Mark Blasco came on and finished the game with a six-inning stint.

KING'S BISHOP, ruler of both the Pontiac Grand Prix and Round Table Handicaps at Arlington Park this meeting, will carry 112 pounds postward Saturday for the 62nd running of the $100,000-added American Derby to be contested at a mile and a furlong on the grass. Eddie Maple has drawn the favorite's riding assignment.

Jolly Roger's At The Helm

Roger Staubach has it made now. He's won his two-year battle to become No. 1 quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys. He was Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl victory over Miami last January. And as the Cowboys opened preparations here for their battle against the College All-Stars in Chicago's Soldier Field next Friday, the former Navy great's future lay glittering before him.

But Staubach is working harder than any rookie here. "Last year was just one year," he explains. "I haven't proved anything yet. It's nice to know that the job is mine, that all I have to do to hang onto it is to produce. But that's no reason for me to let up."

Staubach feels that he is still maturing as a quarterback. "I'm still learning to reorganize defenses," he says. "I definitely don't think I've reached my peak yet."

Roger, an All-American off the field as well as on, began training for the All-Star classic way back in April, at considerable financial sacrifice.

"Because I was the quarterback of the Super Bowl champions and the quarterback generally gets more credit than he deserves when a team wins, says Staubach. "I had a lot of offers over the off season. But I only accepted a few of them."

All-Star Game Draws Mexicans

One hundred and seventeen football fans from Mexico City have chartered a Braniff Airlines jet to come to Chicago for the College All-Star football game on Friday. The group, headed by Manual Rivias, will arrive on July 27 and take over two fliors of the Sheraton Blackstone hotel. They are Dallas Cowboy aficionados and call themselves the Cowboy gang.

Pro Scout Drools

Twenty-three of the players on the Dallas Cowboy roster for the Super Bowl game last January were graduates of Chicago's College All-Star game and will be with the Cowboys when they come to Soldier Field to meet this year's All-Star team next Friday.

Williams' Walks

BOSTON UPI — During the 1941 season, Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox walked at least once in 19 consecutive games.

Only 29 Openings In Grid League

Only 29 openings remain to be filled in the Arlington Heights boys' football program, according to league officials. All of these are in the Junior League, which is primarily for fifth graders and smaller sixth graders. Registration for these openings will be August 5, between 10 a.m. and noon, at the residence of Art Gollberg, 319 S. Yale, Arlington Heights.

Interested parents are urged to call Gollberg at 253-3151 to see if their son qualifies for the Junior League.

Selection is made on the basis of age, height and weight. Both the parent and child must be at the registration. A birth certificate is required for boys who have not participated in either football or baseball in the Arlington Heights program.

The registration fee of $20 covers the cost of equipment, other than personal items, and also for insurance.

Hersey Happenings

Three former Hersey High School athletes are making plans for the fall, but only two are happy about it.

Mark Leonhard, a three-sport letterman for the Huskies, has decided to choose the University of Tulsa. He will be receiving a full ride athletic scholarship in football. He might also play baseball.

Pat Teefey, a standout in both football and wrestling, will be going to Indiana State University on a combined athletic scholarship. He will be representing his new school in both sports in future seasons.

Bruce Frase, who received a baseball scholarship from Northern Illinois University last year, will have to resume his athletic career in a couple of years. His draft number came up recently and he must go into the Army in August.

Hockey History On WMAQ

The history of Illinois college hockey from the 1930's to the present will be presented on WMAQ-TV's "Sunday In Chicago" hosted by Bob Hale, Sunday, July 23.

Present with Hale will be WMAQ Radio newsman Mike Allen, who along with Sherwood Bassin, will explain in words and pictures the little known and historical aspects of college hockey in Illinois. Included will be pictures of the first collegiate hockey team in the state at the University of Illinois at Champaign and other noteworthy data.

Both Allen and Bassin will appear to explain the First Annual Illinois All-Star College Hockey Tournament, set to begin July 22 at the Oakton Ice Rink, 2800 Oakton Ave., Park Ridge. All proceeds go to Chicago area college hockey programs.

Elisco Top Circle Hurler

Paul Elisco, 20-year-old sophomore at the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle, was voted the Chikas' top pitcher for the 1972 season at the annual awards banquet.

Elisco posted a 4-4 record with a 3.03 ERA last spring. He led the team in victories, starts (9), complete games(3), innings pitched (59) and lowest ERA.

Chicago Circle had a 10-18 record in 1972, including a second place finish in the Chicagoland College Baseball League Tournament final.

A graduate of Hersey High School, where he lettered in baseball, basketball and football, Elisco majors in speech at Chicago Circle. He resides at 1915 Kiowa Lane in Mt. Prospect.

Redbirds To Travel

Illinois State University's first season as a basketball independent will take the Redbirds from coast to coast against top-flight major competition.

The 1972-73 schedule, announced by athletic director Milt Weisbecker, includes games at Jacksonville University on the Atlantic seaboard and at California and Pacific on the west coast.

In between those geographical points, Coach Will Robinson will send U.S. Olympic squad member Doug Collins and the Redbirds against some of the best in the midwest — and other regions.

In the Fourth Flight, Lee Yelovich won both low gross and low net honors with 70 and 34, respectively. Donna Jewel parred the sixth hole. Elaine Regan had the lowest number of putts with 18.

PGA Yells 'Fore' When Dave Talks

by FRANK LINDY

DENVER, Colo. — (NEA) — "Most guys playing the pro golf tour," says Dave Hill in no uncertain tones, "seem to be afraid to voice an opinion about anything."

That has never been said about Hill, his sport's most outspoken individualist. He has strong opinions about virtually everything and will express them at the drop of a tee.

He has been fined for his remarks, and last year sued the Professional Golfers' Association and its Tournament Players Division for, among other things, "violating his constitutional right to free speech." (The suit was settled out of court with neither side publicly proclaiming victory.)

"I don't see why athletes cannot have the freedom to say what they think" Hill says. "Especially in a sport like golf where I'm my own boss and have to foot all my own bills.

"I keep hearing that I'm controversial, but I don't go around looking for trouble. Most of the things I've said that got a lot of attention were in response to reporters' questions. I've never ducked a question and I don't plan to start now.

"I suppose the writers come to me because they know most of the other players aren't going to say anything. There are more than a few guys on the tour who are glad when I speak up, because then they don't have to."

A couple of Hill's more notorious remarks were directed at a U.S. Open site and British galleries, respectively. His views probably were concurred with by most of his fellow players but they remained quieter.

When asked what was lacking at the 1970 U.S. Open site, the Hazeltine course in Minnesota, Hill cracked: "Just 80 acres of corn and a few cows." The nation's headline writers went wild.

After an unhappy experience with a customarily patriotic British golf crowd, Hill was asked if he would return to Great Britain. "Only," he replied, "if I die and my casket is shipped here by mistake."

Lost in translation, unfortunately, was Hill's puckish sense of humor. He intended both remarks as much in fun as anything else.

"Nowadays everybody takes golf so deathly seriously," he says. "It's strictly business with guys like Frank Beard. They're always complaining how much work it is. This game wasn't meant to be played so seriously. It's for fun — it's not a religion.

"I get as fed up with it as anybody else who does something to excess. I can get to where I hate tournament golf, but I still love to come home to Denver and play with backer friends. It's still only a game, you know."

Because he gets so tense if he plays the tour for long stretches, Hill is cutting down his schedule. He has played in only about half the tournaments and has come back from a slump by winning one title and earning more than $65,000 already.

"In the past I've stayed out here and beaten my head against the wall and lost 35 pounds in a year," says Hill, who weighs only 155 top weight with a couple of clubs under his arm. "It isn't worth it. Now I get away and forget about it and relax. I pick my spots."

On the course — not when he thinks something needs saying.

Tourney Course Altered

The Tournament Committee of the Chick Evans Amateur Golf Tournament made the 54-Hole Championship Flight more competitive by revamping the South Course layout of the White Pines Golf Club, whereby the contestants will play the 16th, 17th, and 18th holes over the North Course, thus increasing the yardage for the 18 holes from 6,340 yards to 6,746 yards, an increase of 406 yards, and an increase in total par from 70 to 71.

The Championship Flight is open to amateur golfers with zero to eight Handicaps.

4-Time Olympic Champion Puts His 'Plate' On Shelf

NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) —n stead of going to the Olympics where he would inevitably win another gold medal for the discus throw, Al Oerter will remain home in Long Island sprinkling water on his turnip patch.

He says he probably won't even watch the discus competition on television.

"You don't see the true Olympics on television, anyway," says Oerter. "In fact, you hardly even see the true Olympics at the time of the event. It's what happens in the pits in the two weeks before the event that counts."

Oerter is an undeniable expert on the subject. He performed the unique feat of winning gold medals in four successive Olympics, 1956, 1960, 1964 and 1968.

Oerter believes that at age 35 it would take him three hours a day of tiwling and lunging and grunting and heaving his heavy plate to assure himself gold medal No. 5. Once it took him half that time. "It's too much to ask of a family man at my age," says Oerter.

So he will spend his time now putting the vegetables on the table ("I'm an organic gardening freak" and putting bread on the table (he's data communications manager for the Grumman Corp.) for his wife and two daughters.

He stays in condition by jogging 15-20 minutes a day, and adamantly says he has flung his last serious disk.

He has lost 60 pounds to prove it. He would beef up to 295 pounds for the event, but now is back to his "normal" weight, a weight which allows the 6-4 Oerter to get out of a chair without a struggle.

"I can stay away from the discus throw if I want to," said Oerter recently, at an Olympic fund-raising luncheon sponsored by the Red Barn Restaurants. "In fact, that's one reason I was so successful at it. Other guys would practice all the time. I'd practice sometimes. It's kept me fresh."

He says he never has had an interest in spectator sports, and the discus throw is no exception.

The Olympics for Oerter was never approached as the programs state, "in the spirit of international comity to be advanced by the celebration of chivalrous and peaceful contests." Nor did he ever begin a swirl in the discus circle for the glorification of his country. "I'm as patriotic as the next guy," says Oerter, "but I wanted to win for me. It was a personal thing. I know it was the same for the others, too."

The Olympic Village was a good place to be chummy with people from other nations, as long as they weren't competing in your event. "I scarcely tried to improve another discus thrower's performance," he said.

What Oerter will be missing on TV, he said, would be the "zonking" that goes on in the pits, the practice sessions for two weeks before the event.

He'd walk over to a Romanian discus thrower and ask him how Poland was.

AL OERTER, a fixture on the top over four years after winning the discus, will not be competing in the Olympics this fall. Here he flings his way to his fourth straight gold medal at Mexico City in 1968.

said Oerter. "Zonk. He was walking around like King Kong, now he was shrunk to size."

He'd tell another in practice that he was really throwing well and to keep throwing, hoping the guy would tire himself out. Meanwhile, Oerter watched from a supine position in the grass. When another opponent bragged that he had just thrown 225 feet, Oerter with feigned comradely interest would insist on seeing him do it again. "If he didn't," said Oerter, "it was all downhill for him from then on."

Oerter got his first such psyching lessons in his first Olympics, 1956, when, he recalls, "I was the rawest of rookies." He was practicing with Fortune Gordien, then the favorite and world record holder.

Gordien followed Oerter in the throw. He gradually began to hurry his throw so that Oerter hardly had time to breathe.

"He made me so nervous," recalls Oerter, "that I finally threw one backwards. It was an accident, but it whistled right past Gordien's ear and slammed into the net. It could have taken his head off. He was shaking. He didn't hurry me any more after that."

Late Models At Waukegan

The new late-model sportsman class will serve up another weekend of racing at Waukegan Speedway this Saturday and Sunday night with 25-lap features slated both nights.

On Saturday night there will be a special back-up race for the street cars along with a roll-over contest. Last Saturday's roll-over event had to be switched to Sunday when a 70-minute rain delay soaked the infield "launching" area.

Sunday's races will include another demolition derby which has proved so popular with the fans this month. There will be a $50 award going to the winning driver.

Ted Richter of Libertyville ('64 Chevelle), Chuck Bostick of Waukegan ('64 Ford) and George Dukas of Zion ('61 Chevrolet) have been the feature winners in this new class of cars which started July 2.

This week's entry field will be larger yet as several drivers are hard at work on new cars for this class and several former late model super stock drivers may be converting to the smaller (7½ inch) tires to compete in this class.

4-Time Olympic Champion Puts His 'Plate' On Shelf

NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) —n stead of going to the Olympics where he would inevitably win another gold medal for the discus throw, Al Oerter will remain home in Long Island sprinkling water on his turnip patch.

He says he probably won't even watch the discus competition on television.

"You don't see the true Olympics on television, anyway," says Oerter. "In fact, you hardly even see the true Olympics at the time of the event. It's what happens in the pits in the two weeks before the event that counts."

Oerter is an undeniable expert on the subject. He performed the unique feat of winning gold medals in four successive Olympics, 1956, 1960, 1964 and 1968.

Oerter believes that at age 35 it would take him three hours a day of tiwling and lunging and grunting and heaving his heavy plate to assure himself gold medal No. 5. Once it took him half that time. "It's too much to ask of a family man at my age," says Oerter.

So he will spend his time now putting the vegetables on the table ("I'm an organic gardening freak") and putting bread on the table (he's data communications manager for the Grumman Corp.) for his wife and two daughters.

He stays in condition by jogging 15-20 minutes a day, and adamantly says he has flung his last serious disk.

He has lost 60 pounds to prove it. He would beef up to 295 pounds for the event, but now is back to his "normal" weight, a weight which allows the 6-4 Oerter to get out of a chair without a struggle.

"I can stay away from the discus throw if I want to," said Oerter recently, at an Olympic fund-raising luncheon sponsored by the Red Barn Restaurants. "In fact, that's one reason I was so successful at it. Other guys would practice all the time. I'd practice sometimes. It's kept me fresh."

He says he never has had an interest in spectator sports, and the discus throw is no exception.

The Olympics for Oerter was never approached as the programs state, "in the spirit of international comity to be advanced by the celebration of chivalrous and peaceful contests." Nor did he ever begin a swirl in the discus circle for the glorification of his country. "I'm as patriotic as the next guy," says Oerter, "but I wanted to win for me. It was a personal thing. I know it was the same for the others, too."

The Olympic Village was a good place to be chummy with people from other nations, as long as they weren't competing in your event. "I scarcely tried to improve another discus thrower's performance," he said.

What Oerter will be missing on TV, he said, would be the "zonking" that goes on in the pits, the practice sessions for two weeks before the event.

He'd walk over to a Romanian discus thrower and ask him how Poland was, said Oerter. "Zonk. He was walking around like King Kong, now he was shrunk to size."

He'd tell another in practice that he was really throwing well and to keep throwing, hoping the guy would tire himself out. Meanwhile, Oerter watched from a supine position in the grass. When another opponent bragged that he had just thrown 225 feet, Oerter with feigned comradely interest would insist on seeing him do it again. "If he didn't," said Oerter, "it was all downhill for him from then on."

Oerter got his first such psyching lessons in his first Olympics, 1956, when, he recalls, "I was the rawest of rookies." He was practicing with Fortune Gordien, then the favorite and world record holder.

Gordien followed Oerter in the throw. He gradually began to hurry his throw so that Oerter hardly had time to breathe.

"He made me so nervous," recalls Oerter, "that I finally threw one backwards. It was an accident, but it whistled right past Gordien's ear and slammed into the net. It could have taken his head off. He was shaking. He didn't hurry me any more after that."

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Milton Richman

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jackie Robinson, you'd figure, would be down now. Way down.

The tragic death of his son in an auto accident not that long ago took a lot out of him. Gil Hodges' death and Roy Campanella being stricken again, coming one on top of the other as they did, shook him up tremendously also.

More recently, Jackie Robinson discovered added trouble. His eyes.

Due to diabetes, Robinson's vision deteriorated recently to the point where he was unable to drive his car and somebody had to take him every day to his office which he occupies as president of Goodrich Associates Construction Co.

Jackie Robinson would like to read "The Boys of Summer," Roger Kahn's best-seller, because he's an integral part of the book and it would bring back a lot of warm memories of his days with the old Brooklyn Dodgers. But he's unable to.

"I can't read except very close, and then the words kind of go together and it's difficult," he says. "I have been unable to read 'the Boys of Summer,' but I've gotten tremendous thrills out of the few pages my wife, Rachel, has been able to read to me."

Ordinarily you'd figure all these problems have Jackie Robinson down, but if that's the way you figure, you're 100 per cent wrong.

The 53-year-old ex-Dodger second baseman isn't the least bit down.

He demonstrated that Wednesday when he was honored here by the U.S. Virgin Islands government for developing opportunities down through the years for black athletes.

Former ballplayers like Joe Black, Bobby Thomson, Ralph Branca, Sandy Amoros, Valmy Thomas, Clyde Sukeforth and Buck Leonard all had some fine words to say about him. Black and Thomas were particularly eloquent.

But later, after he had thanked all those who come up and congratulated him, Jackie Robinson was the most eloquent of all.

Certainly his latest adversity hasn't put any crimp in his lifestyle. If anything, he exudes more cheer, more good feeling, than ever before.

How does he do it?

"Well," he says, laughing, "I take the bitter with the sweet, you know. What are we going to do? We have some problems, but if we sit and mope about them, we're not going to cure them. That will only compound them. So I follow my doctor's orders and try to get the problems that I have eliminated."

Robinson has "very little vision" in his right eye. His left one also has given him trouble but is much better now, he says.

"The doctor feels my right eye is getting better and he feels if there is some progress it's very encouraging. But if it doesn't get better we'll have to try to cure the leakage we have in the blood vessel, and if we can clear that, then they will operate.

"If it's successful, I'll see again; if not, then I may lose the vision in the right eye. But hopefully it's going to work out."

It wouldn't be quite accurate to say Robinson never becomes depressed.

"There are times when I get tremendously depressed," he says, "but when you have the kind of family that I have, and the love and respect which come from my children it's beautiful. The fact I have such a great family is of great help to me. We have grown closer and closer since our tragedy concerning our son and that has been a tremendous help."

As far as baseball goes, Robinson says what bothered him until now is "the way it reached out to old managers who had been fired for incompetence and brought them back when there were guys like Frank Robinson, who has made fantastic contributions and wants to manage, and others like Jim Gilliam, Elston Howard or even a Willie Mays or an Ernie Banks, all guys who have shown their ability.

"I think it's tragic none of them have been given a chance because if it hadn't been for the blacks, there's no telling where baseball would be today."

Robinson admits he would've liked to manage. Once, but no more.

"I even had an offer from Montreal," he says. "I think it was in 1955 and they asked me if I'd be interested. Even though it wasn't an official thing, it was encouraging and I said certainly I'd be interested. But no other offer ever was forthcoming. I don't want to manage now. I've got too many other problems to even think about it."

Raasch's Ace Highlights Play

Gene Raasch, playing for the Licht Paint in the Mount Prospect Tuesday Golf League, fired a hole-in-one on the 160-yard par 3 seventh hole at Mount Prospect Golf Club. His ace and league leading Kersting Garden Center's 7½-2½ victory highlighted play this week.

Kersting Center now holds a 3½-point advantage over second-place Kirchhoff Insurance with one match remaining before the deadline for the Paddock Golf Tournament. The team in first as of July 29 will compete at the tourney this year at Golden Acres Country Club.

Kirchoff meanwhile dropped another close one 4½-5½, this time to Mount Prospect State Bank, and moved a little further out of contention.

The Kersting Garden Center-Licht Paint match saw the hole-in-one scored on the 160 yard seventh hole by Licht's Gene Raasch. Kersting's Wayne White, who shot a 38 gross, 31 net to Raasch's 40 gross, 33 net, winning 2 points plus the bonus for low individual net.

Other point winners for Kersting's were Don Snyder 1½ points versus Kermie Lemay's ½, and Dave Kluxdall 2 points against Hal Wolff.

Only winner for Licht's was Bill Skibbe, who took 2 from sponsor Bob Kersting.

Meanwhile, a new name appeared among the top three, as Kruse's Tavern wiped out Annen & Busse Realtors 8-2, and pushed into 3rd place, supplanting George L. Busse & Co., who fought to a 5-5 tie with Louie's Barber Shop.

In other matches, Morton Pontiac dumped Illinois Range 7½-2½, while Busse-Biermann Hardware swept to a 9½-½ win over Ed and Gil's Barber Shop in the best performance of the session, and Busse-Biermann's best of the 1972 season.

In addition to Raasch's eagle one on the seventh, birdies were reported by Elliott No. 13, D. Sheean No. 14, and E. Spletzer No. 16.

Spletzer gained low gross honors with his one-over-par 37 on the second 9 and a tie for low net honors with Wayne White, each scoring 31's.

Ed Pociask, with a 39 over the second nine, was the only other contestant to break the 40 barrier.

Milton Richman

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jackie Robinson, you'd figure, would be down now. Way down.

The tragic death of his son in an auto accident not that long ago took a lot out of him. Gil Hodges' death and Roy Campanella being stricken again, coming one on top of the other as they did, shook him up tremendously also.

More recently, Jackie Robinson discovered added trouble. His eyes.

Due to diabetes, Robinson's vision deteriorated recently to the point where he was unable to drive his car and somebody had to take him every day to his office which he occupies as president of Goodrich Associates Construction Co.

Jackie Robinson would like to read "The Boys of Summer," Roger Kahn's best-seller, because he's an integral part of the book and it would bring back a lot of warm memories of his days with the old Brooklyn Dodgers. But he's unable to.

"I can't read except very close, and then the words kind of go together and it's difficult," he says. "I have been unable to read 'the Boys of Summer,' but I've gotten tremendous thrills out of the few pages my wife, Rachel, has been able to read to me."

Ordinarily you'd figure all these problems have Jackie Robinson down, but if that's the way you figure, you're 100 per cent wrong.

The 53-year-old ex-Dodger second baseman isn't the least bit down.

He demonstrated that Wednesday when he was honored here by the U.S. Virgin Islands government for developing opportunities down through the years for black athletes.

Former ballplayers like Joe Black, Bobby Thomson, Ralph Branca, Sandy Amoros, Valmy Thomas, Clyde Sukeforth and Buck Leonard all had some fine words to say about him. Black and Thomas were particularly eloquent.

But later, after he had thanked all those who came up and congratulated him, Jackie Robinson was the most eloquent of all.

Certainly his latest adversity hasn't put any crimp in his lifestyle. If anything, he exudes more cheer, more good feeling, than ever before.

How does he do it?

"Well," he says, laughing, "I take the bitter with the sweet, you know. What are we going to do? We have some problems, but if we sit and mope about them, we're not going to cure them. That will only compound them. So I follow my doctor's orders and try to get the problems that I have eliminated."

Robinson has "very little vision" in his right eye. His left one also has given him trouble but is much better now, he says.

"The doctor feels my right eye is getting better and he feels if there is some progress it's very encouraging. But if it doesn't get better we'll have to try to cure the leakage we have in the blood vessel, and if we can clear that, then they will operate.

"If it's successful, I'll see again; if not, then I may lose the vision in the right eye. But hopefully it's going to work out."

It wouldn't be quite accurate to say Robinson never becomes depressed.

"There are times when I get tremendously depressed," he says, "but when you have the kind of family that I have, and the love and respect which come from my children it's beautiful. The fact I have such a great family is of great help to me. We have grown closer and closer since our tragedy concerning our son and that has been a tremendous help."

As far as baseball goes, Robinson says what bothered him until now is "the way it reached out to old managers who had been fired for incompetence and brought them back when there were guys like Frank Robinson, who has made fantastic contributions and wants to manage, and others like Jim Gilliam, Elston Howard or even a Willie Mays or an Ernie Banks, all guys who have shown their ability.

"I think it's tragic none of them have been given a chance because if it hadn't been for the blacks, there's no telling where baseball would be today."

Robinson admits he would've liked to manage. Once, but no more.

"I even had an offer from Montreal," he says. "I think it was in 1955 and they asked me if I'd be interested. Even though it wasn't an official thing, it was encouraging and I said certainly I'd be interested. But no other offer ever was forthcoming. I don't want to manage now. 'Rusty Nail'—An Experience

What are the odds against a golfer scoring a hole-in-one? what are the odds against one of the nation's top professionals getting an ace in a specified hole during the Westchester Classic August 10. 11, 12, and13?

The answer to the first question could be as high as 100,000 to one based on the estimated number of golfers, the number of average rounds, the total of par three holes and so forth.

The second question may be resolved at the 189-yard seventh hole (called the 16th in the Classic) of the Westchester Country Club in Harrison, New York, when the first pro to score a hole-in-one during the regular tournament will earn $5,000 for himself and $5,000 for the Westchester Hospitals charity.

According to a spokesman for the Drambuie Company of Edinburgh, Scotland, that firm will put up the $10,000 annual prize. Drambuie has sponsored the annual Rusty Nail Hole-In-One Sweepstakes in the United States since 1961. It is open to any golfer in the country who scores an ace on a regulation course. First prize is a trip to Scotland for two and $1,000 with another $1,000 going to the professional who sends in the winning entry.

Should the pros in the Classic fail to produce an ace this year at the desig nated hole, next year's pro award would be $6,000 and would be increased each year by a thousand dollars.

Although approximately 50,000 swings have been recorded on Par 3's in the eight years of the Classic and its predecessor tournament, the Thunderbird, no one has ever registered an ace during the actual championship tournament.

One of the most intriguing accomplishments in sports, certainly one of the most satisfying to an individual, is the scoring of a hole-in-one by a golfer. Possibly because the odds are so great aainst one or perhaps because of the sudden excitement it creates . . . the fact remains that even veteran professionals call it one of the greatest of all thrills.

It's the shot that puts a golfer in a most exclusive group . . . a feat that a duffer can enjoy as much, if not more than even a professional. Sam Snead, surely one of the most famous contemporary golfers, never had a hole-in-one according to golfing biographers. Nor did the great Bobby Jones experience the thrill of an ace. On the other hand, Pro Art Wall claims to have recorded 38.

President Richard Nixon, a sometimes golfer, had one, but the late General Dwight D Eisenhower, who played every chance he could get, never scored an ace on a regulation course He did get one on a short course in Palm Springs, California.

With more than 12,000,000 enthusiasts of all ages, shapes and sizes digging up golfing real esate in the United States, the incidence of holes-in-one has increased dramatically from the early fifties when such records were first kept. That year there was a total of 1,421 aces reported in the country. In 1972 some 11 to 12 thousand are predicted, and that doesn't count the ones registered at par 3 or "short" courses.

Up until a few years ago a golfer could get an insurance policy from Lloyds of London that would pay off for the "19th" hole watering ceremonies traditionally paid for by the dzed acer. But the British underwriters discontinued such insurance when aces became more adundant.

Today, however, most private clubs have hole-in-one insurance pools where for a dollar or so a golfer can finance the celebration of his feat in proper style.

Is it luck or skill? Well, a 71-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Fred Reeves of Midland, Michigan, had one on her very first round of golf.

Here are some hole-in-one records from Golf Digest's Bureau of Vital Golf Statistics:

LONGEST: 444 yards, by Robert Mittera, Omaha, Neb., on the 16th hole at Miracle Hills Golf Course, Omaha, on Oct. 7, 1965.

LONGEST BY WOMAN: 393 yards by Marie Robie, Wollaston, Mass., on Sept. 4, 1969

OLDEST MAN: George Henry Miller, 93, Anaheim, Calif., on the 116-yard 11th hole at the Anaheim Municipal Golf Course on Dec. 4, 1970.

OLDEST WOMAN: Edna Hussey, 81, Cincinnati, Ohio, on the 135-yard 5th hole at the California Municipal Golf Course, Cincinnati, June 26, 1969.

YOUNGEST: Tommy Moore, 6 (plus one month, 7 days), Hagerstown, Md , on the 145-yard fourth hole at Woodbrier Golf Course, Martinsville, W. Va , on Mar. 8, 1968. Tommy also made another hole-in one on this hole before he turned seven YOUNGEST GIRL:. Pattie Weller, 10 (plus 5 weeks) Vienna, Va , on the 128-yard 11th hole at the International Town & C.C. Vienna, on Sept. 15, 1962.

SUCCESSIVE ACES: Norman Manley, Saugus, Calif., holed out successive tee shots on the 330-yard, par 4 7th and 290-yard par 4 8th at Del Valley, C.C , Saugus, on Aug. 4, 1964, the only time par-4 holes have been consecutively aced Only four other instances of successive holes-in-one by a single player have been recorded. All were on par 3 holes

MOST IN ONE CALENDAR YEAR 11, by Dr. Joseph O Boydstone, Bakersfield, California, in 1962.

'Rusty Nail'—An Experience

What are the odds against a golfer scoring a hole-in-one? what are the odds against one of the nation's top professionals getting an ace in a specified hole during the Westchester Classic August 10, 11, 12, and13?

The answer to the first question could be as high as 100,000 to one based on the estimated number of golfers, the number of average rounds, the total of par three holes and so forth.

The second question may be resolved at the 189-yard seventh hole (called the 16th in the Classic) of the Westchester Country Club in Harrison, New York, when the first pro to score a hole-in-one during the regular tournament will earn $5,000 for himself and $5,000 for the Westchester Hospitals charity.

According to a spokesman for the Drambuie Company of Edinburgh, Scotland, that firm will put up the $10,000 annual prize. Drambuie has sponsored the annual Rusty Nail Hole-In-One Sweepstakes in the United States since 1961. It is open to any golfer in the country who scores an ace on a regulation course. First prize is a trip to Scotland for two and $1,000 with another $1,000 going to the professional who sends in the winning entry.

Should the pros in the Classic fail to produce an ace this year at the designated hole, next year's pro award would be $6,000 and would be increased each year by a thousand dollars.

Although approximately 50,000 swings have been recorded on Par 3's in the eight years of the Classic and its predecessor tournament, the Thunderbird, no one has ever registered an ace during the actual championship tournament.

One of the most intriguing accomplishments in sports, certainly one of the most satisfying to an individual, is the scoring of a hole-in-one by a golfer. Possibly because the odds are so great aainst one or perhaps because of the sudden excitement it creates . . . the fact remains that even veteran professionals call it one of the greatest of all thrills.

It's the shot that puts a golfer in a most exclusive group . . . a feat that a duffer can enjoy as much, if not more than even a professional. Sam Snead, surely one of the most famous contemporary golfers, never had a hole-in-one according to golfing biographers. Nor did the great Bobby Jones experience the thrill of an ace. On the other hand, Pro Art Wall claims to have recorded 38.

President Richard Nixon, a sometimes golfer, had one, but the late General Dwight D. Eisenhower, who played every chance he could get, never scored an ace on a regulation course. He did get one on a short course in Palm Springs, California.

With more than 12,000,000 enthusiasts of all ages, shapes and sizes digging up golfing real esate in the United States, the incidence of holes-in-one has increased dramatically from the early fifties when such records were first kept. That year there was a total of 1,421 aces reported in the country. In 1972 some 11 to 12 thousand are predicted, and that doesn't count the ones registered at par 3 or "short" courses.

Up until a few years ago a golfer could get an insurance policy from Lloyds of London that would pay off for the "19th" hole watering ceremonies traditionally paid for by the dzed acer. But the British underwriters discontinued such insurance when aces became more adundant.

Today, however, most private clubs have hole-in-one insurance pools where for a dollar or so a golfer can finance the celebration of his feat in proper style.

Is it luck or skill? Well, a 71-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Fred Reeves of Midland, Michigan, had one on her very first round of golf.

Here are some hole-in-one records from Golf Digest's Bureau of Vital Golf Statistics:

LONGEST: 444 yards, by Robert Mittera, Omaha, Neb., on the 10th hole at Miracle Hills Golf Course, Omaha, on Oct. 7, 1965.

LONGEST BY WOMAN: 393 yards by Marie Robie, Wollaston, Mass., on Sept. 4, 1969.

OLDEST MAN: George Henry Miller, 93, Anaheim, Calif., on the 116-yard 11th hole at the Anaheim Municipal Golf Course on Dec. 4, 1970.

OLDEST WOMAN: Edna Hussey, 81, Cincinnati, Ohio, on the 135-yard 5th hole at the California Municipal Golf Course, Cincinnati, June 26, 1969.

YOUNGEST: Tommy Moore, 6 (plus one month, 7 days), Hagerstown, Md., on the 145-yard fourth hole at Woodbrier Golf Course, Martinsville, W. Va., on Mar. 8, 1968. Tommy also made another hole-in one on this hole before he turned seven.

YOUNGEST GIRL:. Pattie Weller, 10 (plus 5 weeks) Vienna, Va., on the 128-yard 11th hole at the International Town & C.C. Vienna, on Sept. 15, 1962.

SUCCESSIVE ACES: Norman Manley, Saugus, Calif., holed out successive tee shots on the 330-yard, par 4 7th and 290-yard par 4 8th at Del Valley, C.C., Saugus, on Aug. 4, 1964, the only time par-4 holes have been consecutively aced. Only four other instances of successive holes-in-one by a single player have been recorded. All were on par 3 holes.

MOST IN ONE CALENDAR YEAR: 11, by Dr. Joseph O. Boydstone, Bakersfield, California, in 1962.

'Super Joe' Heads Santa Fe Card

Santa Fe Speedway presents its fourth of six motorcycle tourist trophy races Friday night. The American Motorcycle Association-sanctioned program, featuring expert, junior, and novice events, is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Time trials are set for 8 p.m.

"Super Joe" Elnhorn, holder of the world's record in motorcycle jumping, will attempt to jump a minimum of 10 cars and two vans at Santa Fe Friday. Einhorn, whose 144-foot leap on ABC's Wide World of Sports bettered Evil Knievel's jump by fifteen feet, will add a car each night reaching 14 vehicles on Sunday night; he will attempt his leaps during the regular TT motorcycle program on Friday nite. Friday's show will start at 8:30 p.m.

AMA national point leader Mark Brelsford from Los Altos, California won the first two Santa Fe Speedway TT shows; the Harley-Davidson riding phenom will again be cast in the favorite's role for the Friday night go. Other top TT riders include Jerry and Buddy Powell from Noblesville, Indiana and Richard Herber of Decatur, Illinois.

TT events consist of riders weaving in and out of a specially constructed obstacle course that requires sharp left and right hand turns. Afrer the cyclist masters the precise maneuvering of the snakelike terrain, he must catapult over a hill-like surface, land smoothly, and then continue without breaking stride. TT competition is the ultimate motorcycle test in balance, steering and timing; one poor take-off on a leap or one fraction-of-a-second mistake on steering can result in an accident or, at the least, the loss of precious seconds in the competition.

Santa Fe Speedway will host TT programs on August 18 and September 1, as well as the July 21 date.

Irrepressible Boby Mann, 1968 sportsman titleholder from La Grange, will continue his quest for an unprecedented second championship Saturday and Sunday night when the Speedway hosts another weekend of hard-charging stock car excitement. Twenty-five lap features for late model and sportsman pilots on the quarter-mile clay oval highlight the weekend's auto racing thrills. Starting time is 8:30 p.m. on Saturday night with an 8 p.m. first-race time on Sunday night. Time trials precede the opening event by one hour.

No sportsman pilot has ever won the season's title more than once. However, Mann leads second place driver Art Fehrman of La Grange Park by more than one hundred points; furthermore, Mann has been relentless of late adding two more feature wins last weekend to give him 13 for the season.

Other sportsman drivers who have been impressive lately include Phil Le Grand of La Grange, Bill Knippenberg out of Darien, Al Madden from Lemont, Chuck Sergo from Forest Park and Pat McCarty of La Grange.

Feature winners in the sportsman division have been the following: Mann (13); McCarty (4); Fehrman (4); and Jan Johnson (2). Two other drivers have won a feature in the clearly Mann-dominated main event statistics

Santa Fe Speedway hosts top-action stock car races each Saturday and Sunday night throughout the racing season. The "busiest racing oval in Chicagoland" presents the All-Star Classic: on Saturday night July 29 featuring a 100-lapper on the half-mile oval. Exclusive motorcycle action — climaxed by the nationally prestigious Short Track Grand National Championship on Friday night, Aug. 11 — is another weekly Santa Fe attraction. The Speedway is located at 91st and Wolf Road.

Call Illinois State

Not many schools in the midwest can match Illinois State University's total of five athletes in the 1972 Olympic Games at Munich, Germany.

The Redbirds are represented by one basketball player, three track men and one wrestler.

Illinois State senior Doug Collins of Benton is a member of the United States basketball team. Willie Williams of East Chicago Heights, a 1967 NCAA champion, is on the wrestling team in the 198-pound division.

Fiocca In Evans Tourney

The 17th annual Chick Evans Amateur Golf Tournament, one of the most popular local amateur meets every summer, starts Tuesday and continues for three days at White Pines Golf Club in Bensenville.

Area entries include Fremd High School golf coach Len Fiocca, who is fresh off winning the Chicago Amateur Championship last weekend, and Fred Fassnacht, playing out of Mount Prospect Country Club.

James Waring of Pine Hills Country Club will be defending his title of last year in the 54-hole medal tourney. Awards will be presented Thursday evening at a banquet under Chicagoland's dean of golf writers, Tommy Kouzmanoff, at the White Pines clubhouse.

This year's tourney includes a championship flight. Contestants must declare an eight or under handicap. The winner will receive a trophy, champions jacket and $100 worth of merchandise.

All golfers with a handicap of nine or more will compete in the first flight, second flight and Seven Clubs event Champion in the first flight will get a trophy and $75 in merchandise sponsored by Bee-Line Fashions, Inc. of Bensenville

Al Infusino, Director of the tournament, hopes the Bensenville Park District's 36-hole White Pines course will become permanent site of this annual classic White Pines, in preparation for toughening up its championship south course, added 200 tons of sand to its greens and fairway traps. With the switch of the 16th, 17th and 18th holes on the north course to the south, the championship layout became 480 yards longer.

Doughty Impresses

Glenn Doughty of Michigan, has impressed coaches and scouts at College All-Star workouts prior to next Friday's game.

"The wing back must be a versatile athlete and Doughty certainly is all of that," said Tom Osborne of Nebraska, who is helping to coach the All-Star receivers. "The position requires a fairly hard-nosed kind of player and Doughty is an aggressive kid. He's a good blocker, he carries the ball well, and he carries the ball well, and he has sure hands."

'Super Joe' Heads Santa Fe Card

Santa Fe Speedway presents its fourth of six motorcycle tourist trophy races Friday night. The American Motorcycle Association-sanctioned program, featuring expert, junior, and novice events, is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Time trials are set for 8 p.m.

"Super Joe" Einhorn, holder of the world's record in motorcycle jumping, will attempt to jump a minimum of 10 cars and two vans at Santa Fe Friday. Einhorn, whose 144-foot leap on ABC's Wide World of Sports bettered Evil Knievel's jump by fifteen feet, will add a car each night reaching 14 vehicles on Sunday night; he will attempt his leaps during the regular TT motorcycle program on Friday nite. Friday's show will start at 8:30 p.m.

AMA national point leader Mark Brelsford from Los Altos, California won the first two Santa Fe Speedway TT shows; the Harley-Davidson riding phenom will again be cast in the favorite's role for the Friday night go. Other top TT riders include Jerry and Buddy Powell from Noblesville, Indiana and Richard Herber of Decatur, Illinois.

TT events consist of riders weaving in and out of a specially constructed obstacle course that requires sharp left and right hand turns. Afrer the cyclist masters the precise maneuvering of the snakelike terrain, he must catapult over a hill-like surface, land smoothly, and then continue without breaking stride. TT competition is the ultimate motorcycle test in balance, steering and timing; one poor take-off on a leap or one fraction-of-a-second mistake on steering can result in an accident or, at the least, the loss of precious seconds in the competition.

Santa Fe Speedway will host TT programs on August 18 and September 1, as well as the July 21 date.

Irrepressible Boby Mann, 1968 sportsman titleholder from La Grange, will continue his quest for an unprecedented second championship Saturday and Sunday night when the Speedway hosts another weekend of hard-charging stock car excitement. Twenty-five lap features for late model and sportsman pilots on the quarter-mile clay oval highlight the weekend's auto racing thrills. Starting time is 8:30 p.m. on Saturday night with an 8 p.m. first-race time on Sunday night. Time trials precede the opening event by one hour.

No sportsman pilot has ever won the season's title more than once. However, Mann leads second place driver Art Fehrman of La Grange Park by more than one hundred points; furthermore, Mann has been relentless of late adding two more feature wins last weekend to give him 13 for the season.

Other sportsman drivers who have been impressive lately include Phil Le Grand of La Grange, Bill Knippenberg out of Darien, Al Madden from Lemont, Chuck Sergo from Forest Park and Pat McCarty of La Grange.

Feature winners in the sportsman division have been the following: Mann (13); McCarty (4); Fehrman (4); and Jan Johnson (2). Two other drivers have won a feature in the clearly Mann-dominated main event statistics.

Santa Fe Speedway hosts top-action stock car races each Saturday and Sunday night throughout the racing season. The "busiest racing oval in Chicagoland" presents the All-Star Classic: on Saturday night July 29 featuring a 100-lapper on the half-mile oval. Exclusive motorcycle action — climaxed by the nationally prestigious Short Track Grand National Championship on Friday night, Aug. 11 — is another weekly Santa Fe attraction. The Speedway is located at 91st and Wolf Road.

Call Illinois State

Not many schools in the midwest can match Illinois State University's total of five athletes in the 1972 Olympic Games at Munich, Germany.

The Redbirds are represented by one basketball player, three track men and one wrestler.

Illinois State senior Doug Collins of Benton is a member of the United States basketball team. Willie Williams of East Chicago Heights, a 1967 NCAA champion, is on the wrestling team in the 198-pound division.

Fiocca In Evans Tourney

The 17th annual Chick Evans Amateur Golf Tournament, one of the most popular local amateur meets every summer, starts Tuesday and continues for three days at White Pines Golf Club in Bensenville.

Area entries include Fremd High School golf coach Len Fiocca, who is fresh off winning the Chicago Amateur Championship last weekend, and Fred Fassnacht, playing out of Mount Prospect Country Club.

James Waring of Pine Hills Country Club will be defending his title of last year in the 54-hole medal tourney. Awards will be presented Thursday evening at a banquet under Chicagoland's dean of golf writers, Tommy Kouzmanoff, at the White Pines clubhouse.

This year's tourney includes a championship flight. Contestants must declare an eight or under handicap. The winner will receive a trophy, champions jacket and $100 worth of merchandise.

All golfers with a handicap of nine or more will compete in the first flight, second flight and Seven Clubs event. Champion in the first flight will get a trophy and $75 in merchandise sponsored by Bee-Line Fashions, Inc. of Bensenville.

Al Infusino, Director of the tournament, hopes the Bensenville Park District's 36-hole White Pines course will become permanent site of this annual classic. White Pines, in preparation for toughening up its championship south course, added 200 tons of sand to its greens and fairway traps. With the switch of the 16th, 17th and 18th holes on the north course to the south, the championship layout became 480 yards longer.

Doughty Impresses

Glenn Doughty of Michigan, has impressed coaches and scouts at College All-Star workouts prior to next Friday's game.

"The wing back must be a versatile athlete and Doughty certainly is all of that," said Tom Osborne of Nebraska, who is helping to coach the All-Star receivers. "The position requires a fairly hard-nosed kind of player and Doughty is an aggressive kid. He's a good blocker, he carries the ball well, and he carries the ball well, and he has sure hands."

DESPITE THE WEATHER and despite the inattentiveness of his audience, folk singer Arlo Guthrie, the featured entertainer for the evening, finished his Ravinia concert and included such songs as "City of New Orleans," and "Don't Think Twice." Once he asked listeners to "shut up."

AN EVENING'S worth of refreshment.

Ravinia Festival's Changing Image

by GENIE CAMPBELL

What's happening at Ravinia?

Some families still pack up a red checkered tablecloth, fried chicken and cole slaw, to picnic at Ravinia where for an entrance fee of $3, an individual can both absorb the tranquil park surroundings and cultural offering.

On a Sunday summer evening it may be the light stanzas of Mozart or Schumann filtering through the tree hung speakers originating from the Chicago Symphony Orchestra on stage of the pavilion.

Yet that is only one image of Ravinia, a very agreeable one, but one that is also increasingly fleeting.

There are other moods to Ravinia Festival that culture could hardly define.

POP CONCERTS in particular are becoming celebrated occasions for young people to gather together and share their wealth of dope, cheap wine and beer.

The saddest note to this entire ritual, however, is that the billed entertainer has little if any significance.

The pavilion does act as somewhat of a retreat where for an additional cash allotment one can actually buy a seat and see the performance, one step better than just listening through strategically placed speakers.

The added cost, one might assume, would separate the honest concert-goers from the party seekers.

And to some extent it does. Yet experience is telling. Just as soon as one takes a seat, the distinct odor of marijuana filters through the rows of chairs and the couple in front, without too much secrecy, take turns drinking Seagram's through a straw, the bottle partially concealed in a brown paper sack.

ALL IS IN DIRECT disregard to a printed request on the front page of each program, "Please, no smoking, beverages or ice cream inside the pavilion." (Ice cream I never did see.)

But so what. Who cares about the activity of one's neighbors as long as the conduct of the audience does not hamper the performance?

Arlo Guthrie wasn't so lucky. The antics of the crowd did spoil his concert last week at Ravinia.

It started out all right. Guthrie, famous for his 1967 hit, "Alice's Restaurant," and his performance in the movie of the same name, got through the first several numbers without interference.

BUT THEN, THE one factor that Ravinia has no control over whatsoever, the weather, sent its calling cards of thunder and lightening that caused the microphones to pop and the speakers to crackle. The extra commotion of firecrackers being set off outside the pavilion added to the general disturbance.

Arlo, his poise unshaken, continued to sing accompanying himself on banjo, guitar and piano with only the comment that he was worried his plugged-in electric bassist might fry.

Unfortunately the storm didn't blow over. When the downpour began, the lawn sitters rushed the entrances to the pavilion and crowded into every aisle and open space available.

HAVING ESCAPED from the rain, the audience, who in fact had just received free admission, did not view the situation as a golden listening opportunity. Attention diminished to such a low degree that Guthrie once even ordered everyone to "shut up . . . We can't even hear ourselves up here."

But it's a funny characteristic of an audience. When Guthrie finished and walked off stage (he never did sing "Alice's Restaurant"), the crowd gave him a standing ovation and shouted for an encore. When he did not respond, hand clapping turned to loud booing.

Guthrie did not return, but then who could blame him? The rudeness had stung even a contemporary folk singer and composer like Guthrie who seemingly would have no trouble identifying with a young audience.

OF COURSE, one could say that the spirit of the evening was severely dampened by the rain. I can't buy that. Nor, do I think, did Arlo Guthrie.

(A review of last weekend's performance of the Lar Lubovitch Dance Company appears inside Medley.)

A BOLD MOVE. Marijuana was plentiful even within the pavilion itself. While the handbill specifies no smoking or beverages inside, anything from Boone's Farm Strawberry Hill to dope was brought to the concert.

BEFORE THE RAIN STRUCK. Ravinia Park fills with the young on nights of pop concerts. Those wanting to spread their blankets close to the tree hung speakers must come early.

Pictured is the bathroom from my husband's childhood home in northern Wisconsin. Theirs was a three-bathroom house, for they had two more much like this one.

It was not until after World War II that plumbing and electricity reached their rather remote farm and made the old washstand sets obsolete. His mother made haste to dispose of them, but I asked for this one, and although she couldn't understand why I would want such a thing, she gave it to me. The others went to the dump, I suppose, or possibly to some neighbors who did not yet have the luxury of indoor plumbing.

Washstand sets such as this one were made with seven or eight pieces originally. In addition to the ewer (pitcher) and bowl, chamber pot and soap dish, there were a shaving mug, a jar for toothbrushes, a small jug for hot water and a slop bucket. Antiquers use them today for planting, made into lamps (isn't everything?) or simply as decor in a bedroom or large bath.

Families used wash sets for every bedroom, and since they were used so much, it is rare to find a complete set without cracks or chips. Ours shows much evidence of use, but I don't mind, since it is more of a keepsake.

Some friends have purchased the wash bowl and pitcher for serving food, such as salad for a party in the bowl or drinks in the pitcher. My mother-in-law's scrubbed Swedish conscience rebelled at this idea, and so I teased her by threatening to use ours to serve the Christmas Eve smorgasbord. Luckily she also had a great sense of humor.

A variety of pottery was used in making washstand sets, in England, Europe and the U.S. Some were plain white ironstone (the most handsome, to my thinking,) flow blue (the most expensive) and in many patterns and colors. The one shown has a sample floral decoration in gilt on white china. It was made by the U.S. Pottery Co. of Wellesville, Ohio.

Washstand sets were used, logically enough, with a washstand. This was a small dresser-like piece of furniture with one or more drawers and doors. The bowl and pitcher stood on top and the chamber pot was hidden behind the doors. Some fancy models had a towel rack across the back, or even a marble top and splashback, with little shelves for candle holders.

The washstands, or commodes as they are sometimes called, make super tables in almost any room of the house. My Sears Roebuck catalog of 1902 advertises washstands for $6.49, in golden oak. Often they were sold as part of a bedroom set, to match the other pieces.

A few years ago they could still be found at second hand prices, but they are at a premium today. You may still be lucky enough to find one lurking beneath many coats of paint in someone's basement or attic, and it's well worth restoring. Then, get yourself a washbowl and pitcher and take a giant step backward.

"IN THE NAME OF PROFIT," BY ROBERT HEILBRONER
Doubleday $6.95

The fast buck artists now carry impressive engineering degrees and wear beguiling smiles and well tailored suits, according to the facts documented in this collection of corporate horror stories.

The actions of these seemingly reputable businessmen appears unconscionable even though in many cases they seem an integral part of the system that develops company profits.

Otherwise how do you explain a major drug company that fights to market an anticholesterol drug that had reported side effects of causing blurred vision and loss of hair? Or General Motors first ignoring a bus owner with demonstrably unsafe buses, then trying to blather over his complaints?

Editor David Obst concluded: "Today's executive is often revealed here as a moral cripple, a man who has sold his soul to his employer, a man whose sense of social obligation is easily overwhelmed by his zeal for advancement and his rationalization about the sanctity of profit."

The nine songs and two interludes of "Moods" form yet another reaffirmation of the beauty of a Diamond song. The tunes and words are simple as always. For example in "Play Me," he sings, "You are the sun. I am the moon/You are the words. I am the tune /Play me."

Neil Diamond

It is this simplicity and the Diamond voice (with its teary quality at times) that make for a very effective tool in reaching an audeince, whether live or on record. He plays up-beat, quickening numbers like "Porcupine Pie" and Gitchy Goomy" and slower, reflective songs like "Morningside."

Although the Diamond album is simple, the setting is often quite effective — and it only makes the gem that more brilliant. Producer Tom Catalano likes a full sound and he gets it with Lee Holdridge's arrangements.

As with every new Diamond record, it is fun to go through and pick out the potential hits. "Moods" has plenty including "High Rolling Man," which has a touch of the "Proud Mary" chorus. Already, "Song Sung Blue" has made it to the top of the charts. It is one that invites singing along.

With "Moods," Diamond returns to just singing his own songs. This was not the case in "Stones," the prior album. According to Diamond, his song "I Am. . .I Said" was so autobiographical and consuming, he couldn't write for some time. Thus many unoriginal songs made up the balance of "Stones."

In a way that one song has ended a phase of Diamond's career and the new start, "Moods," is a good one. It is an album of the highest quality, an enjoyable listening experience.

Frank Sinatra has a pretty long and successful track record as a performer. His recently announced retirement from show business, therefore, should not stop albums of his from being recorded. After all, he has a back catalog of thousands of songs.

"Frank Sinatra's Greatest Hits Vol. 2" (Reprise FS 1034) contains some of the old pro's best songs plus some that have never before appeared in album form.

Side one is a reflective Sinatra — his voice showing some signs of age — singing of love and times past. Standouts are "Love's Been Good To Me," "Cycles" and "My Way."

Side two has the classic, "September of My Years" and those singles. "Something" and "Star" are nice but, on the whole, they are not Sinatra's best — they are just new.

Brooklyn's Dan Cassidy has just finished his first album, "Dan Cassidy" (Little David Records LD 1002). To help, he has invited many of his friends along. Too often though, his friends just get in the way.

There are spots where Cassidy almost has to shout out his lyrics over the din that all his friends are making, thus straining what otherwise would be a somewhat appealing voice.

"Wintersong" shows Cassidy at his best, both musically and lyrically. For the rest, we are given spate of heavy lyrics dripping with solutions to all the world's troubles. As so often, it just doesn't work.

Neither does the Irish flavor he tries to give a couple of the cuts.

The good moments are all too few, but since there are some it may be too early to give up on Dan Cassidy. Maybe next time?

Lubovitch Dance Style Unique

by MONICA WILCH

Trying to describe any sort of art is usually an exercise in futility, but especially so in the case of the Lar Lubovitch Dance Company.

One can say that they are a troupe of 16 talented dancers who perform ballet, jazz, contemporary and popular dance to music ranging from Handel and Bach to Stravinsky and Berio, but no words seem to convey what actually took place in Murray Theatre at Ravinia the past weekend.

I strongly suspect that the young choreographer Lar Lubovitch fully intends to evade any neat characterizations of his work. Note the tantalizingly inscrutable titles of his dance sequences: "The Time Before the Time After (After The Time Before)," "Whirligogs (Knots, Tangles, Confusion)," and "Some of the Reactions of Some of the People Some of the Time upon Hearing Reports of the Coming of the Messiah."

THE LATTER number, danced to Handel's "Messiah," subtly portrays a series of human emotions related to the text of the musical work. Especially effective was a segment entitled "How Beautiful" in which two of the white leotard-clad dancers performed a delicate and graceful ballet. At the moment when the chorus sings of peace, Mari Ono leapt and was caught by her partner Ernest Pagnano for an instant in a dovelike position.

In sharp contrast both to the ballet-like movements and the theological significance of this number, "Whirligogs," danced to Luciano Berio's Sinfonia, confronts the audience with almost brutal choreography depicting the idea of chaos and hopelessness offered by the choral text. Wearing black leotards and masks, the company, representing either evil or perhaps the unknown, goes through a frightening sequence of very angular and grotesque movements, climaxing when they finally overcome the two solo dancers — human beings — completely submerging them into the "depths" formed by a tangle of bodies.

WHETHER HE IS using ballet, jazz, pop or contemporary dance, or totally unclassifiable movements of his own invention, Lubovitch maintains always a unique and compelling style. Besides the sheer physicalness of his choreography — this is no art form for the super-sensitive — there is a certain unity that drives through all the numbers.

While Lubovitch creates an unending variety of movements, the end product is by no means a hodgepodge, but rather, is unusually clean and flowing. Add to this a fine sense of artistic balance. At any moment, if Lubovitch's dancers were to freeze, their positions would form an esthetically pleasing picture.

But still, the Lar Lubovitch Dance Company defies description, mainly because the whole does not equal the sum of the parts. There are two unknown quantities: The creative genius of Lar Lubovitch reacting with the imagination of the audience.

'Status Quo Vadis' Extended At Ivanhoe

Due to demand for tickets, the IVANHOE THEATRE is extending Donald Driver's hit comedy, "STATUS QUO VADIS," an additional six weeks. The play is now scheduled to close Sunday, Sept. 17.

"Status Quo Vadis" first opened at the Ivanhoe in August of 1971. It ran for 28 weeks and broke all previous box office attendance records. It re-opened June 14 for an eight-week engagement which has now extended into a 14-week run.

Some of the Chicago cast will stay with the play when it goes into rehearsal in late October for its scheduled Dec. 3 opening at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre on Broadway.

Humorist GEORGE CARLIN checks into the MILL RUN THEATER next Friday, July 28, to entertain audiences with his raps on the American scene.

A singer composer by the name of DAN CASSIDY is joining Carlin at the Niles theater-in-the-round for the two-night engagement.

TAMMY GRIMES, currently co-starring with BRIAN BEDFORD in the ACADEMY PLAYHOUSE production of "BLITHE SPIRIT," will remain at the Lake Forest theater for the second production in this summer's three-play series, George M. Cohan's mystery comedy, "THE TAVERN."

It will open next Thursday and run through Sunday, Aug. 20.

Dan Cassidy

GENCY O'HARE this Monday and will continue to entertain hotel guests through Aug. 5. Opening with her is comedian RUSTY RYAN.

THE NEW ESTABLISHMENT is now appearing at the NAVARONE RESTAURANT located at 1905 E. Higgins Road in Elk Grove Village. The group of entertainers will be at the restaurant through July 29.

Pianist JOSEPH KALICHSTEIN will be the featured soloist at GRANT PARK CONCERTS, 8 p.m. tomorrow and 7 p.m. Sunday.

Kalichstein, who made his Grant Park debut in 1968, returns for his fourth appearance at the Music Shell. He will perform the Schubert-Liszt "Wanderer" Fantasy.

Currently appearing at HENRICI'S STEAK AND LOBSTER in Arlington Heights are WENDY AND STORM.

Storm plays the 12-string guitar and Wendy, the bass. They combine talent to present a range of sounds from contemporary to old-time favorites.

A Paddock Review

Lubovitch Dance Style Unique

by MONICA WILCH

Trying to describe any sort of art is usually an exercise in futility, but especially so in the case of the Lar Lubovitch Dance Company.

One can say that they are a troupe of 16 talented dancers who perform ballet, jazz, contemporary and popular dance to music ranging from Handel and Bach to Stravinsky and Berio, but no words seem to convey what actually took place in Murray Theatre at Ravinia the past weekend.

I strongly suspect that the young choreographer Lar Lubovitch fully intends to evade any neat characterizations of his work. Note the tantalizingly inscrutable titles of his dance sequences: "The Time Before the Time After (After The Time Before)," "Whirligogs (Knots, Tangles, Confusion)," and "Some of the Reactions of Some of the People Some of the Time upon Hearing Reports of the Coming of the Messiah."

THE LATTER number, danced to Handel's "Messiah," subtly portrays a series of human emotions related to the text of the musical work. Especially effective was a segment entitled "How Beautiful" in which two of the white leotard-clad dancers performed a delicate and graceful ballet. At the moment when the chorus sings of peace, Mari Ono leapt and was caught by her partner Ernest Pagnano for an instant in a dovelike position.

In sharp contrast both to the ballet-like movements and the theological significance of this number, "Whirligogs," danced to Luciano Berio's Sinfonia, confronts the audience with almost brutal choreography depicting the idea of chaos and hopelessness offered by the choral text. Wearing black leotards and masks, the company, representing either evil or perhaps the unknown, goes through a frightening sequence of very angular and grotesque movements, climaxing when they finally overcome the two solo dancers — human beings — completely submerging them into the "depths" formed by a tangle of bodies.

WHETHER HE IS using ballet, jazz, pop or contemporary dance, or totally unclassifiable movements of his own invention, Lubovitch maintains always a unique and compelling style. Besides the sheer physicalness of his choreography — this is no art form for the super-sensitive — there is a certain unity that drives through all the numbers.

While Lubovitch creates an unending variety of movements, the end product is by no means a hodgepodge, but rather, is unusually clean and flowing. Add to this a fine sense of artistic balance: At any moment, if Lubovitch's dancers were to freeze, their positions would form an esthetically pleasing picture.

But still, the Lar Lubovitch Dance Company defies description, mainly because the whole does not equal the sum of the parts. There are two unknown quantities: The creative genius of Lar Lubovitch reacting with the imagination of the audience.

THE BRITISH ARE COMING. Head Hands & Feet rock and roll group will play a concert Thursday evening at Hersey High School in Arlington Heights. Head Hands & Feet features Chas Hodges, left, bass; Pete Gavin, drums; Ray Smith, guitar and bass; Tony Colton, vocals and keyboard; and Albert Lee, guitar. The concert starts at 8.

Summer Thespians Give Play

Des Plaines Players, a newly formed summer theater group made up of students and alumni of Maine West High School, will present "Out of the Frying Pan" three evenings in August.

Performances are scheduled at First Congregational Church of Des Plaines, 766 Graceland, at 8 p.m. Aug. 11, 12 and 13.

The cast, announced this week, are either attending or did attend Maine West and have, together, acted in more than 100 dramatic productions.

The plot of "Out of the Frying Pan" revolves around the troubles of six young actors and actresses when they decide to share an apartment "for financial reasons — period." Tina Kaneen, Mike Maxa, Matt O'Grady, Ned Peterson, Sandy Salerno and Katie Young play the young thespians.

BOB SCAROLA is the famous producer who "just happens" to live downstairs. The father of one of the girls is played by Bob Cassinelli, and Muriel Foster, a cousin of one of the actresses, is played by Kimberly Beedy. Sue Akers is the landlady and Tom Sandri and Matt Mlodoch, the two policemen.

Director is Paul Zeissler, a student at Elmhurst College. He lives in Palatine. The rest of the group are Des Plaines residents.

'50s Revisited At Ravinia

The '50s will be revisited when the rock and roll group, Sha Na Na, presents a concert next Wednesday, 8:30 p.m., at Ravinia Festival. Sha Na Na will be accompanied by LaBelle, a soul-blues trio.

Tonight the Chicago Mini-Festival opens at Ravinia featuring major Chicago composer-performers in the pop field and their groups. On stage will be Steve Goodman, Bonnie Koloc, John Prine, Bill Quateman and Wilderness Road. The performance begins at 6:30 p.m.

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra and Chorus will present Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. Then on Sunday at 7:30 p.m. pianist Roger Williams will be in concert at Ravinia.

Next week Scott Joplin's "Piano Rags" will be performed by Joshua Rifkin, concert and recording artist, in the Murray Theatre. The Chicago Symphony Orchestra will be in concert Tuesday and Thursday.

The Ike and Tina Turner Revue returns to Ravinia on Friday. All weekday performances begin at 8:30 p.m.

Denim Goes Glamorous With Sequins

by JOANNE SCHREIBER

Is this your summer to join the horsy set? To ride the range in denims you've decorated yourself with strings of sparkly sequins?

For quick identification at the rodeo, just sew the ranch brand on the back of your jacket — or send a message with classic Indian motifs stitched to shirt, jacket, jeans or hat. The sequins add a cowpoke-catching touch of glitter and glamor.

It's a cinch to decorate your sportswear with sequins. Get the kind that have already been strung. Lightly sketch the design on the jacket. Knot one end of the thread and sew through the middle hole of the first sequin. This keeps the end down, and the sequins won't come off the end.

CATCH EVERY sixth or seventh sequin with an overcast stitch, allowing the stitch to slip between the two sequins. Follow the design, securing the sequin strip at corners. For the last sequin, slip needle through the middle and knot at the underside of the fabric.

You can use sequins on your city-slicker clothes, too. Use them to trace a design on a lace evening skirt, or emphasize the neckline of your new halter. Sequins add maximum sparkle for minimum effort, and keep their glitter through a long summer of washing and cleaning.

Bermuda To Be Their Home

Bermuda will be the home of newlyweds Jeanne Marie and Robert Laurence Ghastin, beginning in August. The groom will be stationed there, as an aviation electronics technician with the U.S. Navy.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zizlavsky of 900 N. Forrest, Arlington Heights, and the groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Cass of Long Island, N.Y., were married June 24 in St. James Catholic Church. Father Med Laz of Northbrook, a longtime friend of the bride, officiated.

The new Mrs. Ghastin chose an ivory gown of organza over taffeta, trimmed in Venise lace and satin ribbon. The A-line design featured a high neckline, Empire waist and bishop sleeves. A blusher veil of illusion was attached to a portrait bonnet of matching ribbon and lace.

JEANNE CARRIED A cascade of yellow and orange roses, phalaenopsis orchids and stephanotis. She also carried a handkerchief crocheted with rows of lace on linen, given to her by her godmother, Mrs. Edward Nemec of Antioch.

Maid of honor was Barbara DeShon of Roselle, and bridesmaids were Lani Bilek of Northbrook and Mrs. Eileen Kelly of Carol Stream. They wore gowns of yellow, orange and green floral chiffon with jewel neckline and bishop sleeves, and they carried cascade bouquets of yellow and orange roses, gold daisy pompoms and pink carnations.

SIX-YEAR-OLD Catherine Zizlavsky and three-year-old Diane Lee Zizlavsky, nieces of the bride from Rockville, Md., were flower girls. They wore orange chiffon over yellow and carried wicker baskets of flowers matching the bouquets of the attendants.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ghastin

Best man was George Cass, brother of the groom; ushers were George V. Gloriosa, Jacksonville, Fla.; and Frank Zizlavsky of Rockville, brother of the bride.

Following the reception at the VFW Hall in Mount Prospect, the couple went to Wisconsin for a week before traveling south to Jacksonville, where they are living until leaving for Bermuda.

The bride is a graduate of Sacred Heart of Mary High School and St. Francis College, Fort Wayne, Ind. She has been teaching third grade at St. Peter's Catholic School in Antioch. She and the groom met when he was sent to St. Francis by the air force to take several courses.

Loyola Classmates Married

A couple who met as Loyola University students exchanged vows June 17 in St. James Catholic Church, Arlington Heights. They are Mary Roth, daughter of the John J. Roths of Arlington Heights, and Jerome C. Klopp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Klopp of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The groom's physics professor, the Rev. J. Roll, S. J., officiated at the nuptial mass.

The groom's sister Barbara was maid of honor, while friends of the bride, Diane Goetz and Theresa Kervin, were bridesmaids. Daniel Roth, the bride's brother, served as best man, and ushers were William Hunt and Stephan Wolfe, classmates of the groom.

A reception following the wedding was held at the Camelot Restaurant in Des Plaines for 180 guests.

The bride was graduated from Loyola in February with a degree in psychology and now works for Baxter Laboratories. The bridegroom has a year more of study to earn a degree in physics.

The newlyweds are living in Niles.

Honeymoon In Caribbean

A honeymoon in the Caribbean followed the wedding of Peggy Jean Schmidt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Schmidt of 25 S. Regency Drive East, Arlington Heights, and Scott Eugene Nahrwold, son of the Eugene Nahrwolds of Fort Wayne, Ind.

The couple had attended junior high and high school together in Fort Wayne before the Schmidt family moved to Arlington. Although they went on to different universities, they continued dating via "long distance."

For the June 24 ceremony in the First Presbyterian Church of Arlington Heights, the bride chose a gown of white English net illusion lavishly appliqued with Venise lace blossoms and bordered with Alencon lace. It was styled in a princess silhouette, with sweetheart neckline and long sleeves ending in wide ruffles. A floor-length illusion veil fell from a matching Queen Anne headpiece.

THE BRIDE carried a cascade of miniature white carnations, white roses, stephanotis, white daisies and baby's breath.

Matron of honor for her sister was Mrs. David Shown of Fort Wayne. Bridesmaids were the sisters of the groom — Lark, Starr, Gina and Trina Nahrwold. Their gowns were also princess-style in dotted swiss with puffed sleeves and embroidered lace trim. The matron of honor wore shell pink and the bridesmaids, aqua.

They carried white fireside baskets filled with white daisies, carnations and baby's breath. The gowns of the matron of honor and the mother of the bride were made by the bride.

The groom's brother Brett was best man, while ushers included Jim Schmidt, brother of the bride; Michael Flaherty of Commack, N.Y.; and Dick Smith and Rick Knight, Fort Wayne.

A BUFFET LUNCHEON reception at Old Orchard Country Club was held for 100 guests after the double ring ceremony.

The bride attended Indiana University and was graduated from North Central College, Naperville, in '71. She has been employed by Ben Pekin Corp. in Arlington Heights.

The groom attended Purdue University for a year and then entered the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, where he was commissioned a Second Lieutenant June 7.

The couple will be living at Fort Benning, Ga., in August, followed by a brief stay at Fort Sill, Okla., and then a three-year residence in Babenhausen, Germany.

Lavender And Lace Set The Mood

An old-fashioned wedding filled with the sentiment of "lavender and lace" was chosen by Carol Kieser of Palatine and Robert M. Olsen of St. Charles. Carol wore a lace Victorian gown for the June 24 nuptials, and her attendants wore ivory lace with lavender chiffon as they came down the aisle of St. James Catholic Church in Arlington.

The marriage was solemnized at two o'clock with a buffet reception following at Mount Prospect Holiday Inn.

Carol's gown was of ivory lace, Empire styled with leg o'mutton sleeves and a high ruffled neckline. Over the dress flowed a floor-length veil held by a Camelot cap of lace. Carol wore a cameo given to her by the groom and a necklace that the groom's grandmother and mother wore at their own weddings.

A nosegay of white roses, white button mums and purple statice was the bridal bouquet.

CAROL'S PARENTS are Mr. and Mrs. James Kieser of rural Palatine. The bridegroom is the son of the Robert V. Olsens of St. Charles.

An unusual feature of the double ring service was the choice of two best men by the groom. The two, Ray McCabe of Peoria and Jim Olson, St. Charles, read favorite selections of the bride and groom during the ceremony. The maid of honor, Cheryl Mercier of Deerfield, also read.

The four bridesmaids were all sisters of the couple. They included Sue and Diane Kieser and Diane and Joanne Olsen. Richard Wicksnin, Ron Lingle and Rick Rickhert, close friends of the groom, were groomsmen, and two college friends, Steve Clark and Dennis Doyle, seated the guests.

THE FIVE BRIDAL attendants wore two-toned gowns designed with an ivory lace bodice and bib and lavender chiffon skirt with a deep ruffle at the hem. Each carried a basket of pink carnations with purple statice.

Since returning from their honeymoon at Lake Lawn in Delavan, Wis., the newlyweds are living in Mount Prospect. Carol is a fifth grade teacher in Northbrook. Her husband is with Burroughs Corp. in Oakbrook.

They are both graduates of Illinois State University. Prior to that Carol went to Ela-Vernon High and then Stevenson High.

Care Of Spandex

Spandex is a familiar man-made fiber used in foundation garments, swimwear, support and surgical hosiery, stretch slacks and ski pants. A principal characteristic is its excellent stretch capability. It also resists deterioration from salt water, perspiration, and cosmetics. Most garments made of Spandex are machine-washable and dryable. But as with any item, check hangtags and follow manufacturers' care instructions.

Parachute To Bridal Gown

Who would ever think that a World War II parachute would be worn as a bridal gown thirty years later?

One that was taken apart and designed into a bridal gown when Mr. and Mrs. Forrest B. Hunter of Arlington Heights were married twenty-five years ago has done it again.

This time, the Hunters' daughter, Michele Lynn, wore the gown at her June 23 wedding in Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church

That evening she became the bride of James E Rhein, son of the James Rheins of Wheeling

The bridal gown was made from a pure silk parachute and sewed with the original threads. Designed princess-style with an eight-foot train, it has an Austrian-type shirring stitched over the parachute shroud lines The dress featured a square neckline and cap sleeves.

WITH IT Michele wore an ivory three-tier veil, fingertip in length and held by a silk and seed pearl headpiece. Her bouquet was of daisies in rainbow shades tied with ivory satin ribbon

Dear Dorothy: We've got so many wasps that it's become a nazard just to walk around the house during warm days. Is there some good spray we can use to shoo them away flom our place? — Hilda W.

Having been through this a few times, I can feel for you Just spraying around the house isn't going to do anything. You've got to locate the nest where they retire to at night. Then cover yourself completely to protect yourself from counterattack and spray the nest just before darkness with any of the home insecticide sprays. You will kill most of them Just remember the nests are what you go for — after the wasps have retired — and don't take chances. Put on gloves, veils, anything to keep from being exposed because, as you undoubtedly know, wasp bites can be highly dangerous.

Dear Dorothy: You once wrote something about what to use on white shoes which doesn't make them chalky like they get when using white shoe polish. What was it? — Nancy M.

Any of the cleaning sprays will do the trick. Do think, though, that regular polish does cover up the scuff marks.

Tip to brides: When adding eggs to a hot mixture, first add a little of the hot mixture to the eggs, stirring constantly, then a little more of the hot mixture, still stirring. Then reverse it and add the eggs to the hot mixture, still stirring.

Dear Dorothy: How can I get chocolate milk stains out of a white acrylic sweater? — Mrs. Bob Romines.

Engaged In Bridal Plans

Cheryl Laschinski

Planning a Sept. 9 wedding are a recently engaged pair, Cheryl L. Laschinski of Palatine and William S. Huffman of Rolling Meadows. Cheryl's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Gerald W. Laschinski, 931 Saratoga Drive, and her fiance is the son of the John R. Huffmans of 2907 South Court.

A '72 graduate of Palatine High School, the bride-elect is a parttime model. Bill, a Forest View High graduate, attended Harper College and works for Continental Air Transport at O'Hare Airport.

Jo Ann Huebner

An area couple, Jo Ann Huebner of Mount Prospect and Scott Ryan of Arlington Heights, are engaged, according to news from Jo Ann's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Huebner, 606 Cedar Lane. No wedding date has been set.

Scott, son of Mrs. Marlene Ryan of 740 N. Evergreen, is a graduate of Arlington High School and works locally for Northside Standard.

The bride-elect graduated from Hersey High and is employed by the American National Bank in Chicago.

Beth Nolan

The engagement and approaching marriage of Beth Nolan and Dan Jones are announced by Beth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Nolan of DeKalb. Dan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent J. Jones of 343 Ashley Road, Hoffman Estates.

The couple plans to be married Oct. 21 at Christ the Teacher Chapel, Newman Center, DeKalb.

Beth is a student at Kishwaukee College, Malta, Ill., and her fiance, a '68 graduate of St. Viator High School, is a senior management major at Northern Illinois University.

Mt. Prospect Rites Unite Baechle-Holste Families

A Mount Prospect couple became man and wife in a June 24 ceremony in St. Raymond Catholic Church. The bride is the former Vera Elizabeth Baechle, and her husband is Dennis Henry Holste.

Vera's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond M. Baechle, live in Plantation, Fla., but are former Mount Prospect residents. The bride attended Prospect High School, graduating in 1970, then studied at Harper College and now works for Wieboldt's at Randhurst.

Dennis graduated from Prospect High in '65 and works for Panasonic in Des Plaines. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Holste Jr. of 622 N. Elmhurst Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Holste

THE THREE O'CLOCK nuptials were set in a white and yellow color scheme. Vera's three attendants came down the aisle wearing yellow nylon flocked in a floral stripe, with long sleeves, Empire waist and high neckline. Lace and ribbon detailed the lines of the gowns. Each girl carried a nosegay of yellow daisies and roses, white carnations and baby's breath.

Mrs. Nancy Baechle of Carpentersville was Vera's matron of honor, and Ronald Baechle, her husband, was best man. Ronald is Vera's brother.

Bridesmaids were Melody Moldenhauer, Mount Prospect and Jeanette Nurre, Des Plaines.

THE BRIDE'S other brother, Raymond Baechle Jr., who is in the U.S. Navy, ushered, as did Dale Thal of Des Plaines, a cousin of the bride.

As she was given in marriage, the bride wore a white organza gown trimmed with Venetian lace. The lace edged the high collar, the long puffed sleeves and a yoke on the Empire bodice. Rows of the lace also extended down the front of the A-line skirt.

Vera's mantilla veil, which was floor-length, had a border of the same lace around it. She carried a cascade arrangement of yellow roses, fuji mums, white carnations and greens.

A reception at Mount Prospect's Scanda House feted the couple afterwards.

Parachute To Bridal Gown

Who would ever think that a World War II parachute would be worn as a bridal gown thirty years later?

One that was taken apart and designed into a bridal gown when Mr. and Mrs. Forrest B. Hunter of Arlington Heights were married twenty-five years ago has done it again.

This time, the Hunters' daughter, Michele Lynn, wore the gown at her June 23 wedding in Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church.

That evening she became the bride of James E. Rhein, son of the James Rheins of Wheeling.

The bridal gown was made from a pure silk parachute and sewed with the original threads. Designed princess-style with an eight-foot train, it has an Austrian-type shirring stitched over the parachute shroud lines. The dress featured a square neckline and cap sleeves.

WITH IT Michele wore an ivory three-tier veil, fingertip in length and held by a silk and seed pearl headpiece. Her bouquet was of daisies in rainbow shades tied with ivory satin ribbon.

The rainbow shades were repeated in the dresses worn by her attendants. Their gowns were in multicolored pastel print, and they wore yellow picture hats and yellow sandals. Their bouquets were yellow daisies tied with green ribbons.

Susan Daley of Milwaukee was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Katherine Hunter, Milwaukee, the bride's sister-in-law, and the groom's sister, Mrs. Janet Goodman, Wheeling. His other sister, 10-year-old Ellen Rhein, served as flower girl in a yellow floral print dress and carried a basket of rainbow colored daisies.

FREDERICK KAVANAGH, Evanston, cousin of the groom, served as best man. Lawrence Hunter and Charles Goodman ushered. The organist was Michele's brother Mark, 14, and a friend, Rick Squires of Arlington, was soloist.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rhein

A reception following the candlelight wedding was held at Northbrook Holiday Inn for 100 guests. The couple then honeymooned for two weeks in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

They are living in Hoffman Estates. Michele, a graduate of Wheeling High School, will graduate next June in nursing at Harper College. She also works for the Professional Center Laboratory in Rolling Meadows.

Jim is a graduate of Wheeling High and works for Ace Printing Co., Evanston.

Ordinance No. 2359

AN ORDINANCE GRANTING A HEIGHT VARIATION FOR PROPERTY LOCATED AT 1500 EAST CENTRAL ROAD

WHEREAS, The Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect did meet on April 27, 1972, at the hour of 8:00 p.m. in the Mount Prospect Village Hall pursuant to notice published in the manner provided by law; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect heard testimony under Case No. 72-11A pertaining to a request for a variation to allow an overall building height of sixty-two (62) feet no (40) inches for a church to be located at 1500 East Central Road; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect have recommended to the President and Board of Trustees the granting of the variation requested under Case No. 72-11A for reasons that:

1. There is a practical difficulty and particular hardship on the petitioner in that the contribution to the esthetics of the community that the proposed church would otherwise make will be lost by current restrictions limiting the height of the steeple and cross proposed herein;

2. The purpose of the variation is by no means based on a desire to make money;

3. The plight of the owner is due to unique circumstances in that the land is so located in an R-1 Zoning District, wherein churches and the owners of churches must abide by the same height restrictions as owners of single-family residences — and yet churches are only an allowable use in such residential zones;

4. The alleged difficulty or hardship has not been created by any person presently having an interest in the property;

5. The proposed variation will not impair an adequate supply of light and air to adjacent property, or substantially increase the congestion in the public streets, or increase the danger of fire, or endanger the public safety, or otherwise substantially diminish or impair property values within the neighborhood; and

6. The granting of the variation will not be detrimental to the public or injurious to surrounding property in that it will not alter the essential character of the locality — in fact, it will enhance the Village of Mount Prospect in that it would be the only church built of this particular design in this area; and

WHEREAS, the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect have reviewed the matter herein and have determined that the same is for the best interest of the Village of Mount Prospect:

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF MOUNT PROSPECT, COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS:

SECTION ONE: That the property being the subject matter of Case No. 72-11A, being legally described as follows:

Lots 19, 20, 31, 32, 23, 24 in Bluetts Fairview Gardens, and Lot 198 in the second addition to Bluetts Fairview Gardens in subdivision duo and part of West half of the East half of the Southeast ¼ and part of the East half of the West half of the Southeast ¼ of Section 25, Township 42 N. Range 10, East of the third PM.,

is currently zoned R-1 (Single-Family Residence District) under the Zoning Ordinance of the Village of Mount Prospect, which zoning classification shall remain subject to the following granted variations:

(a) That the maximum height of the roof peak of the proposed church shall not exceed forty-two (42) feet;

(b) That the chimney shall not exceed fifty (50) feet in height; and

(c) That the maximum height of the cross atop the church shall not exceed sixty-two (62) feet.

SECTION TWO: That all other requirements of the Village Code shall continue to be applicable, except those height variations as specified in Section One hereinabove mentioned.

SECTION THREE: That the Director of Building and Zoning of the Village of Mount Prospect is hereby directed to issue a building permit in accordance with the variations herein contained.

SECTION FOUR: That the variations granted by this Ordinance shall be null and void and of no force and effect whatsoever unless an application for a building permit pursuant to such variations is made and construction commenced within one (1) year from the date this Ordinance becomes effective.

SECTION FIVE: That this Ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after the recording of a properly approved plat of resubdivision; and the passage, approval, and publication of this Ordinance in the manner provided by law. AYES: 6; NAYS: 0.

PASSED AND APPROVED this 20th day of June, 1972.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS:

SECTION ONE: That the zoning ordinance of the Village of Arlington Heights be and it is hereby amended by reclassifying from B-1 Business District, Limited Retail, to B-2 General Business District, the following described property, to wit:

Ordinance No. 2356

AN ORDINANCE GRANTING A VARIATION FOR PROPERTY LOCATED ON THE COMMONWEALTH EDISON RIGHT-OF-WAY NORTH OF KENSINGTON ROAD IN MOUNT PROSPECT

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect did meet on the 27th day of April, 1972, at the hour of 8:00 p.m. in the Village Hall of Mount Prospect and did hear Case No. 72-10A, pursuant to legal notice published in the Mount Prospect Herald on April 12, 1972; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect did hear a petition requesting a variation from the requirements of the Mount Prospect Zoning Ordinance in order to construct and operate a distribution substation and seven (7) foot tall fence on property zoned R-1; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect has recommended to the President and Board of Trustees the granting of the use variation requested under Case No. 72-10A for reasons that:

1. There is a practical difficulty and particular hardship on the petitioner in that this parcel has been utilized for transmission lines and utility right-of-way in the past and is zoned R-1, which zoning district disallows commercial enterprises including those that are quasi-public in nature;

2. The purpose of the variation is not based exclusively on a desire to make money;

3. The plight of the owner is due to unique circumstances in that the land is utilized for transmission lines into which the proposed substation will be connected;

4. The alleged difficulty or hardship has not been created by any person presently having an interest in the property;

5. The proposed variation will not impair an adequate supply of light and air to adjacent property, or substantially increase the congestion in the public streets, or increase the danger of fire, or endanger the public safety, or substantially diminish or impair property values within the neighborhood — in fact the equipment is necessary to provide adequate service to the community; and

6. The granting of the variation will not be detrimental to the public or injurious to surrounding property in that it will not alter the essential character of the locality; and

WHEREAS, the Building Committee of the Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect have met on May 10, 1972, and have reviewed Case No. 72-10A and have concurred with recommendations of the Board of Appeals to grant this variation; and

WHEREAS, the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect have determined that the matters herein are for the best interests of the Village of Mount Prospect:

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF MOUNT PROSPECT, COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS:

SECTION ONE: That the property being the subject matter of Case No. 72-10A, being legally described as follows:

That part of a strip of land 210 feet in width, lying Westerly of and adjoining the Westerly line of the Soo Line Railroad Company in the West Half of the Southwest Quarter of Section 25, Township 42 North, Range 11, East of the Third Principal Meridian, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the South line of the West Half of the Southwest Quarter of said Section 25, with the Westerly line of the Railroad; thence West along the South line of said West Half of the Southwest Quarter a distance of 221.93 feet to the intersection with a line 210 feet Westerly of measured at right angles and parallel with the Westerly line of the Railroad; thence North along said parallel line a distance of 400 feet; thence Easterly along a line measured perpendicularly to the last described line a distance of 210 feet to the Westerly line of said Railroad; thence South along said Westerly line of the Railroad to the point of beginning, containing 2.1 acres more or less and situated in the Village of Mount Prospect, Cook County, Illinois;

is currently zoned under the Zoning Ordinance of the Village of Mount Prospect as R-1 (Single Family Residence District), which zoning classification shall remain subject to the following variation hereby granted:

1. That the petitioner, Commonwealth Edison Company, be allowed to erect, construct, operate, and maintain a power distribution substation upon the above-described parcel; and

2. That inasmuch as the equipment within the substation will be highly technical and dangerous, the said petitioners shall also be allowed to surround the said property with a seven (7) foot high cyclone fence being an angled one (1) foot of barbed wire at the top thereof.

SECTION TWO: That all other requirements of the Mount Prospect Building and Zoning Code shall be applicable except the variations noted in SECTION ONE hereinbefore mentioned.

SECTION THREE: That the Director of Building and Zoning of the Village of Mount Prospect is hereby directed to issue a building permit in accordance with the variations hereinbefore mentioned.

SECTION FOUR: That this Ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage, approval, and publication in the manner provided by law.

Ordinance No. 2359

AN ORDINANCE GRANTING A HEIGHT VARIATION FOR PROPERTY LOCATED AT 1500 EAST CENTRAL ROAD

WHEREAS, The Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect did meet on April 27, 1972, at the hour of 8:00 p.m. in the Mount Prospect Village Hall pursuant to notice published in the manner provided by law; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect heard testimony under Case No. 72-11A pertaining to a request for a variation to allow an overall building height of sixty-two (62) feet no (0) inches for a church to be located at 1500 East Central Road; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect have recommended to the President and Board of Trustees the granting of the variation requested under Case No. 72-11A for reasons that:

1. There is a practical difficulty and particular hardship on the petitioner in that the contribution to the esthetics of the community that the proposed church would otherwise make will be lost by current restrictions limiting the height of the steeple and cross proposed herein;

2. The purpose of the variation is by no means based on a desire to make money;

3. The plight of the owner is due to unique circumstances in that the land is so located in an R-1 Zoning District, wherein churches and the owners of churches must abide by the same height restrictions as owners of single-family residences — and yet churches are only an allowable use in such residential zones;

4. The alleged difficulty or hardship has not been created by any person presently having an interest in the property;

5. The proposed variation will not impair an adequate supply of light and air to adjacent property, or substantially increase the congestion in the public streets, or increase the danger of fire, or endanger the public safety, or substantially diminish or impair property values within the neighborhood; and

6. The granting of the variation will not be detrimental to the public or injurious to surrounding property in that it will not alter the essential character of the locality — in fact, it will enhance the Village of Mount Prospect in that it would be the only church built of this particular design in this area; and

WHEREAS, the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect have reviewed the matter herein and have determined that the same is for the best interest of the Village of Mount Prospect;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF MOUNT PROSPECT, COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS:

SECTION ONE: That the property being the subject matter of Case No. 72-11A, being legally described as follows:

Lots 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24 in Bluetts Fairview Gardens, and Lot 198 in the second addition to Bluetts Fairview Gardens in subdivision duo and part of West half of the East half of the Southeast ¼ and part of the East half of the West half of the Southeast ¼ of Section 25, Township 42 N. Range 10, East of the third PM.,

is currently zoned R-1 (Single-Family Residence District) under the Zoning Ordinance of the Village of Mount Prospect, which zoning classification shall remain subject to the following granted variations:

(a) That the maximum height of the roof peak of the proposed church shall not exceed forty-two (42) feet;

(b) That the chimney shall not exceed fifty (50) feet in Leight; and

(c) That the maximum height of the cross atop the church shall not exceed sixty-two (62) feet.

SECTION TWO: That all other requirements of the Village Code shall continue to be applicable, except those height variations as specified in Section One hereinabove mentioned.

SECTION THREE: That the Director of Building and Zoning of the Village of Mount Prospect is hereby directed to issue a building permit in accordance with the variations herein contained.

SECTION FOUR: That the variations granted by this Ordinance shall be null and void and of no force and effect whatsoever unless an application for a building permit pursuant to such variations is made and construction commenced within one (1) year from the date this Ordinance becomes effective.

SECTION FIVE: That this Ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after the recording of a properly approved plat of resubdivision; and the passage, approval, and publication of this Ordinance in the manner provided by law. AYES: 6; NAYS: 0.

Ordinance No. 2356

AN ORDINANCE GRANTING A VARIATION FOR PROPERTY LOCATED ON THE COMMONWEALTH EDISON RIGHT-OF-WAY NORTH OF KENSINGTON ROAD IN MOUNT PROSPECT

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect did meet on the 27th day of April, 1972, at the hour of 8:00 p.m. in the Village Hall of Mount Prospect and did hear Case No. 72-10A, pursuant to legal notice published in the Mount Prospect Herald on April 12, 1972; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect did hear a petition requesting a variation from the requirements of the Mount Prospect Zoning Ordinance in order to construct and operate a distribution substation and seven (7) foot tall fence on property zoned R-1; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect has recommended to the President and Board of Trustees the granting of the use variation requested under Case No. 72-10A for reasons that:

1. There is a practical difficulty and particular hardship on the petitioner in that this parcel has been utilized for transmission lines and utility right-of-way in the past and is zoned R-1, which zoning district disallows commercial enterprises including those that are quasi-public in nature;

2. The purpose of the variation is not based exlusively on a desire to make money;

3. The plight of the owner is due to unique circumstances in that the land is utilized for transmission lines into which the proposed substation will be connected;

4. The alleged difficulty or hardship has not been created by any person presently having an interest in the property;

5. The proposed variation will not impair an adequate supply of light and air to adjacent property, or substantially increase the congestion in the public streets, or increase the danger of fire, or endanger the public safety, or substantially diminish or impair property values within the neighborhood — in fact the equipment is necessary to provide adequate service to the community; and

6. The granting of the variation will not be detrimental to the public or injurious to surrounding property in that it will not alter the essential character of the locality; and

WHEREAS, the Building Committee of the Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect have met on May 10, 1972, and have reviewed Case No. 72-10A and have concurred with recommendations of the Board of Appeals to grant this variation; and

WHEREAS, the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect have determined that the matters herein are for the best interests of the Village of Mount Prospect;

is currently zoned under the Zoning Ordinance of the Village of Mount Prospect as R-1 (Single Family Residence District), which zoning classification shall remain subject to the following variation hereby granted:

1. That the petitioner, Commonwealth Edison Company, be allowed to erect, construct, operate, and maintain a power distribution substation upon the above-described parcel; and

2. That inasmuch as the equipment within the substation will be highly technical and dangerous, the said petitioners shall also be allowed to surround the said property with a seven (7) foot high cyclone fence being an angled one (1) foot of barbed wire at the top thereof.

SECTION TWO: That all other requirements of the Mount Prospect Building and Zoning Code shall be applicable except the variations noted in SECTION ONE heretofore mentioned.

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect did hold a public hearing on April 27, 1972, at the hour of 8:00 p.m. in the Mount Prospect Village Hall pursuant to notice published in a newspaper of general circulation within the Village of Mount Prospect; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect did hear testimony presented under Case No. 72-9A pertaining to a request to construct at 107-109 West Prospect Avenue three (3) stores with only six (6) parking spaces instead of ten (10) spaces as presently provided by ordinance; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals recommended to the Building Committee of the Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect to allow the variation petitioned for because:

1. There is a practical hardship on the petitioner, since at the time the property was rezoned to its present zoning classification, parking requirements were less stringent;

2. The purpose of the variation is not based exclusively upon the desire to make money;

3. The granting of the variation will not be detrimental to the public or injurious to surrounding property in that it will not alter the essential character of the locality; and

4. The proposed variation will not impair an adequate supply of light and air to adjacent property, or substantially increase the congestion in the public streets, or increase the danger of fire, or endanger the public safety, or otherwise substantially diminish or impair property values within the neighborhood; and

5. The granting of the variation will not be detrimental to the public or injurious to surrounding property in that it will not alter the essential character of the locality; and

WHEREAS, The President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect have reviewed the matter herein and have determined that the same is in the best interests of the Village of Mount Prospect;

NOW THEREFORE BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF MOUNT PROSPECT, COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS:

SECTION ONE: That the property being the subject matter of Case No. 72-9A, being legally described as follows:

Lots 18 and 19 in Busse's Resubdivision on Lots 1 to 6 inclusive in Block 4, also of Lots 2 and 3 in Block 5, all of Block 6, Lots 13 to 24 inclusive in Block 7, and Lots 17 to 20 in Block 8, all in Meier's Addition to Mount Prospect, being a Subdivision in the Northwest Quarter of Section 12, Township 41 North, Range 11, East of the Third Principal Meridian in Cook County, Illinois:

is currently zoned under the Zoning Ordinance of the Village of Mount Prospect as B-3 (Business — Retail and Service District), which zoning classification shall remain subject to the following granted variation:

That the land described above may include the construction and erection of a building to house three (3) stores according to the plans attached hereto and made a part hereof, and that only six (6) parking spaces need be provided to serve the above-described building.

SECTION TWO: That all of the requirements of the Village Code of Mount Prospect be applicable except those variations set out in SECTION ONE above.

SECTION THREE: That the Director of Building and Zoning of the Village of Mount Prospect is hereby authorized and directed to issue a building permit in accordance with the variations and limitations hereinbefore mentioned.

SECTION FOUR: That the variations granted by this Ordinance shall be null and void and of no force and effect whatsoever unless an application for a building permit pursuant to such variation is made and construction commenced within one (1) year of the date said Ordinance becomes effective.

SECTION FIVE: That this Ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage, approval, and publication in the manner provided by law.

There was a TV series on a few years ago that starred Monte Markham. I think an older man played his son. Could you tell me the name of the series?

M.H.
DesPlaines

Monte Markham

You are right about there being a series that starred Monte. The series had a grandfather who was supposed to have been buried and frozen in an avalanche. He was in perfect health when uncovered. What escapades they went through! The series didn't last too long and was called THE SECOND HUNDRED YEARS.

I enjoy your column in the Friday supplement. As much as I like TV, I have one gripe: Talk shows, originally of a 90 minute format, need to be edited to 60 minutes. It is unfair to some guests and hosts, when someone's name is billed, but the person doesn't appear.

Harry C. Miller
Palatine

We agree that it doesn't seem fair. The talk shows are usually taped. The trouble is, the guests occasionally do not have a good rapport that particular night and the host has to bring forth other guests to smooth the program. Publishers have no way of knowing what portion of the program is going to be viewed, so we can't change the billings given.

I would like to know if IT WAS A VERY GOOD YEAR is going to be back this summer. Why is NIGHT GALLERY going to be shortened to a half hour this fall?

Joseph Lynn
Arlington Heights

The show IT WAS A VERY GOOD YEAR is not presently scheduled to return this summer. NIGHT GALLERY has been cut to half the time, but can you imagine the difficulty in finding bizarre stories to fill one hour weekly! This is one of the reasons it has been cut in half. The effect of the series would be lost if the stories were not kept up to par.

B.K.
Mt. Prospect

Elizabeth Taylor

You'd better believe that Elizabeth is married to Richard Burton. She married him shortly after her divorce from Eddie Fisher came through. She and Burton have appeared together in several motion pictures. The couple seem to still be very much in love. Evidently Elizabeth has found someone who is temperamentally her match!

Please tell me where I can write to Ben Murphy? I saw his picture in the TV Mailbag, but you didn't give an address for writing to him.

Candy Carts
Arlington Heights

We can't have you unhappy, so here is Ben's address:

ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10019.

Will you print a picture of the entire Bunker Family?

Barb Lowe and T.A.

Carroll O'Connor

The picture would not be clear enough if we tried to fit the entire family in the space alotted, so we hope you will be happy to see 'Archie'. Carroll did appear in several other shows, but he does more guest shots since ALL IN THE FAMILY has been such a tremendous hit. He is not at all like the role he plays. He is a soft-spoken fellow who is liked by his co-workers. Aug. 2nd he will celebrate his 48th birthday.

O'Connor, his wife Nancy, and 10 year-old son share their time between their homes in Los Angeles and Rome.

Would you please tell me to whom I could write expressing my appreciation for "The Glass Cage" shown on THE BOLD ONES? This certainly was an inspiration to me to keep up the good work and fight the battle to the end.

Marlin Y. Miller
Arlington Heights

Many people were inspired by the program. We suggest that you address your remarks to THE BOLD ONES, NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020. Perhaps if enough viewers write, we'll be able to see a rerun of that particular program.

Could you send me a picture of Rick Nelson and tell me some information about him? Where can I write him?

Donna Abraham
Elk Grove

Rick Nelson

Rick hails from Teaneck, N.J. He was born in 1940. The former Chris Harmon is his wife. We cannot send any pictures, but you may ask for one when you write to Rick Nelson c/o United Artists Recording Co., 729 Seventh Ave. New York, N.Y. 10019.

Would you print a large picture of Svengoolie?

Linda Dellamaria
Palatine

Sorry, no can do. Our space is limited. We suggest, instead that you write to WFLD-TV, 300 North State St., Chicago, Ill. 60610. They will probably be glad to send you a picture of the Great Svengoolie (Jerry G. Bishop).

the All-Star game

The 43rd Major League All-Star Baseball Game, the diamond sport's midsummer showcase of stars, gets prime-time coverage when the NBC Television Network broadcasts the action from Atlanta Stadium, Tuesday, July 25.

Danny Murtaugh, who managed the Pittsburgh Pirates into a World Series triumph over the Baltimore Orioles last October, will come out of retirement to pilot the National League All-Stars. The Orioles' Earl Weaver will manage the American League team.

THE All-Star Classic has been carried regularly on the NBC Television Network since 1950.

In those days, All-Star games were dominated by the American League, which had most of the big-name performers. In that first game in 1933, for instance, the late Connie Mack managed an A.L. squad which included such names as Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Lefty Grove, Joe Cronin, Lefty Gomez, Tony Lazzeri, Bill Dickey, Charley Gehringer, Jimmy Dykes, Al Simmons and Earl Averill. Nine of these players are enshrined in the baseball Hall of Fame.

American Golf Classic telecast on ABC network

One of the best-known and richest stops on the PGA circuit—the American Golf Classic—will be telecast, live and in color, exclusively on the ABC Television Network Saturday, July 22 and Sunday, July 23.

ABC commentators Chris Schenkel, Frank Gifford and Bud Palmer will report the third and final rounds from the Firestone Country Club (South Course) in Akron, Ohio. Expert commentary will be provided by Byron Nelson and Dave Marr.

ABC color cameras will provide coverage of six holes (9, 13, 15-18) at the challenging course. When the PGA selected Firestone for the 1960 Championship, Robert Trent Jones was hired as the architect to revamp the course. He added 50 sand traps, two lakes, two new greens and changed 16 others. The course became a lovely landmark for Akron but a relentless battleground for PGA pros.

Most of the nation's great golfers will compete for the prize money of $150,000—of which $30,000 goes to the winner. Jerry Heard, third on the PGA money-winning list this year, will defend his title (he beat Dale Douglass by three strokes last year) and Ray Floyd can shoot for his tournament record 268, set in winning the 1969 event.

13th—460 yards, par 4
15th—230 yards, par 3
16th—625 yards, par 5
17th—390 yards, par 4

Total yardage for the par 70 course is 7,180.

A portrayal of English life a century ago-Friday and Saturday on NBC

Julie Christie, Terence Stamp, Peter Finch and Alan Bates star in "Far From the Madding Crowd," a drama based on Thomas Hardy's novel of English rural life a century ago, to be colorcast on the NBC Television Network in two parts: "NBC Friday Night at the Movies" July 21; "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" July 22.

Headstrong and beautiful Bathsheba Everdene (Miss Christie) inherits a sheep farm and hires her rejected suitor, Gabriel Oak (Bates), as foreman.

When a gentleman farmer, Boldwood (Finch), proposes, Bathsheba becomes engaged while Gabriel stands by helplessly.

It is not until the dashing Sgt. Troy (Stamp) comes along that Bathsheba finds herself truly in love. Soon her involvement with the three dissimilar men threatens to ruin the lives of everyone concerned.

A portrayal of English life a century ago-Friday and Saturday on NBC

Julie Christie, Terence Stamp, Peter Finch and Alan Bates star in "Far From the Madding Crowd," a drama based on Thomas Hardy's novel of English rural life a century ago, to be colorcast on the NBC Television Network in two parts: "NBC Friday Night at the Movies" July 21; "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" July 22.

Headstrong and beautiful Bathsheba Everdene (Miss Christie) inherits a sheep farm and hires her rejected suitor, Gabriel Oak (Bates), as foreman.

When a gentleman farmer, Boldwood (Finch), proposes, Bathsheba becomes engaged while Gabriel stands by helplessly.

It is not until the dashing Sgt. Troy (Stamp) comes along that Bathsheba finds herself truly in love. Soon her involvement with the three dissimilar men threatens to ruin the lives of everyone concerned.

Lisa Lu

Classical Chinese opera featured with Lisa Lu this fall on CBS's 'Anna and the King'

Classical Chinese opera is the demanding spare-time interest of Peking-born actress Lisa Lu, who is featured in the new comedy series, "Anna and the King," starring Samantha Eggar and Yul Brynner, which premieres in the fall on the CBS Television Network.

Miss Lu has found increasing interest among young Chinese Americans in learning the centuries-old music. Miss Lu herself was trained by her mother, Mrs. T.C. Lu, a onetime Peking opera singer and authority in the field, who helps her in the two-hour task of makeup and costuming for her role as Sun Yu Chiao in a performance of "The Romance of the Jade Bracelet."

Miss Lu does the translations, directs and stars in the operas. Since forming her group in 1963, she has found the performances in growing demand before college and lecture audiences.

Knowing but not telling are Maggie (Rose Marie) and Charlie (Henry Gibson) in a scene from "Honeymoon Suite"—the first presentation in the new 90-minute daytime dramatic series, "The ABC Afternoon Playbreak." The special will be telecast on the ABC Television Network, Wednesday, July 26.

Henry Gibson and friends co-star Wednesday in the 'Honeymoon Suite'

Comedy actor Henry Gibson, comedienne Rose Marie, Gloria DeHaven, June Lockhart, two-time Oscar nominee Arthur O'Connell and Martha Scott will star in "Honeymoon Suite," Wednesday, July 26, the first of a series of original daytime dramas to air on a pre-emptive basis on the ABC Television Network.

"Honeymoon Suite," a comedy-drama, opens its doors to reveal a piquant insight into the lives of two very disparate couples in an elegant Beverly Hills hotel. In the first vignette, an 18-year-old bride and groom who have not mastered the facts of life, revolt against their meddling parents, under the observant eyes of Charlie the bellboy (Henry Gibson) and one of the hotel's maids (Rose Marie).

The second vignette focuses on the Golden Wedding Anniversary of Harry and Eleanor Barnes, who, after a surprise party, are left alone to relive the privacy and bliss of their first honeymoon, only to find they have nothing in common but their differences.

Children proud to have their school named for Hope

"We are proud to have your name on our school. We hope it will always be full of joy and laughter as you are," a little girl wrote to Bob Hope.

This message from fifth grader Kathy Ramos, a student of Bob Hope Elementary School, San Antonio, Texas, was one of many from youngsters telling the NBC-TV personality how they felt about having their school named for him.

ANOTHER STUDENT, Charles Kerns, wrote: "I have seen you on TV when you were in Vietnam and I think only a good American comedian would go there to entertain. I bet if the enemy did attack while you were entertaining they would probably just sit down and watch you entertain."

One of the primary grade students, Linda Ibarra, printed her message: "I like you because you are nice and funny. Thank you for letting us name our school after you."

The new school opened this year in the Southwest Independent School District of San Antonio. The school officially will be dedicated during the first week in August but Hope will be unable to attend the ceremonies. He is planning, however, to make a visit to the school in the early fall when his schedule permits.

"Maude" just right for Macy

If "Maude," the CBS spin-off of the popular "All in the Family" becomes even a minor success next season, one of the chief benefactors will be veteran stage actor Bill Macy. And he is so confident that the new entry will score, that he already has his Emmy speech memorized.

Macy is one of those "faceless" troubedors who slave at their trade hoping that somebody is taking notice. It's been a long time coming for the ex-Brooklynite, who got his first taste of theatre while serving in the Army's Amphibious Engineer Corps.

THE military P.X. circuit and olive drab behind him, Macy set off for college and kept his acting hopes alive while at New York University. From NYU, there came many years of road companies and stage appearances, but few "Oh look, there's Bill Macy!" notices. Finally, in 1966, that "someone" noticed him.

Beatrice Arthur and Bill Macy as Maude and Walter Influential producer Norman Lear, after seeing Macy in "America Hurrah," wired the actor a "job well done" note. But no job offer. It was years later, following Macy's appearance in all three "Oh Calcutta" stage shows (Broadway, London and the movie) that he latched onto the male lead in "And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little."

Lear, by now beginning to enjoy the accolades of his "All in the Family" production (he's the show's executive producer), caught a New York "Miss Reardon" and again sent Macy his congratulations. This time Macy didn't wait for Lear to contact him again.

WITH "Miss Reardon" moving to Los Angeles, Macy wasted little time in contacting Lear to tell the producer how much he enjoyed "All in the Family." A guest star role for Macy soon followed, and when Lear saw the possibility of "Maude" emerging for the 1972-'73 season, there was Bill Macy—perfect for the role of Walter, Maude's fourth husband who is the only man who can keep the ultra-liberal cousin of Edith Bunker in check.

Cousin Maude, portrayed by Beatrice Arthur, is described by the show's producers as the "flip side of Archie Bunker, an example of 'flawed-liberalism' who is just as sure of her beliefs as Archie is of his." Walter, publicists say, will be "as honest and blunt as Maude, but in his quieter way much more realistic."

Bill Macy can't wait to get into the part. He could keep that no secret, appearing before a group of TV reporters during a recent CBS preview session in Chicago.

WAS he satisfied with the show, he was asked.

Trying to be as suave as possible, but still fumbling with his coffee cup between gasp-like drags on a cigarette, Macy explained about his roles in this play, that play, all leading up to this chance for television. He hadn't seen many of the scripts for "Maude," but was sure the ethnic-humor plot would prove popular.

Finally, when someone questioned him about his feelings that day, he threw his arms in the air and screamed "Help!" He finally confessed that he had never been the subject of so many questions by reporters, and while he loved it, he was "nervous like you can't believe."

As he was shuffled from the interview session so that he could visit another hotel suite to tape some promotional material for "Maude," reporters were casually unanimous in feeling that Macy was genuinely honest, a guy who finally got a break for which he had worked so hard.

He had told the story about being so excited when he got a role in "Oh, Calcutta," he "ran to rehearsal everyday." For "Maude," here's betting Bill Macy will do no less.

Schaumburg Hospital Move Disappointing To Two Here

by STEVE BROWN

Reaction to Wednesday's announcement that Presbyterian St Luke's Medical Center plans to build a $12 5 million hospital in Schaumburg drew a variety of comments from members of the Northwest Cook County Health Needs Study Committee.

The committee, which has been in existence for about a year, commissioned a $20,000 study last month to determine the health care needs in the area

All of the members of the committee, the villages of Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Hanover Park and Roselle and officials from Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village and Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, agreed to abide by the decision of the study. The actual survey work is being conducted by the consulting firm of Ernest and Ernest

In announcing the decision to build the facility, Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher said he feels the village had "kept its commitment and still believes that a great amount of good will come from the study."

He decided to pursue the possibilities with Presbyterian St. Luke's hospital

"It was too good an opportunity to pass up," Atcher said.

ATCHER SAID that he talked to other members of the committee and received no negative reaction to the plans for the new hospital.

However, at least two members of the committee, Alexian Brothers and Northwest Community Hospital, deny that Atcher ever approached them on the matter.

Steve Skorcz, assistant administrator at Alexian Brothers, and Malcolm Macoun, president of Northwest Community Hospital, said Atcher had not contacted them

Both expressed surprise, disappointment, and puzzlement over Schaumburg's and Presbyterian-St Luke's decision to go ahead, when the study partially financed by a $13,000 state grant, is not completed

"We find it a great personal disappointment that Presbyterian St Luke's made no overture to the existing institution before announcing their plans," Skorcz said.

In evpressing his puzzlement over the situation, Macoun said, "We had hoped to get an objective study from this committee before any further plans were made"

Both said they plan to bring the new development before the committee at its next meeting.

ROSELLE MAYOR Robert Frantz said he does not feel the action will negate the study in any way.

"I do not feel that this development changes anyone's committment to abide by the decision of the study," Frantz said

He said that with the opportunity to get a prestige institution into the area, it would have been foolish to pass it up.

Hoffman Estates' representative to the committee, Richard Regan, said he would have to wait to see the outcome of the study before determining the impact of the Schaumburg plans.

"This study was a step in the direction of cooperation, transcending provincial attitudes. We should not allow this development to bias the study and we should be able to transcend the development and still have a spirit of cooperation, Regan said.

He added that while the study would deal with immediate needs of the community, it will also analye the needs of a large area for the future.

Village Considers Weight Limitations For Vehicles

The Elk Grove Village Board of Trustees is considering a revision of its traffic regulations that would limit the vehicles allowed to use Elk Grove and Kennedy Boulevard by weight Village Atty. Edward Hofert told the trustees Judge Marvin Peters has indicated he would strike down the present ordinance as being too discretionary.

Police Chief Harry Jenkins said the current ordinance allowed passenger cars and vehicles with recreational license plates, such as pickup trucks and campers, on the boulevards. It does not permit commercial vehicles, including pickup trucks for business, on the boulevards, he said

However, the present law does give Jenkins the authority to issue special permits to allow some commercial vehicles on the boulevards at his discretion. Jenkins said the permits usually were given to persons who lived on the two streets.

In a recent court decision, the judge said leaving the issuance of the special permits to the discretion of the chief of police amounted to an unlawful delegation of authority, Hofert said.

IN A PROPOSED ordinance presented to the Board of Trustees last week by Hofert and Jenkins, weight would determine which vehicles could travel the two boulevards

Jenkins said vehicles weighing more than 8,000 pounds, including the load, would be barred from the boulevard He said this would mean commercial and recreational vehicles up to 8,000 pounds as well as the family car will be permitted on Elk Grove and Kennedy Boulevard

The proposal currently is under study by the judiciary planning and zoning committee of the board.

Library Lacking: Consultant

Results of a recent consultant's survey of the Elk Grove Village Public Library show that, in the consultant's opinion, the library does not have enough adult books and reference material to provide minimum service to the community

The consultant, William W. Sannwald, was called in at the request of the library board He is the head of the Chicago Sun-Times and Daily News Library

Sanwald used a set of standard title listings for a library the size of the Elk Grove facility He conducted a sampling survey with the assistance of the library staff

The "Public Library Catalog" contains 11,001 titles of adult nonfiction books Of those, 1,004 were compared to the titles listed in the library card catalog The library had only 260 of the titles, or 25 8 per cent

A supplement to the "Public Library Catalog" lists outstanding books of the year. All 793 books listed in the 1970 supplement were compared with the card catalog Only 206 books were found or 25 9 per cent

IN A COMPARISON of fiction titles, the library had only 35 per cent of the books it should have

The library had only 283 reference books, or 44 4 per cent, of the 636 recommended by the "Reference Books for Small and Medium Sized Public Libraries" guide

In the report, Sannwald said

"The library holds only a small percentage of the books that it should hold, about 26 per cent of adult nonfiction and 35 per cent of the fiction."

"It is the consultant's opinion that the minimum percentage and library needs is about 55 per cent Adequate library service should begin when the library has at least 75 per cent of the titles listed in the catalogs"

"There must be a reason to explain the failure of the (library) to meet even a minimum standard Two possible reasons may explain the failure. One would be a lack of funds, and the other would be incompetence in book selection"

Since 1964 the Elk Grove library has spent $99,363 to acquire books

THE REPORT continues·

"The amount of money expended for books since 1964 should have been enough to develop at least a minimal collection.

"This would tend to indicate that the book selection in the past was conducted in a casual manner. No real effort seemed to be made to examine the collection and add those materials that a public library needs to provide adequate service to its patrons"

The report recommends, as a rule of thumb, that 15 to 20 per cent of the total budget should be allocated to purchasing materials The total budget for the current fiscal year is $316,000. A total of $52,000, or approximately 15 per cent, is allocated for the purchase of books, periodicals and recordings.

Mary Clark, new administrative librarian hired at Sannwald's recommendation, has said that increasing the library's book and reference collection is one of her highest priorities

Miss Clark said, and the consultant report agrees, that purchases of books to bring the library up to adequate standards will require several years.

NWMC Asked For Tree-Burning Ban Solution

Efforts are under way to have the Northwest Municipal Conference come up with a solution to the current ban on tree burning in this area.

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D Teichert said yesterday he will ask the group to consider purchasing its own burning equipment for use by member municipalities or "subsidizing the county."

The Cook County Forest Preserve District burning area near Wheeling was closed June 30 because the county could not afford to install the air curtain destructors required by the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency. These burners are designed to cut down on the amount of smoke released into the air

Teichert said that the county estimated it would cost $250,000 to install the five curtain destructors that would be necessary to handle the burning needs of the area

"I INTEND TO write to all the mayors of the conference," Teichert said, "We all have the same problem."

The problem is that diseased and damaged trees have to be cut down and removed Burning of the trees is the most effective means of staying the disease. It is also the least expensive, much cheaper than using the landfill method.

"It looks like it will be seven to 10 times more expensive for us to go with a landfill," Teichert said. "Collective action would be a very real approach"

Should the conference decide to buy its own equipment, a suitable site would have to be found first, and Teichert admitted that could be difficult. "Although it shouldn't be, because the curtain device cuts down the smoke."

There is no August meeting scheduled for the conference but Teichert said he hopes a special meeting could be called, if necessary.

SO FAR THIS year, Mount Prospect has had to cut down very few diseased trees The cold weather has kept the bugs in control for the first part of the summer Although Herbert Weeks, assistant public works director, fears the very recent warm weather may change the situations.

Weeks said that about 30 trees have ben cut down since the ban was put in effect. These trees have been stored in West Park, Golf and Busse roads.

ANOTHER 30 should come down, Weeks said, but instead they are stripping off the branches and leaving just the trunks up, a type of "on site" storage Once September is here, the danger of the spread of tree disease lessons and the diseased trees can be cut down at any time

Village Mgr. Robert J Eppley said that under their contract it would cost about $99 a tree to have them hauled to a burning site near Melrose Park. The village cannot afford this, he said A total of $10,000 has been budgeted for tree and stump removal this year.

Many of the village's trees have been damaged by the recent storms, and Eppley said the branches and trimmings removed from these trees has been shredded and the resulting material used as temporary roads in West Park.

State To Open Way For Lake Michigan Water To Suburbs

The way to Lake Michigan is expected to be opened today for the Northwest suburbs when the State of Illinois approves lake water allocations for the DAMP Water Commission.

William Cellini, head of the department of transportation, is scheduled to approve requests from DAMP and the west suburban Tree Towns Water Commission that will allow both agencies to go ahead with their plans to obtain water from the lake.

Under a 1967 U. S. Supreme Court decree, Illinois was limited to a total withdrawal from the lake of 3,200 cubic feet of water per second. The state, given responsibility for parcelling out the water, held hearings on the matter two years ago and has delayed since then in announcing the allocations.

JOHN GUILLOU, director of the state division of water resource management, yesterday said the allocation order prepared by him provides for the requests made by DAMP and Tree Towns. He declined, however, to release the specific allocations until the order is signed by Cellini.

DAMP, known officially as the Des Plaines-Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect-Palatine Water Commision, had asked for permission to divert 37.5 cubic feet of water a second. Tree Towns, made up of Elmhurst, Villa Park, Lombard and Elk Grove Village, asked for 53 cubic feet.

Other area suburbs, including the City of Rolling Meadows and the Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District, had asked for separate allocations. It was not clear yesterday whether those suburbs would receive state approval for their requests.

Guillou did say, however, that DAMP would be free to sell water to neighboring communities. It is not known whether those sales would have to come from DAMP's allocation or if they could come from the separate allocation of the community that would be buying water from DAMP.

Neither Robert Teepe, DAMP chairman, nor Clarence Damhurst, chairman of the Tree Towns commission, could be reached yesterday for comment.

Teepe said in May that the two water commissions have agreed in principle that a joint operation, including a commonly owned pipeline from Lake Michigan and filtration plant, would be in the best interests of both commissions.

THE COMMISSIONS, whose efforts have been stalled for two years since the state hearings, may be faced soon with a decision on the joint venture, which would cost more than $20 million just for DAMP's share.

Guillou has said agencies that receive allocations may lose them if they do not make use of them. It is understood that DAMP and Tree Towns would have to be making continued progress toward obtaining lake water or would lose their allocations.

Also, in an engineering study commissioned by DAMP and released in 1970, it was predicted that declining water levels in municipal wells would force DAMP's member communities to seek alternate sources of supply within five years.

The study concluded that joint facilities with Tree Towns "would be the most economical means of obtaining such a supply."

Des Plaines, still a member of DAMP, was excluded from the engineering studies because it now buys a portion of its water from the City of Chicago and presumably would not want to commit itself to a Lake Michigan supply system.

However, Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel said yesterday that the city "would be happy to get a portion of our water" from DAMP.

Palatine Village Mgr. Berton Braun yesterday said residents would probably pay slightly more to obtain lake water from DAMP than they now pay for municipal well water but added that the extra expense would be worthwhile.

MOST NORTHWEST suburbs, except Des Plaines, have experienced severe water shortages during the summer months in recent years, despite efforts to dig more wells. Lawn sprinkling restrictions are common in many area communities during the summer.

According to the engineering studies prepared for DAMP, a joint DAMP-Tree Towns operation would include an intake pipe in Lake Michigan in Glencoe at Lake-Cook Road.

The transmission main would be put in along the Chicago and North Western Ry. outer belt line right-of-way, connecting to a filtration plant near River and Central roads in Des Plaines. Both DAMP and Tree Towns would be served by the filtration plant.

DAMP's share of the cost would be paid by a $20,097,000 bond issue paid off from water revenues over a 40-year period. Cost to member communities per thousand gallons of water was estimated in the engineering report at 44 cents under this plan. However, increases in construction and interest costs could raise that price by the time the water system is completed.

Member communities would be expected to add to the 44-cent per thousand gallon price when selling water to individual residents and businesses in order to pay for maintenance of local water systems.

County Wheel Tax Suit Goes To Court Today

Arguments are expected to be heard today in the class action suit challenging the constitutionality of Cook County's tax on vehicles owned by unincorporated area residents.

The suit was filed in April on behalf of the Prospect Heights Improvement Association and the Cook County School Bus Co., Inc. of unincorporated Elk Grove Township. The case has been continued several times since it was first filed.

The tax imposes yearly charges on all vehicles in unincorporated areas. Similar to municipal vehicle stickers, the tax is $10-$15 for cars and various rates for trucks.

THE SUIT contends the tax is unconstitutional because it imposes a charge on only a portion of the county's citizens. According to Edward Berman, attorney for the plaintiffs, "It is collected from a limited number of county citizens who get no additional benefit from paying it."

The revenue from the tax had been slated for the county general fund, but two weeks ago, Cook County Board Pres. George W. Dunne announced the revenue would go instead to the sheriff's department. Cook County Sheriff's police are responsible for patrolling unincorporated areas.

Dunne made the announcement after listening to protests over the tax from a group of residents from Rich, Thornton, Bloom and Bremen townships.

One of the grounds for the suit was that while money was being collected from only some of the citizens, it would be used for all the citizens. Berman said Dunne's announcement would have no effect on the strength of his case. He did say, however, that the state's attorney plans to introduce Dunne's announcement as evidence on behalf of the county.

Water Retention Basin Gains MSD Approval

Construction on the long-planned Wilke-Kirchoff storm water retention basin in Arlington Heights is expected to begin within the next two weeks following formal approval yesterday by the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD).

In committee meetings yesterday morning, the trustees of the MSD voiced their approval to a new financial agreement between the district and the village and contracts to two construction companies.

Formal approval of the financial arrangements and the construction contracts is expected to be made when the MSD board of trustees meets this morning.

The approvals represent the last step, prior to actual construction, on the part of both the village and the MSD to provide the 14-acre storm water retention basin in the triangle of Wilke, Kirchoff and Central roads on the southwest side of Arlington Heights.

The basin, designed to retain approximately 11-acre-feet of storm water, is expected to reduce the flooding in Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows and nearby unincorporated areas.

IN ADDITION TO the construction of the actual basin, a reservoir outfall sewer will be constructed to provide a means to drain the basin into the existing village storm relief sewer system. The outfall sewer, which will comprise 3,829 lineal feet of pipe, will carry the water into Weller Creek.

The total cost of the project is now listed at $1,163,000. The MSD has agreed to contribute $736,000 while Arlington Heights' share will be $427,000.

When the MSD Board meets this morning it is expected to give final approval to the Kenney Construction Co., in the amount of $669,238, for the excavation of the basin and building a 7,000-gallon-per-minute storm water pumping station. The contract calls for the construction to be completed within about nine months.

The contract for the construction of the outfall sewer is expected to be awarded to the Santucci Construction Co., in the amount of $201,918.50. That work will be done simultaneously with the basin work and is expected to be completed within five months.

Both contracts contain penalty clauses in the event the construction is not completed within the specified times.

BEFORE THE CONTRACTS could be awarded the agreement between the village and the MSD had to be amended because the bids on the construction exceeded the original cost estimates by $318,156.

The original agreement between the two boards stipulated the village would provide the land, engineering and maintenance and operation costs while the MSD would contribute the costs of construction and the administration of construction.

The construction commitment by the MSD of $553,000 was outdated in May, however, when the lowest bids for the work totaled $871,156.

After a meeting of the two governmental bodies, the village board voted July 10 to share the excess cost of construction with the district because of the necessity for the project.

Of the excess amount, the village agreed to contribute an additional $135,000 toward the construction costs, leaving $183,156 to be paid by the MSD.

The total commitment to the project for Arlington Heights is $427,000 — $232,000 for land costs; $60,000 for engineering; and $135,000 for construction.

The contribution of the MSD is $736,000 — all earmarked for construction. The cost for any extra work which may be necessary will be the sole responsibility of the village.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Mayor John Woods attended the meeting yesterday and presented the MSD with a check for $135,000, which will be placed in escrow to cover the costs of the construction.

Woods distributed photographs of flooding in the area resulting from recent heavy rains and said he would like to meet "the engineer who coined the phrase '100-year rain.'" Woods said Arlington Heights had received three such rains in one week.

The mayor handed the check to MSD Pres. John E. Egan and said he hoped the board would vote "yes" on the contracts and the financial agreement. Speaking of the proposed basin, Woods said, "We need it and we need it badly."

Egan replied, "It will be started before you get another 100-year rain."

Earlier, MSD Trustee Valentine Janicki introduced Woods to the board and said, "Arlington Heights should be commended for what is about to happen." Janicki said it is an unusual thing for money to come forward from a community and added, "It shows the tremendous sincerity and the tremendous foresight on the part of the community and its mayor. The people of Arlington Heights are to be commended for it."

Once completed, the basin is expected to be maintained by the Arlington Heights Park District. When the basin is dry, it is scheduled to be used for four softball diamonds, a sledding hill, foot paths and a parking lot. The basin is designed to have a dry bottom except after heavy rains.

Can Your Turtle Do A 4-Day Mile?

Want to find out how fast your turtle is? Bring it to the turtle races sponsored by the Elk Grove Park District. Turtle races will be held at 10:00 a.m. tomorrow at the Lions wading pool in Lions Park on Kennedy Blvd.

There will be two classes of turtle racing, big turtles and small turtles. A $5 first prize will be awarded to the owners of the fastest turtles in both classes. Other prizes included gift certificates and turtle bowls. Prizes were donated by the Bit O'Tropics Fish Store in Elk Grove Village.

ROADSIDE VEGETABLE stands, once abundant in this area, are being squeezed out by residential and industrial development. Homegrown carrots, cabbage, beets, onions and corn can still be bought at stands like Koeppen's on Dundee Road. The last vegetable stand in Wheeling, Koeppen's has had to cut down on the type of produce sold because of dwindling farm land.

Bit Of Green Among Cement

by LYNN ASINOF

The last roadside vegetable stand in Wheeling lies nestled between two symbols of modern development — the flat-topped municipal building and Wickes Furniture Co.'s spacious new store.

Leafy green vegetables brighten the wooden stand that sports a painted sign in front that says, "Koeppen's." Although members of Andrew Koeppen's family have been farming and selling vegetables in Wheeling for 53 years, they have never owned the land they farm. Instead, they rent their fields from land owners in the area.

"We started with about 110 acres," said Mrs. Koeppen. "Now it's about 18 acres. Years ago we used to grow soybeans and larger stuff, but now it's just vegetables."

BIT BY BIT, property owners sold the land that the Koeppens used to farm, since real estate in Wheeling became more valuable. The fields now wrap around the municipal building, providing a striking contrast of the new and the old.

"We grow just about everything we sell," said 15-year-old Jane Koeppen. "This stuff over here isn't homegrown yet," she said, indicating a wooden table laden with fresh produce. "We have to wait for it to grow.

"We've had to cut down a lot," she added, "because we don't have that much land anymore."

The Koeppens have two large wooden tables at their stand. One displays the homegrown carrots, cabbage, beans, beets and other vegetables. The other is for produce that is not raised on the farm.

"We keep them separate to show which is homegrown," Mrs. Koeppen said. "Being truthful to your customers — that's the main thing."

She said most of the people who buy at their stand come from the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove area. "There are new customers, sure," she said. "But some go back 15, 20, 25 years."

THIS WEEKEND the Koeppens hope to start selling their most popular item, homegrown sweet corn. The corn is late this year because of the cold spring and rainy summer weather.

'We usually start selling the sweet corn around the 13th," Mrs. Koeppen said. 'This year there is a late growing season."

Members of the Koeppen family farm the land and run the stand as well. Although there are only three Koeppens at home now, son Jerry helps out on the weekends. A daughter who lives in Michigan also comes to help out occasionally.

The roadside vegetable stand is open from 9 a.m. to about 8:30 p.m., seven days a week from July until the end of October. Although the vegetables change with the crop seasons, the hours don't, and the Koeppens close their stand only when the weather is bad.

You Can Buy A Bracelet To Remember Our POWs

People wanting to purchase Prisoner-of-War and Missing-In-Action (POW-MIA) bracelets to aid Americans imprisoned or missing in Southeast Asia may do so at the Hoffman Estates currency Exchange in the Golf Rose Shopping Center, Roselle and Higging roads.

The sale of bracelets is sponsored by HELP, a local organization organized to keep the public aware that these men are being held in bondage in a foreign land.

Cost is $2.50 for a silver bracelet and $3 for a nickel bracelet, said Mrs. Kenneth Ehle, 178 Northview Ln., Hoffman Estates.

The currency exchange has a supply of both kinds of bracelets on hand and buyers can leave with the bracelet on their wrist. The bracelets include the name and rank of individual servicemen imprisoned or missing in action.

HELP is a non-profit, non-political organization. Proceeds from the bracelet sales are forwarded to VIVA, a non-profit student organization headquartered in Los Angeles.

With some 50 chapters throughout the nation, VIVA uses the money to produce more bracelets, print and distribute literature and bumper stickers and other related POW material to the community and schools throughout the nation.

Bracelets can also be ordered by mailing checks to HELP, P.O. Box, 561, Hoffman Estates. An additional 25 cents should be included for mailing costs.

Man Arrested, Charged With Robbery Attempt

A 40-year-old Palatine man was arrested Wednesday by Elk Grove Village police and charged with attempting to rob an Elk Grove Village woman in her home early Tuesday.

Elk Grove Village Police Det. John Landers said John Wilson, 250 Colfax St., Palatine, was identified by the woman after police arrested him in Palatine and returned him to the scene.

Wilson's car matched the description of the car seen leaving the home, according to police. The woman, who police refused to identify, said a man forced his way into her home and was attempting to rob her when he heard other voices in the house and fled. The woman's husband was taking a shower at the time.

No weapon was displayed during the incident, police said. Three Elk Grove Village policemen reportedly saw a car matching Wilson's in the vicinity of the woman's home after the alleged robbery attempt.

He was arrested in a Palatine store at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday. Bond was set at $5,000. His hearing is scheduled for Aug. 9 at Felony Court in Elk Grove Village.

Hope To Make Dundee Rd. Changes Here Beneficial

by STEVE FORSYTH

Dundee Road is destined to change, and the Village of Buffalo Grove is attempting to make the changes as beneficial and attractive as possible.

The plan commission met with members of the village board Wednesday night to discuss the future of the highway strip from Ill. Rte. 53 to the Wheeling village limits. It was the second meeting of the plan commission for discussion of development of the highway.

Commission chairman Carl Genrich said the village board sought the discussions to develop some broad principles as far as general building up of the area, but no specific guidelines have been set down.

According to Genrich, the village will seek commercial development in nodes, or pockets, from the Kommerly Real Estate offices eastward. That section has already been partially developed for businesses of various types.

THE REMAINDER, made up partly of single-family residences and partly taken up by Buffalo Grove High School and the Buffalo Grove Mall, will hopefully become higher density residences, such as townhouses.

The Happ farm on the north side of Dundee Road takes up the major portion of the undeveloped area which will likely be in the Buffalo Grove village limits. A new fire station is also being planned along Dundee Road, although negotiations for land have held up progress.

The village was given three basic options according to plans submitted by Associated Planners, consultants for the village. The firm is presently working on the village master plan, which will outline the best uses for all land in and around the village.

Norman Drummond of Associated Planners offered three color-coded maps as a basis for making the general decision. The plan commission had recommended the board adopt a policy which combined parts of all the plans.

"The presentation appears to be very clean and neat," said Village Mgr. Dan Larson. "It seems like a very logical pattern for the development of Dundee."

EVEN FADER presented the plan commission recommendations at the commission's workshop session. The commission had made its decision after hearing the plans at a meeting last week.

The planners warned that too much commercial zoning could ruin the area, which is scheduled to be repaved as a four-lane highway beginning next spring.

Included in the discussion was placement of traffic signals or flashers in the future.

According to the planning maps, lights or traffic controls will be needed at the realigned Arlington Heights Road intersection, Mill Creek, Golf View Terrace and the Ranch Mart shopping center. Temporary lights have already been installed at Buffalo Grove Road, and will be improved when that intersection is realigned during reconstruction of Dundee Road.

Also being considered is the aesthetic appearance of the development along the highway. The new village appearance commission will study any plans for buildings along the area, to keep it from becoming a strip of bright signs and driveways.

TANKS AND MASKS looked like complicated machines to those who attended the Wheeling Park District's scuba demonstration Wednesday night. Stricker's Decision On Wolf Suspension Upheld

The Wheeling fire and police commission has upheld a decision by Roger Stricker, village director of public safety, confirming police Sgt. Gene Wolf's three day suspension last month.

Reasons for the commission upholding the actions of Stricker are not known. According to commissioners, the reasons are in a written report of findings. The commissioners said they are seeking legal advice on whether the findings should be released to the public.

That advice was reportedly to have come yesterday afternoon, but the attorney gave no word on the subject.

STRICKER TOLD the Herald yesterday there are only two copies of the commission's findings. Wolf has one copy and Stricker has the other.

Stricker said he would show the report to the Herald but wasn't sure if it would be made public. Wolf is reportedly out of town.

Wolf appealed to the commission not to uphold the suspension of three days without pay. Wolf reportedly was suspended for writing a letter to the village board asking to make a speech during a regular board meeting, although that was never confirmed.

He reportedly had wanted to dispute statements made by Wheeling Trustee Michael Valenza that Wolf was giving special treatment to William Hoos, a former Wheeling Police patrolman who had resigned from the force.

NW Suburbs May Get Lake Water

The way to Lake Michigan is expected to be opened today for the Northwest suburbs when the State of Illinois approves lake water allocations for the DAMP Water Commission.

William Cellini, head of the department of transportation, is scheduled to approve requests from DAMP and the west suburban Tree Towns Water Commission that will allow both agencies to go ahead with their plans to obtain water from the lake.

Under a 1967 U. S. Supreme Court decree, Illinois was limited to a total withdrawal from the lake of 3,200 cubic feet of water per second. The state, given responsibility for parcelling out the water, held hearings on the matter two years ago and has delayed since then in announcing the allocations.

JOHN GUILLOU, director of the state division of water resource management, yesterday said the allocation order prepared by him provides for the requests made by DAMP and Tree Towns. He declined, however, to release the specific allocations until the order is signed by Cellini.

DAMP, known officially as the Des Plaines-Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect-Palatine Water Commision, had asked for permission to divert 37.5 cubic feet of water a second. Tree Towns, made up of Elmhurst, Villa Park, Lombard and Elk Grove Village, asked for 53 cubic feet.

Other area suburbs, including the City of Rolling Meadows and the Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District, had asked for separate allocations. It was not clear yesterday whether those suburbs would receive state approval for their requests.

Guillou did say, however, that DAMP would be free to sell water to neighboring communities. It is not known whether those sales would have to come from DAMP's allocation or if they could come from the separate allocation of the community that would be buying water from DAMP.

Neither Robert Teepe, DAMP chairman, nor Clarence Damhurst, chairman of the Tree Towns commission, could be reached yesterday for comment.

Teepe said in May that the two water commissions have agreed in principle that a joint operation, including a commonly owned pipeline from Lake Michigan and filtration plant, would be in the best interests of both commissions.

THE COMMISSIONS, whose efforts have been stalled for two years since the state hearings, may be faced soon with a decision on the joint venture, which would cost more than $20 million just for DAMP's share.

Guillou has said agencies that receive allocations may lose them if they do not make use of them. It is understood that DAMP and Tree Towns would have to be making continued progress toward obtaining lake water or would lose their allocations.

Also, in an engineering study commissioned by DAMP and released in 1970, it was predicted that declining water levels in municipal wells would force DAMP's member communities to seek alternate sources of supply within five years.

The study concluded that joint facilities with Tree Towns "would be the most economical means of obtaining such a supply."

Des Plaines, still a member of DAMP, was excluded from the engineering studies because it now buys a portion of its water from the City of Chicago and presumably would not want to commit itself to a Lake Michigan supply system.

However, Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel said yesterday that the city "would be happy to get a portion of our water" from DAMP.

Palatine Village Mgr. Berton Braun yesterday said residents would probably pay slightly more to obtain lake water from DAMP than they now pay for municipal well water but added that the extra expense would be worthwhile.

MOST NORTHWEST suburbs, except Des Plaines, have experienced severe water shortages during the summer months in recent years, despite efforts to dig more wells. Lawn sprinkling restrictions are common in many area communities during the summer.

According to the engineering studies prepared for DAMP, a joint DAMP-Tree Towns operation would include an intake pipe in Lake Michigan in Glencoe at Lake-Cook Road.

The transmission main would be put in along the Chicago and North Western Ry. outer belt line right-of-way, connecting to a filtration plant near River and Central roads in Des Plaines. Both DAMP and Tree Towns would be served by the filtration plant.

DAMP's share of the cost would be paid by a $20,097,000 bond issue paid off from water revenues over a 40-year period. Cost to member communities per thousand gallons of water was estimated in the engineering report at 44 cents under this plan. However, increases in construction and interest costs could raise that price by the time the water system is completed.

Member communities would be expected to add to the 44-cent per thousand gallon price when selling water to individual residents and businesses in order to pay for maintenance of local water systems.

County Wheel Tax Suit Goes To Court Today

Arguments are expected to be heard today in the class action suit challenging the constitutionality of Cook County's tax on vehicles owned by unincorporated area residents.

The suit was filed in April on behalf of the Prospect Heights Improvement Association and the Cook County School Bus Co., Inc. of unincorporated Elk Grove Township. The case has been continued several times since it was first filed.

The tax imposes yearly charges on all vehicles in unincorporated areas. Similar to municipal vehicle stickers, the tax is $10-$15 for cars and various rates for trucks.

THE SUIT contends the tax is unconstitutional because it imposes a charge on only a portion of the county's citizens. According to Edward Berman, attorney for the plaintiffs, "It is collected from a limited number of county citizens who get no additional benefit from paying it."

The revenue from the tax had been slated for the county general fund, but two weeks ago, Cook County Board Pres. George W. Dunne announced the revenue would go instead to the sheriff's department. Cook County Sheriff's police are responsible for patrolling unincorporated areas.

Dunne made the announcement after listening to protests over the tax from a group of residents from Rich, Thornton, Bloom and Bremen townships.

One of the grounds for the suit was that while money was being collected from only some of the citizens, it would be used for all the citizens. Berman said Dunne's announcement would have no effect on the strength of his case. He did say, however, that the state's attorney plans to introduce Dunne's announcement as avidence on behalf of the county.

2 Disappointed In Hospital Decision

by STEVE BROWN

Reaction to Wednesday's announcement that Presbyterian St. Luke's Medical Center plans to build a $12.5 million hospital in Schaumburg drew a variety of comments from members of the Northwest Cook County Health Needs Study Committee.

The committee, which has been in existence for about a year, commissioned a $20,000 study last month to determine the health care needs in the area.

All of the members of the committee, the villages of Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Hanover Park and Roselle and officials from Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village and Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, agreed to abide by the decision of the study. The actual survey work is being conducted by the consulting firm of Ernest and Ernest.

In announcing the decision to build the facility, Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher said he feels the village had "kept its commitment and still believes that a great amount of good will come from the study."

He decided to pursue the possibilities with Presbyterian St. Luke's hospital.

"It was too good an opportunity to pass up," Atcher said.

ATCHER SAID that he talked to other members of the committee and received no negative reaction to the plans for the new hospital.

However, at least two members of the committee, Alexian Brothers and Northwest Community Hospital, deny that Atcher ever approached them on the matter.

Steve Skorcz, assistant administrator at Alexian Brothers, and Malcolm Macoun, president of Northwest Community Hospital, said Atcher had not contacted them

Both expressed surprise, disappointment, and puzzlement over Schaumburg's and Presbyterian-St. Luke's decision to go ahead; when the study partially financed by a $13,000 state grant, is not completed.

"We find it a great personal disappointment that Presbyterian St. Luke's made no overture to the existing institution before announcing their plans," Skorcz said.

In evpressing his puzzlement over the situation, Macoun said, "We had hoped to get an objective study from this committee before any further plans were made."

Both said they plan to bring the new development before the committee at its next meeting.

ROSELLE MAYOR Robert Frantz said he does not feel the action will negate the study in any way.

"I do not feel that this development changes anyone's committment to abide by the decision of the study," Frantz said.

He said that with the opportunity to get a prestige institution into the area, it would have been foolish to pass it up.

Hoffman Estates' representative to the committee, Richard Regan, said he would have to wait to see the outcome of the study before determining the impact of the Schaumburg plans.

"This study was a step in the direction of cooperation, transcending provincial attitudes. We should not allow this development to bias the study and we should be able to transcend the development and still have a spirit of cooperation, Regan said.

He added that while the study would deal with immediate needs of the community, it will also analye the needs of a large area for the future.

NWMC Asked For Tree-Burning Reply

Efforts are under way to have the Northwest Municipal Conference come up with a solution to the current ban on tree burning in this area.

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert said yesterday he will ask the group to consider purchasing its own burning equipment for use by member municipalities or "subsidizing the county."

The Cook County Forest Preserve District burning area near Wheeling was closed June 30 because the county could not afford to install the air curtain destructors required by the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency. These burners are designed to cut down on the amount of smoke released into the air.

Teichert said that the county estimated it would cost $250,000 to install the five curtain destructors that would be necessary to handle the burning needs of the area.

"I INTEND TO write to all the mayors of the conference," Teichert said, "We all have the same problem."

The problem is that diseased and damaged trees have to be cut down and removed. Burning of the trees is the most effective means of staying the disease. It is also the least expensive, much cheaper than using the landfill method.

"It looks like it will be seven to 10 times more expensive for us to go with a landfill," Teichert said. "Collective action would be a very real approach."

Should the conference decide to buy its own equipment, a suitable site would have to be found first, and Teichert admitted that could be difficult. "Although it shouldn't be, because the curtain device cuts down the smoke."

There is no August meeting scheduled for the conference but Teichert said he hopes a special meeting could be called, if necessary.

SO FAR THIS year, Mount Prospect has had to cut down very few diseased trees. The cold weather has kept the bugs in control for the first part of the summer. Although Herbert Weeks, assistant public works director, fears the very recent warm weather may change the situations.

Weeks said that about 30 trees have ben cut down since the ban was put in effect. These trees have been stored in West Park, Golf and Busse roads.

ANOTHER 30 should come down, Weeks said, but instead they are stripping off the branches and leaving just the trunks up, a type of "on site" storage. Once September is here, the danger of the spread of tree disease lessons and the diseased trees can be cut down at any time.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said that under their contract it would cost about $99 a tree to have them hauled to a burning site near Melrose Park. The village cannot afford this, he said. A total of $10,000 has been budgeted for tree and stump removal this year.

Many of the village's trees have been damaged by the recent storms, and Eppley said the branches and trimmings removed from these trees has been shredded and the resulting material used as temporary roads in West Park.

Auto Accidents Cause $3,000 In Damage

More than $3,000 worth of damage to village and private property was caused in two separate auto accidents recently in Mount Prospect.

Police said William E. Cash, 18, of 922 Willow Rd., Wheeling, was slightly injured when his car hit seven trees and two mailboxes on Seneca Lane.

Cash was found 1½ blocks away from the scene in his Triumph convertible. Police said the heavily damaged car was filled with leaves and had branches in its frame.

Police charged Cash with damage to village property, driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquid and failure to drive on the right side of the road. He will appear Aug. 16 in the Mount Prospect branch of circuit court.

The accident happened shortly after 2 a.m.

IN THE SECOND accident, shortly after 2 a.m. Tuesday, a car operated by Paul K. Lutsch, 17, of 316 N. Wille St., Mount Prospect, struck a house at 503 W. Henry St.

Lutsch was listed in good condition yesterday at Holy Family Hospital. He suffered facial and arm cuts. About $1,000 damage was done to the Norbert A. Miloch home

An Aug. 30 court date has been set for Lutsch who has been charged with leaving the roadway, damage to village property and curfew violation.

Vegetable Stand Is Family Business

Koeppen's roadside vegetable stand may be the last such business in the village of Wheeling, but there is another stand nearby.

The Barkman family has operated a stand at 1066 S. Milwaukee Ave. for 25 years, taking over from parents who had run it during the Depression.

Koeppen's stand was featured in a story in the Herald yesterday as the last example of roadside stands which used to dot the area.

Mrs. Barkman said the 40 acres they farm are also endangered, as the family is considering selling the acreage for development. This could be the last year for the family business, Mrs. Barkman said.

State To OK NW Suburb Bid For Water From Lake

The way to Lake Michigan is expected to be opened today for the Northwest suburbs when the State of Illinois approves lake water allocations for the DAMP Water Commission.

William Cellini, head of the department of transportation, is scheduled to approve requests from DAMP and the west suburban Tree Towns Water Commission that will allow both agencies to go ahead with their plans to obtain water from the lake.

Under a 1967 U. S. Supreme Court decree, Illinois was limited to a total withdrawal from the lake of 3,200 cubic feet of water per second. The state, given responsibility for parcelling out the water, held hearings on the matter two years ago and has delayed since then in announcing the allocations.

JOHN GUILLOU, director of the state division of water resource management, yesterday said the allocation order prepared by him provides for the requests made by DAMP and Tree Towns. He declined, however, to release the specific allocations until the order is signed by Cellini.

DAMP, known officially as the Des Plaines-Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect-Palatine Water Commision, had asked for permission to divert 37.5 cubic feet of water a second. Tree Towns, made up of Elmhurst, Villa Park, Lombard and Elk Grove Village, asked for 53 cubic feet.

Other area suburbs, including the City of Rolling Meadows and the Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District, had asked for separate allocations. It was not clear yesterday whether those suburbs would receive state approval for their requests.

Guillou did say, however, that DAMP would be free to sell water to neighboring communities. It is not known whether those sales would have to come from DAMP's allocation or if they could come from the separate allocation of the community that would be buying water from DAMP.

Neither Robert Teepe, DAMP chairman, nor Clarence Damhurst, chairman of the Tree Towns commission, could be reached yesterday for comment.

Teepe said in May that the two water commissions have agreed in principle that a joint operation, including a commonly owned pipeline from Lake Michigan and filtration plant, would be in the best interests of both commissions.

THE COMMISSIONS, whose efforts have been stalled for two years since the state hearings, may be faced soon with a decision on the joint venture, which would cost more than $20 million just for DAMP's share.

Guillou has said agencies that receive allocations may lose them if they do not make use of them. It is understood that DAMP and Tree Towns would have to be making continued progress toward obtaining lake water or would lose their allocations.

Also, in an engineering study commissioned by DAMP and released in 1970, it was predicted that declining water levels in municipal wells would force DAMP's member communities to seek alternate sources of supply within five years.

The study concluded that joint facilities with Tree Towns "would be the most economical means of obtaining such a supply."

Des Plaines, still a member of DAMP, was excluded from the engineering studies because it now buys a portion of its water from the City of Chicago and presumably would not want to commit itself to a Lake Michigan supply system.

However, Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel said yesterday that the city "would be happy to get a portion of our water" from DAMP.

Palatine Village Mgr. Berton Braun yesterday said residents would probably pay slightly more to obtain lake water from DAMP than they now pay for municipal well water but added that the extra expense would be worthwhile.

MOST NORTHWEST suburbs, except Des Plaines, have experienced severe water shortages during the summer months in recent years, despite efforts to dig more wells. Lawn sprinkling restrictions are common in many area communities during the summer.

According to the engineering studies prepared for DAMP, a joint DAMP-Tree Towns operation would include an intake pipe in Lake Michigan in Glencoe at Lake-Cook Road.

The transmission main would be put in along the Chicago and North Western Ry. outer belt line right-of-way, connecting to a filtration plant near River and Central roads in Des Plaines. Both DAMP and Tree Towns would be served by the filtration plant.

DAMP's share of the cost would be

JUST SEE what they'd call you. Flooding was certainly on the minds of the Palatine village trustees as they paddled, swam or floated their way to the regular meeting Monday night. Casting a glance toward the window, Trustee Shirley Munson deadpanned: "I thought we could call the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District for standing water problems."

WAILING WARNING. Referring to an instance last Friday night when the siren signalling a tornado watch apparently went off on its own, Trustee Wendell Jones asked about "unnecessarily terrorizing citizens." "The only words my daughter knows are 'mamma,' 'dadda,' 'bye.bye' and 'siren,' " he said. Then, in his best Charley Weaver style, he added: "She's 14 years old."

NO WONDER mothers get gray hairs. The six women who came to Village Mgr. Bert Braun's office Tuesday to talk about their flooded basements brought along 11 youngsters, 10 of them under three feet tall. During the hour-long discussion, the kids racked up: two sprained knees; three trips to the bathroom (including one by an immodest miss who emerged sans clothing); at least half a dozen instances of getting stuck halfway through the bars of the staircase railing; and a full hour (yes, a full hour) of screams.

THEY'RE ALL the same. Plan commissioner Bryan Coughlin wanted to know what kind of restaurant a developer planned to include in his small shopping complex. "What difference does it make?" commission chairman Tom Moody asked. "You only care if they sell beer."

JUST FORWARD their mail to Sing-Sing. Commissioner Ron Kennedy took an optimistic view of most of the plan commissioners' failure to submit income disclosure forms to the state: "Maybe we'll all go to the same jail."

Twp. Government Referendum Is Being Sought

Petitions are circulating in Palatine Township to get a referendum on the November general election ballot asking for a yes or no vote on the township form of government.

Palatine's League of Women Voters (LWV) have distributed 80 petitions to members and interested citizens in the past two weeks. They need approximately 1,710 signatures to get the issue on the ballot.

A tally of the signatures will be made at an Aug. 3 LWV board meeting, and women heading the drive hope to have the required number of signatures by Aug. 7.

Action to reconsider the township form of government began when an in-depth look at the township's functions was organized by the LWV.

"The large number of taxing bodies in Illinois is confusing to most people," said Ann Scollay, one of the drive's organizers. Many functions of the township have been taken over by the other taxing bodies, and those that aren't could be, LWV members concluded in their analysis.

The issue isn't restricted to Palatine Township. Similar petitions are circulating in both Northfield and Niles townships.

McElroy Named To Library Board

Gerald A. McElroy, long-time superintendent of School Dist. 211, was appointed to the Palatine Library Board of Trustees Wednesday night. He will fill the position vacated by Dr. Ralph W. Morris, who resigned last month.

After 39 years with Dist. 211, McElroy retired as superintendent in 1970. It was a position he had held since 1952. He helped get the Palatine Relays off the ground in 1935 and has been active in the relays since that time.

McElroy, who lives at 602 E. Palatine Rd., accepted his appointment after trustees phoned him during their meeting Wednesday.

"We're highly pleased to have him join our board," Dorothea Gilpin, board president, said.

Most of the board meeting was spent considering by-law revisions. Changes approved were:

Free library cards for low-income people living outside Palatine or other library jurisdictions may be issued if they are requested from the library board. The normal fee for Palatine non-residents is $30. The low-income category may apply to such people as the elderly, the disabled, or migrant workers.

Overdue book fines were raised from three to five cents a day in an effort to speed up circulation of books. A poll of area libraries showed most of them charged five cents. Borrowing privileges may be suspended for card-holders who don't return books.

For library holidays that fall on Monday during the year, the library will close the preceding Sunday, rather than stay open.

Administrative librarian Donna Grove announced two new appointments, one of which has been vacant for several months. Sue Kim, who has been in the Skokie cataloging department for four years, will head the technical services department. The new children's department assistant will be Mrs. Tipton Mihalick, formerly a children's storyteller at the library on Saturdays.

An independent appraisal of the new library site, 245 Smith St., was ordered by the board, and a special meeting was set for Aug. 9.

Their Idea Of Summer Fun? Would You Believe School

Summer school usually doesn't rank as a favorite summer pastime among students.

That is unless they're among the 55 students in the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 summer migrant program at Plum Grove School in Rolling Meadows.

To these youngsters summer school is something to look forward to. It means field trips, swimming, sewing, cooking, typing, videotaping, workshop, games, singing, hot lunches and even a little work which is fun for the most part.

The activities open up a world of new experiences for most of these students and are part of an effort to improve their educational level and enhance their life style.

The program, now in its fourth summer, is 100 per cent funded by the federal government's Title I program.

LAST YEAR more than 80 children were in the program. A change in federal guidelines making only the children of true agricultural migrants eligible and not the children of migrants who have settled in the area has reduced the eligible participants.

Children in the program range in age from 3 to 15 years old. The eight-week program meets five days a week from 8:30 to 1:30 p.m.

Practical arts were added on the intermediate level of the summer migrant program this year. After they picked out their material, the girls are sewing aprons and beach bags. When they finish their own projects they will start on beach bags for the girls in the primary group.

The beach bags come in handy Wednesday mornings when the 55 students take swimming lessons at the Palatine Community Pool. A favorite with the students, one can often overhear them asking, "How many days until we go swimming?" None of the students are afraid of the water and their teacher says some are becoming pretty good swimmers.

While the girls are sewing the boys are in woodshop. Having completed the base for a lamp, they are now working on a fish wall plaque.

THE LAST three weeks of the program the girls will spend in cooking. The primary youngsters are receiving on introduction to basic cooking in their regular classes. To date they have made applesauce and Jello.

At the end of each day the intermediate students spend an hour learning to type. Another addition to the curriculum this year is videotaping. Seven of the students are learning to operate the videotape equipment. Their big project for the summer will be making a film of activities in the program to show to the parents during a fiesta at the end of the program.

Like Wednesday, Friday is another day the students look forward to. Friday is set aside each week for a field trip. So far these have included a train ride to the Fox River Grove where the group had a picnic, a trip to Pioneer Park for the primary students and to Woodfield Mall and Alexian Brothers Hospital for the intermediate students.

Trips in the planning include a visit to O'Hare Airport, a boat ride in Chicago, a visit to the Chicago and Palatine police stations and the Brookfield Zoo.

THE MORNING hours are devoted to reading, writing, mathematics and other basic skills. Instruction is on an individual or small groups basis. This is necessary because some of the students have attended school and others haven't and all are on different levels, according to Mrs. Peggy Bishop, coordinator of the program.

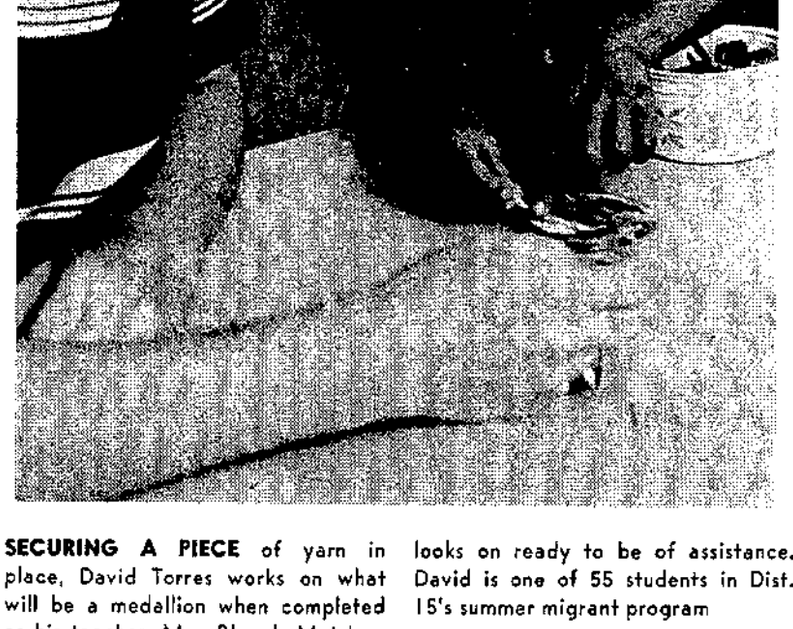
Several learning kits and machines are used in the program to make learning more enjoyable.

Another important aspect of the program is developing an appreciation and understanding of their own culture among the students. This is done through songs, art projects and discussions.

Working with the students during the day is a team of two certified teachers and certified teachers in practical arts, two teacher aids, two parent aids and six high school volunteers.

Not as enthusiastically greeted by the students is the dental hygiene program. In groups of six the students are taken to Harper College where they have their teeth cleaned. This is followed by instructions on dental hygiene and then the students are given toothbrushes and toothpaste. The students are also given immunization shots if they haven't had them as well as tuberculosis tests during the summer.

GETTING SOME POINTERS from his teacher, Paul Hanson, Victor Villarrial is ready to put the finishing touches on his lamp base. Practical arts has been added to the summer migrant program curriculum for the first time this year. While the boys are in woodshop, the girls are in sewing class.



SECURING A PIECE of yarn in place, David Torres works on what will be a medallion when completed as his teacher, Mrs. Rhonda Motzkus, looks on ready to be of assistance. David is one of 55 students in Dist. 15's summer migrant program

Schaumburg Hospital Move Disappointing To Two Here

by STEVE BROWN

Reaction to Wednesday's announcement that Presbyterian St. Luke's Medical Center plans to build a $12.5 million hospital in Schaumburg drew a variety of comments from members of the Northwest Cook County Health Needs Study Committee.

The committee, which has been in existence for about a year, commissioned a $20,000 study last month to determine the health care needs in the area.

All of the members of the committee, the villages of Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Hanover Park and Roselle and officials from Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village and Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, agreed to abide by the decision of the study. The actual survey work is being conducted by the consulting firm of Ernest and Ernest.

In announcing the decision to build the facility, Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher said he feels the village had "kept its commitment and still believes that a great amount of good will come from the study."

He decided to pursue the possibilities with Presbyterian St. Luke's hospital.

"It was too good an opportunity to pass up," Atcher said.

ATCHER SAID that he talked to other members of the committee and received no negative reaction to the plans for the new hospital.

However, at least two members of the committee, Alexian Brothers and Northwest Community Hospital, deny that Atcher ever approached them on the matter.

Steve Skorcz, assistant administrator at Alexian Brothers, and Malcolm Macoun, president of Northwest Community Hospital, said Atcher had not contacted them

Both expressed surprise, disappointment, and puzzlement over Schaumburg's and Presbyterian-St. Luke's decision to go ahead; when the study partially financed by a $13,000 state grant, is not completed.

"We find it a great personal disappointment that Presbyterian St. Luke's made no overture to the existing institution before announcing their plans," Skorcz said.

In evpressing his puzzlement over the situation, Macoun said, "We had hoped to get an objective study from this committee before any further plans were made."

Both said they plan to bring the new development before the committee at its next meeting.

ROSELLE MAYOR Robert Frantz said he does not feel the action will negate the study in any way.

"I do not feel that this development changes anyone's committment to abide by the decision of the study," Frantz said.

He said that with the opportunity to get a prestige institution into the area, it would have been foolish to pass it up.

Hoffman Estates' representative to the committee, Richard Regan, said he would have to wait to see the outcome of the study before determining the impact of the Schaumburg plans.

"This study was a step in the direction of cooperation, transcending provincial attitudes. We should not allow this development to bias the study and we should be able to transcend the development and still have a spirit of cooperation, Regan said.

He added that while the study would deal with immediate needs of the community, it will also analye the needs of a large area for the future.

paid by a $20,097,000 bond issue paid off from water revenues over a 40-year period. Cost to member communities per thousand gallons of water was estimated in the engineering report at 44 cents under this plan. However, increases in construction and interest costs could raise that price by the time the water system is completed.

Member communities would be expected to add to the 44-cent per thousand gallon price when selling water to individual residents and businesses in order to pay for maintenance of local water systems.

The only admission charge to the fair is a $1 parking fee.

Nearly 135 families in Arlington Heights have children who are members of the 4-H Club. The North Cook County fair is an all-volunteer effort.

You just can't imagine the display of trims that Finn's Fabrics of 113 N. Cook St., Barrington have since expanding their store. One entire wall is covered by trims.

Of course they also have many more fabrics from which to choose. I found gorgeous acrylic seersuckers in plaids and plains which have a look of wool — a most outstanding fabric.

Retention Basin Work May Start In TwoWeeks

Construction on the long-planned Wilke-Kirchoff storm water retention basin in Arlington Heights is expected to begin within the next two weeks following formal approval yesterday by the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD).

In committee meetings yesterday morning, the trustees of the MSD voiced their approval to a new financial agreement between the district and the village and contracts to two construction companies.

Formal approval of the financial arrangements and the construction contracts is expected to be made when the MSD board of trustees meets this morning.

The approvals represent the last step, prior to actual construction, on the part of both the village and the MSD to provide the 14-acre storm water retention basin in the triangle of Wilke, Kirchoff and Central roads on the southwest side of Arlington Heights.

The basin, designed to retain approximately 11-acre-feet of storm water, is expected to reduce the flooding in Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows and nearby unincorporated areas.

IN ADDITION TO the construction of the actual basin, a reservoir outfall sewer will be constructed to provide a means to drain the basin into the existing village storm relief sewer system. The outfall sewer, which will comprise 3,829 lineal feet of pipe, will carry the water into Weller Creek.

The total cost of the project is now listed at $1,163,000. The MSD has agreed to contribute $736,000 while Arlington Heights' share will be $427,000.

When the MSD Board meets this morning it is expected to give final approval to the Kenney Construction Co., in the amount of $669,238, for the excavation of the basin and building a 7,000-gallon-per-minute storm water pumping station. The contract calls for the construction to be completed within about nine months.

The contract for the construction of the outfall sewer is expected to be awarded to the Santucci Construction Co., in the amount of $201,918.60. That work will be done simultaneously with the basin work and is expected to be completed within five months.

Both contracts contain penalty clauses in the event the construction is not completed within the specified times.

BEFORE THE CONTRACTS could be awarded the agreement between the village and the MSD had to be amended because the bids on the construction ex-

NW Suburbs May Get Lake Water

The way to Lake Michigan is expected to be opened today for the Northwest suburbs when the State of Illinois approves lake water allocations for the DAMP Water Commission.

William Cellini, head of the department of transportation, is scheduled to approve requests from DAMP and the west suburban Tree Towns Water Commission that will allow both agencies to go ahead with their plans to obtain water from the lake.

Under a 1967 U. S. Supreme Court decree, Illinois was limited to a total withdrawal from the lake of 3,200 cubic feet of water per second. The state, given responsibility for parcelling out the water, held hearings on the matter two years ago and has delayed since then in announcing the allocations.

JOHN GUILLOU, director of the state division of water resource management, yesterday said the allocation order prepared by him provides for the requests made by DAMP and Tree Towns. He declined, however, to release the specific allocations until the order is signed by Cellini.

DAMP, known officially as the Des Plaines-Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect-Palatine Water Commision, had asked for permission to divert 37.5 cubic feet of water a second. Tree Towns, made up of Elmhurst, Villa Park, Lombard and Elk Grove Village, asked for 53 cubic feet.

Other area suburbs, including the City of Rolling Meadows and the Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District, had asked for separate allocations. It was not clear yesterday whether those suburbs would receive state approval for their requests.

Guillou did say, however, that DAMP would be free to sell water to neighboring communities. It is not known whether those sales would have to come from DAMP's allocation or if they could come from the separate allocation of the community that would be buying water from DAMP.

Neither Robert Teepe, DAMP chairman, nor Clarence Damhurst, chairman of the Tree Towns commission, could be reached yesterday for comment.

Teepe said in May that the two water commissions have agreed in principle that a joint operation, including a commonly owned pipeline from Lake Michigan and filtration plant, would be in the best interests of both commissions.

THE COMMISSIONS, whose efforts have been stalled for two years since the state hearings, may be faced soon with a decision on the joint venture, which would cost more than $20 million just for DAMP's share.

Guillou has said agencies that receive allocations may lose them if they do not make use of them. It is understood that DAMP and Tree Towns would have to be making continued progress toward obtaining lake water or would lose their allocations.

Also, in an engineering study commissioned by DAMP and released in 1970, it was predicted that declining water levels in municipal wells would force DAMP's member communities to seek alternate sources of supply within five years.

The study concluded that joint facilities with Tree Towns "would be the most economical means of obtaining such a supply."

Des Plaines, still a member of DAMP, was excluded from the engineering studies because it now buys a portion of its

For Rest Room Wall Collapse

Damage Suit Faces Delay

A $1 5 million damage suit filed against High School Dist. 214 is moving slowly through the Cook County judicial processes, and the attorney for the families involved does not believe it will come to trial for another three years.

The suit was filed last year on behalf of three Arlington High School students seriously injured when a "modesty wall" in a school rest room collapsed on them as the result of a prank.

The boys, Brad Boice, 814 Ridge Ave.; William Kelly, 751 S Burton Pl. and William Horn, 1345 N. Highland, were trying to force their way out of the restroom by placing their backs against the wall and pusing on the door when the wall collapsed. Two other boys had locked the door from the outside by slipping a two-by-four through the door handles.

All three victims suffered compressed fractures of the spine. Horn died several months later as a result of complications from his injuries.

THE LAWSUIT, on behalf of Boice, Kelly and the Horn family, was filed shortly after the accident by attorney John D Hayes. It charges the school district, the company that constructed the wall and the two boys who locked the door with negligence.

Hayes said Wednesday he has been preparing the case and is having tests conducted on the materials used in the wall. Boice, he said, has been hospitalized several times because of recurring infections, but neither he nor Kelly are paralyzed

Hayes said because of the backlog of cases in Cook County courts he does not expect the case to come to trial until about four years after it was filed The case was filed about one month after the January 1971 accident.

He said pretrial conferences will probably be held with the school district's insurance company but added, "At this point I can't say whether the case will be settled out of court because we simply don't know enough."

THIS WAS THE SCENE at Arlington High School last January after a wall collapsed on three students, killing one of them. A $1.5 million damage suit against High School Dist. 214, filed on behalf of two of the boys and the family of the deceased boy is moving slowly through the Cook County judicial processes.

Schaumburg Hospital Move Disappointing To Two Here

by STEVE BROWN

Reaction to Wednesday's announcement that Presbyterian St. Luke's Medical Center plans to build a $12.5 million hospital in Schaumburg drew a variety of comments from members of the Northwest Cook County Health Needs Study Committee.

The committee, which has been in existence for about a year, commissioned a $20,000 study last month to determine the health care needs in the area.

All of the members of the committee, the villages of Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Hanover Park and Roselle and officials from Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village and Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, agreed to abide by the decision of the study. The actual survey work is being conducted by the consulting firm of Ernest and Ernest.

In announcing the decision to build the facility, Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher said he feels the village had "kept its commitment and still believes that a great amount of good will come from the study."

He decided to pursue the possibilities with Presbyterian St Luke's hospital.

"It was too good an opportunity to pass up," Atcher said.

ATCHER SAID that he talked to other members of the committee and received no negative reaction to the plans for the new hospital.

However, at least two members of the committee, Alexian Brothers and Northwest Community Hospital, deny that Atcher ever approached them on the matter.

Steve Skorcz, assistant administrator at Alexian Brothers, and Malcolm Macoun, president of Northwest Community Hospital, said Atcher had not contacted them

Both expressed surprise, disappointment, and puzzlement over Schaumburg's and Presbyterian-St. Luke's decision to go ahead; when the study partially financed by a $13,000 state grant, is not completed.

"We find it a great personal disappointment that Presbyterian St. Luke's made no overture to the existing institution before announcing their plans," Skorcz said.

In expressing his puzzlement over the situation, Macoun said, "We had hoped to get an objective study from this committee before any further plans were made."

Both said they plan to bring the new development before the committee at its next meeting.

ROSELLE MAYOR Robert Frantz said he does not feel the action will negate the study in any way.

"I do not feel that this development changes anyone's committment to abide by the decision of the study," Frantz said.

He said that with the opportunity to get a prestige institution into the area, it would have been foolish to pass it up.

Hoffman Estates' representative to the committee, Richard Regan, said he would have to wait to see the outcome of the study before determining the impact of the Schaumburg plans

"This study was a step in the direction of cooperation, transcending provincial attitudes We should not allow this development to bias the study and we should be able to transcend the development and still have a spirit of cooperation, Regan said.

He added that while the study would deal with immediate needs of the community, it will also analye the needs of a large area for the future.

Water Retention Basin Gains MSD Approval

ceeded the original cost estimates by $318,156

The original agreement between the two boards stipulated the village would provide the land, engineering and maintenance and operation costs while the MSD would contribute the costs of construction and the administration of construction

The construction commitment by the MSD of $553,000 was outdated in May, however, when the lowest bids for the work totaled $871,156.

After a meeting of the two governmental bodies, the village board voted July 10 to share the excess cost of construction with the district because of the necessity for the project.

Of the excess amount, the village agreed to contribute an additional $135,000 toward the construction costs, leaving $183,156 to be paid by the MSD.

The total commitment to the project for Arlington Heights is $427,000 — $232,000 for land costs; $60,000 for engineering, and $135,000 for construction

The contribution of the MSD is $736,000 — all earmarked for construction. The cost for any extra work which may be necessary will be the sole responsibility of the village.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Mayor John Woods attended the meeting yesterday and presented the MSD with a check for $135,000, which will be placed in escrow to cover the costs of the construction.

Woods distributed photographs of flooding in the area resulting from recent heavy rains and said he would like to meet "the engineer who coined the phrase '100-year rain.'" Woods said Arlington Heights had received three such rains in one week

The mayor handed the check to MSD Pres. John E. Egan and said he hoped the board would vote "yes" on the contracts and the financial agreement. Speaking of the proposed basin, Woods said, "We need it and we need it badly."

Egan replied, "It will be started before you get another 100-year rain"

Earlier, MSD Trustee Valentine Janicki introduced Woods to the board and said, "Arlington Heights should be commended for what is about to happen." Janicki said it is an unusual thing for money to come forward from a community and added, "It shows the tremendous sincerity and the tremendous foresight on the part of the community and its mayor. The people of Arlington Heights are to be commended for it."

Once completed, the basin is expected to be maintained by the Arlington Heights Park District When the basin is dry, it is scheduled to be used for four softball diamonds, a sledding hill, foot paths and a parking lot. The basin is designed to have a dry bottom except after heavy rains.

Area 4-H Fair To Open Today

Dog and horse shows, Indian dancers and square dancers, exhibits, rides and games all are being planned for the North Cook County 4-H Fair, which will be held today through Sunday next to the Arlington Heights Elks Club at the intersection of Rte. 53 and Palatine Road.

The fair opens today at noon with the judging of 4-H exhibits followed by the presentation of trophies at 7 p.m. by the Hiawatha Indian Dancers.

Saturday's program begins at 9 a.m. with a junior horse show. A square dancing exhibition and square dancing for all highlight the evening's entertainment.

Sunday the 4-H horse and pony show and judging is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. with dog and cat shows set for the afternoon.

The only admission charge to the fair is a $1 parking fee.

Diabetes Testing Program Returns Are Called Poor

Poor returns from a diabetes testing program sponsored by the Rolling Meadows Board of Health several weeks ago have convinced the board to not offer the tests citywide.

City Sanitarian Donald Schindler said yesterday only about 25 per cent of the diabetes tests distributed in a door-to-door campaign have been returned to him for processing.

He said the disappointing return is the reason for curtailing the program.

But residents who wish to obtain the simple, self-administered test for diabetes will be able to pick them up at city hall.

State To Approve New Bid For Water

water from the City of Chicago and presumably would not want to commit itself to a Lake Michigan supply system.

However, Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel said yesterday that the city "would be happy to get a portion of our water" from DAMP.

Palatine Village Mgr Berton Braun yesterday said residents would probably pay slightly more to obtain lake water from DAMP than they now pay for municipal well water but added that the extra expense would be worthwhile.

MOST NORTHWEST suburbs, except Des Plaines, have experienced severe water shortages during the summer months in recent years, despite efforts to dig more wells. Lawn sprinkling restrictions are common in many area communities during the summer.

According to the engineering studies prepared for DAMP, a joint DAMP-Tree Towns operation would include an intake pipe in Lake Michigan in Glencoe at Lake-Cook Road.

The transmission main would be put in along the Chicago and North Western Ry. outer belt line right-of-way, connecting to a filtration plant near River and Central roads in Des Plaines. Both DAMP and Tree Towns would be served by the filtration plant.

DAMP's share of the cost would be paid by a $20,097,000 bond issue paid off from water revenues over a 40-year period. Cost to member communities per thousand gallons of water was estimated in the engineering report at 44 cents under this plan. However, increases in construction and interest costs could raise that price by the time the water system is completed.

Member communities would be expected to add to the 44-cent per thousand gallon price when selling water to individual residents and businesses in order to pay for maintenance of local water systems.

County Wheel Tax Suit Goes To Court Today

Arguments are expected to be heard today in the class action suit challenging the constitutionality of Cook County's tax on vehicles owned by unincorporated area residents

The suit was filed in April on behalf of the Prospect Heights Improvement Association and the Cook County School Bus Co, Inc of unincorporated Elk Grove Township. The case has been continued several times since it was first filed

The tax imposes yearly charges on all vehicles in unincorporated areas. Similar to municipal vehicle stickers, the tax is $10-$15 for cars and various rates for trucks

THE SUIT contends the tax is unconstitutional because it imposes a charge on only a portion of the county's citizens According to Edward Berman, attorney for the plaintiffs, "It is collected from a limited number of county citizens who get no additional benefit from paying it"

The revenue from the tax had been slated for the county general fund, but two weeks ago, Cook County Board Pres George W Dunne announced the revenue would go instead to the sheriff's department Cook County Sheriff's police are responsible for patrolling unincorporated areas

Dunne made the announcement after listening to protests over the tax from a group of residents from Rich, Thornton, Bloom and Bremen townships.

Plan To Hire Students For Ecology Work

The Rolling Meadows Recycling, Ecology and Beautification (REB) committee is planning to hire high school students to work on the monthly ecology days

Bob Iannacome, a member of the committee, said the panel decided on the move in order to get more young people participating in the program.

He said the committee is very satisfied with the work being done now by community youth organizations, but added that most of the participants are small children and they want to get greater involvement of high-school-age youth.

The committee plans to pay the students an hourly wage, and will hire about five for each ecology day.

James McFeggan, committee chairman, said the plan will be acted upon once it is learned if work permits will be necessary for teenagers under 16

He said the idea of limiting the hiring to those at least 16 was discarded because it "completely excludes the 14 and 15 year olds" He said, however, that a minimum age of 14 would probably be established

State To OK NW Suburb Bid For Water From Lake

The way to Lake Michigan is expected to be opened today for the Northwest suburbs when the State of Illinois approves lake water allocations for the DAMP Water Commission.

William Cellini, head of the department of transportation, is scheduled to approve requests from DAMP and the west suburban Tree Towns Water Commission that will allow both agencies to go ahead with their plans to obtain water from the lake.

Under a 1967 U. S. Supreme Court decree, Illinois was limited to a total withdrawal from the lake of 3,200 cubic feet of water per second. The state, given responsibility for parcelling out the water, held hearings on the matter two years ago and has delayed since then in announcing the allocations.

JOHN GUILLOU, director of the state division of water resource management, yesterday said the allocation order prepared by him provides for the requests made by DAMP and Tree Towns. He declined, however, to release the specific allocations until the order is signed by Cellini.

DAMP, known officially as the Des Plaines-Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect-Palatine Water Commision, had asked for permission to divert 37.5 cubic feet of water a second. Tree Towns, made up of Elmhurst, Villa Park, Lombard and Elk Grove Village, asked for 53 cubic feet.

Other area suburbs, including the City of Rolling Meadows and the Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District, had asked for separate allocations. It was not clear yesterday whether those suburbs would receive state approval for their requests.

Guillou did say, however, that DAMP would be free to sell water to neighboring communities. It is not known whether those sales would have to come from DAMP's allocation or if they could come from the separate allocation of the community that would be buying water from DAMP.

Neither Robert Teepe, DAMP chairman, nor Clarence Damhurst, chairman of the Tree Towns commission, could be reached yesterday for comment.

Teepe said in May that the two water commissions have agreed in principle that a joint operation, including a commonly owned pipeline from Lake Michigan and filtration plant, would be in the best interests of both commissions.

THE COMMISSIONS, whose efforts have been stalled for two years since the state hearings, may be faced soon with a decision on the joint venture, which would cost more than $20 million just for DAMP's share.

Guillou has said agencies that receive allocations may lose them if they do not make use of them. It is understood that DAMP and Tree Towns would have to be making continued progress toward obtaining lake water or would lose their allocations.

Also, in an engineering study commissioned by DAMP and released in 1970, it was predicted that declining water levels in municipal wells would force DAMP's member communities to seek alternate sources of supply within five years.

The study concluded that joint facilities with Tree Towns "would be the most economical means of obtaining such a supply."

Des Plaines, still a member of DAMP, was excluded from the engineering studies because it now buys a portion of its water from the City of Chicago and presumably would not want to commit itself to a Lake Michigan supply system.

However, Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel said yesterday that the city "would be happy to get a portion of our water" from DAMP.

Palatine Village Mgr. Berton Braun yesterday said residents would probably pay slightly more to obtain lake water from DAMP than they now pay for municipal well water but added that the extra expense would be worthwhile.

MOST NORTHWEST suburbs, except Des Plaines, have experienced severe water shortages during the summer months in recent years, despite efforts to dig more wells. Lawn sprinkling restrictions are common in many area communities during the summer.

DAMP's share of the cost would be paid by a $20,097,000 bond issue paid off from water revenues over a 40-year period. Cost to member communities per thousand gallons of water was estimated in the engineering report at 44 cents under this plan. However, increases in construction and interest costs could raise that price by the time the water system is completed.

Member communities would be expected to add to the 44-cent per thousand gallon price when selling water to individual residents and businesses in order to pay for maintenance of local water systems.

NWMC Asked For Tree-Burning Reply

Efforts are under way to have the Northwest Municipal Conference come up with a solution to the current ban on tree burning in this area.

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert said yesterday he will ask the group to consider purchasing its own burning equipment for use by member municipalities or "subsidizing the county."

The Cook County Forest Preserve District burning area near Wheeling was closed June 30 because the county could not afford to install the air curtain destructors required by the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency. These burners are designed to cut down on the amount of smoke released into the air.

Teichert said that the county estimated it would cost $250,000 to install the five curtain destructors that would be necessary to handle the burning needs of the area.

"I INTEND TO write to all the mayors of the conference," Teichert said, "We all have the same problem."

The problem is that diseased and damaged trees have to be cut down and removed. Burning of the trees is the most effective means of staying the disease. It is also the least expensive, much cheaper than using the landfill method.

"It looks like it will be seven to 10 times more expensive for us to go with a landfill," Teichert said. "Collective action would be a very real approach."

Should the conference decide to buy its own equipment, a suitable site would have to be found first, and Teichert admitted that could be difficult. "Although it shouldn't be, because the curtain device cuts down the smoke."

There is no August meeting scheduled for the conference but Teichert said he hopes a special meeting could be called, if necessary.

SO FAR THIS year, Mount Prospect has had to cut down very few diseased trees. The cold weather has kept the bugs in control for the first part of the summer. Although Herbert Weeks, assistant public works director, fears the very recent warm weather may change the situations.

Weeks said that about 30 trees have ben cut down since the ban was put in effect. These trees have been stored in West Park, Golf and Busse roads.

ANOTHER 30 should come down, Weeks said, but instead they are stripping off the branches and leaving just the trunks up, a type of "on site" storage. Once September is here, the danger of the spread of tree disease lessons and the diseased trees can be cut down at any time.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said that under their contract it would cost about $99 a tree to have them hauled to a burning site near Melrose Park. The village cannot afford this, he said. A total of $10,000 has been budgeted for tree and stump removal this year.

Many of the village's trees have been damaged by the recent storms, and Eppley said the branches and trimmings removed from these trees has been shredded and the resulting material used as temporary roads in West Park.

Picnic, Watermelon Fest Is At Westbrook

A picnic and watermelon fest are in store for summer school students at Westbrook School in Mount Prospect today, the last day of the summer session.

Parents are invited to the picnic at the school grounds, 103 S. Busse Rd. Students will then participate in games and competition.

At Busse School, 101 N. Owen St., members of the dramatics class will display some of their talents at 10:30 a.m. A picnic for parents, teachers and students will follow.

Park Chiefs Consider Bike Trail Linkup

Mount Prospect Park District officials are considering establishing a local bike trail that would connect with trails of neighboring communities.

"We eventually hope to establish connecting trails throughout the suburbs and possibly connect them to some already established major trails," said Paul Caldwell, assistant park director. Caldwell has been meeting with representatives of seven other park districts in attempts to coordinate bike trails.

While plans are only in the talking stage, Caldwell said Mount Prospect may be able to connect with Elk Grove Village, Des Plaines or Arlington Heights. "We've discussed a couple possible trails that look like they might be able to connect to neighboring park districts," he said.

One possible route, according to Caldwell, might be in the West Park area, along Lonnquist Boulevard and Berkshire Lane near Weller Creek. "But we would certainly have to approach village officials first," he said.

CALDWELL SAID another possible bike route might be rights-of-way belonging to Commonwealth Edison Co. that could be leased by the park district.

Representatives of the eight park districts plan to meet again Aug. 24. The meetings have been organized by Roger Bjorvik, chairman of regional planning and recreation for the council of Governments, a group of approximately 100 government bodies in Cook County.

RECONSTRUCTION OF SEVERAL Elk Grove Village businesses is expected to take at least a month in the aftermath of last weekend's storm which caused nearly $1.3 million in property damage. Here, workers begin repairing the roof and walls of the Telecontrols, Inc. building at 95 Randall Blvd

Storm Cleanup May Take 2 Months

by CAROL RHYNE

Some Elk Grove Village businessmen estimated Wednesday it will take one to two months of cleanup and rebuilding before everything will be back to normal after last weekend's wind storm that caused nearly $1.3 million in damage to buildings and equipment.

Removal of the debris from the storm is expected to take one to two weeks, but reconstruction of collapsed roofs and walls has been slowed by persistent rains this week.

Village officials counted 47 buildings in the industrial park badly damaged by the strong winds and rain. Especially hard hit was the business district north of Rte. 72 and east of Arlington Heights Road.

Throughout the industrial district, wrecked buildings stood next to other structures untouched by the storm.

Although no tornado was reported Friday night, Ed Murphy, of Murphy Tire Center, 352 Lively Blvd., said, "You can't tell me it wasn't a tornado or tornado-like winds that blew through here."

THE STORM BLEW off half of the roof and the back wall of the building housing Murphy's store, and carpenters put up a temporary wall on the building Saturday.

Dan Silberman, treasurer of National Heat and Power Co., 170 Lively Blvd., said he was waiting for some clear, dry days so his men could install a new roof. He said a third of the roof was blown away in the storm and the remainder would probably have to be replaced too.

Silberman said if everything goes well, he hopes the plant will be in full operation in a month. He said new the sheet metal shop, which makes heating, ventilation and air conditioning systems, is only in partial operation.

"My biggest worry now is rust." Tom Ryan, manager of Atlas Chain Co., 135 Kelly Blvd., said. He said prompt action of the Elk Grove Village Fire Department in covering his walls and roof with heavy plastic saved him thousands of dollars in water damage to inventory from rains this week.

Ryan said business was in full operation by Monday, and orders were being shipped as they came in. However, by Wednesday, power had not been restored to the building. He said the firm was moving to another building on Gordon Street for a month or two until a collapsed roof and walls culd be rebuilt.

PAULEX TOOK and Mold Co., 935 Lee St., where the storm blew down half the building's roof and a wall, may be back in full operation in 30 days.

Werner Bieberstein, Paulex manager, said he hopes to bring back some of the workers Monday in a makeshift operation. So far neither telephone service nor power has been restored, but construction workers started building a new roof and wall Wednesday, which hopefully will be completed in a month, he said.

Bieberstein said the roof and wall fell on some of the firm's heavy equipment worth $250,000, but he felt much of the damage was repairable.

Bike Trail Is Being Considered

cially designated bike trails. Des Plaines and Elk Grove Village rely almost entirely on little-travelled streets for designated bike routes. The Palatine Park District plans to sign a lease for a two-mile right of way with Commonwealth Edison for a bike trail.

Until now, area bicyclists have had to "rough it," according to two authorities, Willard and Phyllis Harmon, of Wheeling. The Harmons are officers of the League of American Wheelmen, a national bicyclist group.

"We've had to learn to be devious to get through these different areas (around the Northwest suburbs), Mrs. Harmon told the park district representatives at a meeting last week. Some routes include weaving across parking lots to get to through-routes, and railroad tracks are a particularly imposing barier to the bicyclist, Harmon said.

Coordinating bike trails is not being limited to the eight suburbs. Bjorvik is meeting with other regional planning organization members in an attempt to get $30,000 from the Dept. of Conservation for a detailed analysis of a possible northeastern Illinois trail plan.

County Wheel Tax Suit Goes To Court Today

Arguments are expected to be heard today in the class action suit challenging the constitutionality of Cook County's tax on vehicles owned by unincorporated area residents.

The suit was filed in April on behalf of the Prospect Heights Improvement Association and the Cook County School Bus Co., Inc. of unincorporated Elk Grove Township. The case has been continued several times since it was first filed.

The tax imposes yearly charges on all vehicles in unincorporated areas. Similar to municipal vehicle stickers, the tax is $10-$15 for cars and various rates for trucks.

THE SUIT contends the tax is unconstitutional because it imposes a charge on only a portion of the county's citizens. According to Edward Berman, attorney for the plaintiffs, "It is collected from a limited number of county citizens who get no additional benefit from paying it."

The revenue from the tax had been slated for the county general fund, but two weeks ago, Cook County Board Pres. George W. Dunne announced the revenue would go instead to the sheriff's department. Cook County Sheriff's police are responsible for patrolling unincorporated areas.

Dunne made the announcement after listening to protests over the tax from a group of residents from Rich, Thornton, Bloom and Bremen townships.

One of the grounds for the suit was that while money was being collected from only some of the citizens, it would be used for all the citizens. Berman said Dunne's announcement would have no effect on the strength of his case. He did say, however, that the state's attorney plans to introduce Dunne's announcement as avidence on behalf of the county.

2 Disappointed In Hospital Decision

by STEVE BROWN

Reaction to Wednesday's announcement that Presbyterian St. Luke's Medical Center plans to build a $12.5 million hospital in Schaumburg drew a variety of comments from members of the Northwest Cook County Health Needs Study Committee.

The committee, which has been in existence for about a year, commissioned a $20,000 study last month to determine the health care needs in the area.

All of the members of the committee, the villages of Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Hanover Park and Roselle and officials from Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village and Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, agreed to abide by the decision of the study. The actual survey work is being conducted by the consulting firm of Ernest and Ernest.

In announcing the decision to build the facility, Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher said he feels the village had "kept its commitment and still believes that a great amount of good will come from the study."

He decided to pursue the possibilities with Presbyterian St. Luke's hospital.

"It was too good an opportunity to pass up," Atcher said.

ATCHER SAID that he talked to other members of the committee and received no negative reaction to the plans for the new hospital.

However, at least two members of the committee, Alexian Brothers and Northwest Community Hospital, deny that Atcher ever approached them on the matter.

Steve Skorcz, assistant administrator at Alexian Brothers, and Malcolm Macoun, president of Northwest Community Hospital, said Atcher had not contacted them

Both expressed surprise, disappointment, and puzzlement over Schaumburg's and Presbyterian-St. Luke's decision to go ahead; when the study partially financed by a $13,000 state grant, is not completed.

"We find it a great personal disappointment that Presbyterian St. Luke's made no overture to the existing institution before announcing their plans," Skorcz said.

In evpressing his puzzlement over the situation, Macoun said, "We had hoped to get an objective study from this committee before any further plans were made."

Both said they plan to bring the new development before the committee at its next meeting.

ROSELLE MAYOR Robert Frantz said he does not feel the action will negate the study in any way.

"I do not feel that this development changes anyone's committment to abide by the decision of the study," Frantz said.

He said that with the opportunity to get a prestige institution into the area, it would have been foolish to pass it up.

Hoffman Estates' representative to the committee, Richard Regan, said he would have to wait to see the outcome of the study before determining the impact of the Schaumburg plans.

"This study was a step in the direction of cooperation, transcending provincial attitudes. We should not allow this development to bias the study and we should be able to transcend the development and still have a spirit of cooperation, Regan said.

He added that while the study would deal with immediate needs of the community, it will also analyze the needs of a large area for the future.

Village Board To Get Kenroy Petition

The Kenroy petition for rezoning and annexation of the Rob Roy Driving Range now will go to the Mount Prospect Village Board.

After several months of debate before the village's plan commission, the case moves to the village board without a plan commission recommendation. On Wednesday, the plan commission voted 4-2 in favor of recommending rezoning for the 544-unit development but was one vote shy of the required five votes for a recommendation.

Before voting on approval, various commission members made motions that the Kenroy plan be resubmitted because it did not comply with the law, that it be denied, and that a vote be postponed until the village attorney could be present at the meeting. There were no votes, however, on any of these motions.

THOSE PLAN commission members who voted in favor of the proposed $20-million plan had accepted Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann's recent opinion that all 38 acres owned by Kenroy Inc. be considered part of the proposed planned unit development.

The two who voted against indicated they took exception to Zimmermann's ruling.

Most of the controversy arose because Kenroy plans to sell 19 acres of the land to the River Trails Park District for a park. Kenroy is doing so under a condemnation suit threat. Some commission members felt that as a result only 19 acres should be considered as the planned unit development, thus making the density too high and some setbacks inadequate.

Roy Gottlieb, of Kenroy, told commission members the deal with the park district has not been finalized and therefore he still owns all 38 acres. He further told the commission that Kenroy's agreement with the park district would ensure the bottom 19 acres remain open land for 20 years.

Ownership of the individual portions of the project, Gottlieb said, would not change the plan for the whole project once it is approved as a planned unit development ordinance.

SOME MEMBERS of the commission expressed displeasure with the current planned unit development ordinance and suggested it be repealed as "it hasn't done any good." Of the ordinance, commissioner Harold Ross said, "Our work of art has turned into a nightmare."

Eight residents of the area were present at the meeting. The driving range is located on the north side of Euclid Avenue, just west of Woodland Trails Park and Wolf Road.

15 Seeking River Trails Principal Jobs

Fifteen people have applied for the job of principal in River Trails Dist. 26, according to Supt. Tom Warden.

Warden said yesterday he is still taking applications for the position of principal at Feehanville and Indian Grove schools. "There are two or three people I'm particularly interested in," he said. "I'm close to a recommendation for Indian Grove." He said he might make the recommendation at the Aug. 1 school board meeting.

Warden has been receiving applications since the school board voted June 20 to reassign two principals. The former principals are Bea Amundson, Feehanville School, and James Ackley, River Trails Junior High School.

Gene Kukla, principal at River Road School, was assigned as principal at the junior high. Joseph Wawick, a teacher at River Road, will become principal there.

THE VACANCY at Indian Grove came Tuesday night after the board accepted the resignation of David Dossett. Dossett, who had been with the district three years, left to take a job as principal in Mundelein Dist. 75.

An Island Lake resident, Dossett said he took the new job because it was closer to his home. He said he is also interested in Dist. 75's Individually Guided Education program. Asked if the recent principal reassignments influenced his decisions, he said "not really."

Retention Basin Work May Start In Two Weeks

Construction on the long-planned Wilke-Kirchoff storm water retention basin in Arlington Heights is expected to begin within the next two weeks following formal approval yesterday by the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD)

In committee meetings yesterday morning, the trustees of the MSD voiced their approval to a new financial agreement between the district and the village and contracts to two construction companies.

Formal approval of the financial arrangements and the construction contracts is expected to be made when the MSD board of trustees meets this morning.

The approvals represent the last step, prior to actual construction, on the part of both the village and the MSD to provide the 14-acre storm water retention basin in the triangle of Wilke, Kirchoff and Central roads on the southwest side of Arlington Heights.

The basin, designed to retain approximately 11-acre-feet of storm water, is expected to reduce the flooding in Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows and nearby unincorporated areas.

IN ADDITION TO the construction of the actual basin, a reservoir outfall sewer will be constructed to provide a means to drain the basin into the existing village storm relief sewer system The outfall sewer, which will comprise 3,829 lineal feet of pipe, will carry the water into Weller Creek.

The total cost of the project is now listed at $1,163,000 The MSD has agreed to contribute $736,000 while Arlington Heights' share will be $427,000

When the MSD Board meets this morning it is expected to give final approval to the Kenney Construction Co., in the amount of $669,238, for the excavation of the basin and building a 7,000-gallon-per-minute storm water pumping station The contract calls for the construction to be completed within about nine months.

The contract for the construction of the outfall sewer is expected to be awarded to the Santucci Construction Co., in the amount of $201,918 60. That work will be done simultaneously with the basin work and is expected to be completed within five months.

Both contracts contain penalty clauses in the event the construction is not completed within the specified times.

BEFORE THE CONTRACTS could be awarded the agreement between the village and the MSD had to be amended because the bids on the construction exceeded the original cost estimates by $318,156

The original agreement between the two boards stipulated the village would provide the land, engineering and maintenance and operation costs while the MSD would contribute the costs of construction and the administration of construction.

The construction commitment by the MSD of $553,000 was outdated in May, however, when the lowest bids for the work totaled $871,156.

After a meeting of the two governmental bodies, the village board voted July 10 to share the excess cost of construction with the district because of the necessity for the project.

Of the excess amount, the village agreed to contribute an additional $135,000 toward the construction costs, leaving $183,156 to be paid by the MSD

The total commitment to the project for Arlington Heights is $427,000 — $232,000 for land costs; $ 0,000 for engineering; and $135,000 for construction.

The contribution of the MSD is $736,000 — all earmarked for construction The cost for any extra work which may be necessary will be the sole responsibility of the village.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Mayor John Woods attended the meeting yesterday and presented the MSD with a check for $135,000, which will be placed in escrow to cover the costs of the construction.

Woods distributed photographs of flooding in the area resulting from recent heavy rains and said he would like to meet "the engineer who coined the phrase '100-year rain'" Woods said Arlington Heights had received three such rains in one week.

The mayor handed the check to MSD Pres John E. Egan and said he hoped the board would vote "yes" on the contracts and the financial agreement Speaking of the proposed basin, Woods said, "We need it and we need it badly."

Egan replied, "It will be started before you get another 100-year rain"

Earlier, MSD Trustee Valentine Janicki introduced Woods to the board and said, "Arlington Heights should be commended for what is about to happen." Janicki said it is an unusual thing for money to come forward from a community and added, "It shows the tremendous sincerity and the tremendous foresight on the part of the community and its mayor. The people of Arlington Heights are to be commended for it."

Once completed, the basin is expected to be maintained by the Arlington Heights Park District. When the basin is dry, it is scheduled to be used for four softball diamonds, a sledding hill, foot paths and a parking lot. The basin is designed to have a dry bottom except after heavy rains.

Intake Pipe In Glencoe

NW Suburbs May Get Lake Water

The way to Lake Michigan is expected to be opened today for the Northwest suburbs when the State of Illinois approves lake water allocations for the DAMP Water Commission.

William Cellini, head of the department of transportation, is scheduled to approve requests from DAMP and the west suburban Tree Towns Water Commission that will allow both agencies to go ahead with their plans to obtain water from the lake.

Under a 1967 U. S. Supreme Court decree, Illinois was limited to a total withdrawal from the lake of 3,200 cubic feet of water per second. The state, given responsibility for parcelling out the water, held hearings on the matter two years ago and has delayed since then in announcing the allocations.

JOHN GUILLOU, director of the state division of water resource management, yesterday said the allocation order prepared by him provides for the requests made by DAMP and Tree Towns. He declined, however, to release the specific allocations until the order is signed by Cellini.

DAMP, known officially as the Des Plaines-Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect-Palatine Water Commision, had asked for permission to divert 37 5 cubic feet of water a second. Tree Towns, made up of Elmhurst, Villa Park, Lombard and Elk Grove Village, asked for 53 cubic feet

Other area suburbs, including the City of Rolling Meadows and the Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District, had asked for separate allocations. It was not clear yesterday whether those suburbs would receive state approval for their requests

Guillou did say, however, that DAMP would be free to sell water to neighboring communities. It is not known whether those sales would have to come from DAMP's allocation or if they could come from the separate allocation of the community that would be buying water from DAMP

Neither Robert Teepe, DAMP chairman, nor Clarence Damhurst, chairman of the Tree Towns commission, could be reached yesterday for comment

Teepe said in May that the two water commissions have agreed in principle that a joint operation, including a commonly owned pipeline from Lake Michigan and filtration plant, would be in the best interests of both commissions

THE COMMISSIONS, whose efforts have been stalled for two years since the state hearings, may be faced soon with a decision on the joint venture, which would cost more than $20 million just for DAMP's share

Guillou has said agencies that receive allocations may lose them if they do not make use of them. It is understood that DAMP and Tree Towns would have to be making continued progress toward obtaining lake water or would lose their allocations

Also, in an engineering study commissioned by DAMP and released in 1970, it was predicted that declining water levels in municipal wells would force DAMP's member communities to seek alternate sources of supply within five years

The study concluded that joint facilities with Tree Towns "would be the most economical means of obtaining such a supply"

Des Plaines, still a member of DAMP, was excluded from the engineering studies because it now buys a portion of its water from the City of Chicago and presumably would not want to commit itself to a Lake Michigan supply system.

However, Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel said yesterday that the city "would be happy to get a portion of our water" from DAMP.

Palatine Village Mgr Berton Braun yesterday said residents would probably pay slightly more to obtain lake water from DAMP than they now pay for municipal well water but added that the extra expense would be worthwhile

Summer School '72

Something For Everyone

by CINDY TEW

Summer school '72 in Arlington Heights School Dist. 25 seems to have had some quality to please everyone.

For the kids, there were interesting classes including industrial arts and typing that many students readily admit they liked. For the teachers, there was a relaxed atmosphere in which individual instruction could flourish. For the parents, the program was free.

"We've had no complaints from anyone, and it looks like the program was a success," said Jim Montgomery, director of instruction. "One woman called today and said her children are ready to sign up for next year's summer school."

THE SUMMER SCHOOL program, which will end today, has included more programs and more students than ever before. Instead of concentrating on remedial needs of students, the new program has added courses in typing, dramatics, physical education and art.

Even the reading courses, traditionally known among students as a bad class to take during the summer, seems to have improved.

Paul Rombach, a 4th grader, has already got plans to take reading along with home economics and industrial arts next summer.

"Reading was OK this summer. There were more choices of things I could do," Paul said. "Summer school's better than regular school."

In a student evaluation of a reading class taken by teacher Richard Walker at South Junior High School, most students said the class was "OK," which is more praise than even the regular school reading program gets.

"The attitude of the program was very positive," said Walker. "Over 80 per cent of my students showed up every day."

District-wide, Montgomery said attendance was very goo through the first half of the program, but absenteeism increased during the second half. He attributed the growing number of absences to family vacations and hot weather.

While only about 500 students have attended summer school in previous years, which cost about $30 in tuition, 2,241 attended this year. The program, which cost the district about $70,000, will be totally reimbursed by the state.

"After teacher evaluations are made, we will make recommendations to the board of education on modifying the program for next year," said Montgomery. "Procedual changes and a bigger variety of class offerings may be included."

Though some classes abandoned stuffy classrooms to meet under nearby trees, no field trips were on this year's schedule. Montgomery said adding field trips may be a possibility for next year.

Bear Highlights Of '65 At Outdoor Movie

Outdoor movies will be shown Monday just east of Recreation Park pool, 500 E. Miner, Arlington Heights, at 8 p.m.

The movies, free to the public, include "Who Killed Lake Erie?" and "1965 Chicago Bears Highlights."

On July 29, from 2 to 3:30 p.m., movies will be shown in the basement of Recreation Park, and will also be free of charge.

The movies will include "Perils of Priscilla," "What on Earth," and "Ghosts and Ghoulies."

Des Plaines, have experienced severe water shortages during the summer months in recent years, despite efforts to dig more wells. Lawn sprinkling restrictions are common in many area communities during the summer.

According to the engineering studies prepared for DAMP, a joint DAMP-Tree Towns operation would include an intake pipe in Lake Michigan in Glencoe at Lake-Cook Road.

The transmission main would be put in along the Chicago and North Western Ry. outer belt line right-of-way, connecting to a filtration plant near River and Central roads in Des Plaines. Both DAMP and Tree Towns would be served by the filtration plant.

DAMP's share of the cost would be paid by a $20,097,000 bond issue paid off from water revenues over a 40-year period. Cost to member communities per thousand gallons of water was estimated in the engineering report at 44 cents under this plan. However, increases in construction and interest costs could raise that price by the time the water system is completed.

Member communities would be expected to add to the 44-cent per thousand gallon price when selling water to individual residents and businesses in order to pay for maintenance of local water systems.

Village Hit For Disrepair Of Basin

The village administration came under fire Wednesday night when members of the Environmental Control Commission learned that the Hasbrook Retention Basic still is in a state of disrepair.

"The fence, which was destroyed a few weeks go by storms and vandalism, has not been repaired, safety grates never have been installed, the pond has not been stocked with fish to keep down the minnow population and the 'no-dumping' sign has been removed." Chuck Purcell, 15-year-old leader of the Save Hasbrook Pond Committee, told the ECC.

A year ago, the village was considering filling in the pond, at a cost of more than $60,000. The committee, consisting mostly of teen-agers who live near the pond, convinced the board of trustees to keep the pond as a wildlife refuge.

"The village saved $60,000 by not filling in the pond, and I think the least the village could do is spend some money to keep the place in repair," said Edward C. Kokkelenberb, chairman of the ECC.

MEMBERS OF the pond committee also said that long-range plans for the pond need to be made by the village.

"We'll take care of the pond through next summer, but the village should have some log-range plan for it," Purcell said.

Purcell said that maintenance by his group has included unclogging a new pond mill after heavy rains, which keeps the water circulating. The boys also attempt to keep garbage out of the area, which they say is continually dumped over the fence by vandals.

Erwin Page, village forester, said the pond is the boys' project and he stays out of it as much as possible. Frank Charlton, director of village health services, said there are no plans that he knows of for the village to take care of the area.

Purcell and three companions emphasized the fact that a balance of nature needs to be kept in the pond area and safety features, including the fence and grates, must be kept in repair.

"It seems the village has not kept their end of the deal, made over a year ago, and we will try to find out why not," Kokkelenberg told the boys.

Townhouses Considered

The plan commission got halfway through a lengthy set of proposed ordinance amendments Wednesday night that would allow construction of townhouses in Arlington Heights.

The townhouse ordinances that are being considered are linked to a proposed new planned development zoning category which would provide a mixture of dwelling types under strict density and land area controls.

After reading through about half of the proposed ordinance changes, the plan commission listened to interested residents and builders. The ordinance hearing was then continued to Aug. 4.

Panel Seeks Better Lights

Proposed ordinance changes for more controlled use of lighting and additional greenery in Arlington Heights parking areas were sent to the village board by the environmental control commission Wednesday night.

Some of the lighting changes will be sent to the board over objections from the village administration.

The changes include limiting lighting pole heights to 40 feet, limiting the type of luminaries to a "sharp-cut" variety which tightly controls the area of light, and not allowing light spillage onto adjacent property at more than .1 foot candle as measured three feet beyond the property line.

"I concur with your proposal to require the use of sharp cut-off luminaries," L. A. Hanson, village manager, told the commission. "I cannot endorse the other proposals."

The commisson modified their original plan slightly, but kept some points which the village manager objects to. "The code should be enforceable at minimum costs in manpower and equipment," Hanson said.

ONE PART OF the proposed ordinance would include the use of a meter to test for illumination.

The proposed changes in the greenery ordinance include "planted islands whose minimum size shall be 130 square feet and be located at the end of every 15 parking spaces or beneath each light pole, whichever results in the most planted islands."

Another part of the proposed ordinance changes states that "fatally-damaged parkway trees shall be replaced with new trees whose total value is equivalent in value to the trees lost."

The panel also recommended that $500 be spent on trees for replanting county and state highway parkways on an experimental basis, and explore methods of getting the county or state to pay for them.

The greenery ordinance changes were not sent to the administration for comment.

IDENTIFICATION OF A MEDICINE
Can you tell what a medicine is just by looking at it? How difficult this is to do was recently brought out in an interesting study done on the colors, shapes and markings of just tablets and capsules.

HOW MANY SHAPES ARE THERE?
Enough to make it complicated — bevelled, concave, convex, elliptical, flat, diamond, heart, pear, oblong, oblong with neck, octagonal, oval, pentagonal, round, square and triangular were some of those listed as commonly found shapes of medicines.

WHAT ABOUT COLOR?
Besides the thirty-three separate and distinct color guides shown on our chart there were the notations that in addition to these there were forty-five other tablets and capsules that could not be described in terms of a single plain color. It further noted that all of the above did not include white and that white accounted for nearly twenty per cent of all tablets and capsules produced.

THERE ARE ALSO MARKINGS
Still another aid to identification of a particular drug is by the manufacturer's marking. The study reported that there were nearly 500 different markings that could appear on tablets and capsules.

THE COMBINATIONS ARE ENDLESS
Knowing about medicines is the most important part of being a pharmacist. We take this responsibility and challenge seriously and carefully study about each new drug as it is released for public use. But when someone stops in and says, "You know, it was a little red pill," it may take some time to recognize the exact medicine.

State To Approve NW Suburb Bid For Lake Water

The way to Lake Michigan is expected to be opened today for the Northwest suburbs when the State of Illinois approves lake water allocations for the DAMP Water Commission.

William Cellini, head of the department of transportation, is scheduled to approve requests from DAMP and the west suburban Tree Towns Water Commission that will allow both agencies to go ahead with their plans to obtain water from the lake.

Under a 1967 U. S. Supreme Court decree, Illinois was limited to a total withdrawal from the lake of 3,200 cubic feet of water per second. The state, given responsibility for parcelling out the water, held hearings on the matter two years ago and has delayed since then in announcing the allocations.

JOHN GUILLOU, director of the state division of water resource management, yesterday said the allocation order prepared by him provides for the requests made by DAMP and Tree Towns. He declined, however, to release the specific allocations until the order is signed by Cellini.

DAMP, known officially as the Des Plaines-Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect-Palatine Water Commision, had asked for permission to divert 37.5 cubic feet of water a second. Tree Towns, made up of Elmhurst, Villa Park, Lombard and Elk Grove Village, asked for 53 cubic feet.

Other area suburbs, including the City of Rolling Meadows and the Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District, had asked for separate allocations. It was not clear yesterday whether those suburbs would receive state approval for their requests.

Guillou did say, however, that DAMP would be free to sell water to neighboring communities. It is not known whether those sales would have to come from DAMP's allocation or if they could come from the separate allocation of the community that would be buying water from DAMP.

Neither Robert Teepe, DAMP chairman, nor Clarence Damhurst, chairman of the Tree Towns commission, could be reached yesterday for comment.

Teepe said in May that the two water commissions have agreed in principle that a joint operation, including a commonly owned pipeline from Lake Michigan and filtration plant, would be in the best interests of both commissions.

THE COMMISSIONS, whose efforts have been stalled for two years since the state hearings, may be faced soon with a decision on the joint venture, which would cost more than $20 million just for DAMP's share.

Guillou has said agencies that receive allocations may lose them if they do not make use of them. It is understood that DAMP and Tree Towns would have to be making continued progress toward obtaining lake water or would lose their allocations.

Also, in an engineering study commissioned by DAMP and released in 1970, it was predicted that declining water levels in municipal wells would force DAMP's member communities to seek alternate sources of supply within five years.

The study concluded that joint facilities with Tree Towns "would be the most economical means of obtaining such a supply."

Des Plaines, still a member of DAMP, was excluded from the engineering studies because it now buys a portion of its water from the City of Chicago and presumably would not want to commit itself to a Lake Michigan supply system.

However, Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel said yesterday that the city "would be happy to get a portion of our water" from DAMP.

Palatine Village Mgr. Berton Braun yesterday said residents would probably pay slightly more to obtain lake water from DAMP than they now pay for municipal well water but added that the extra expense would be worthwhile.

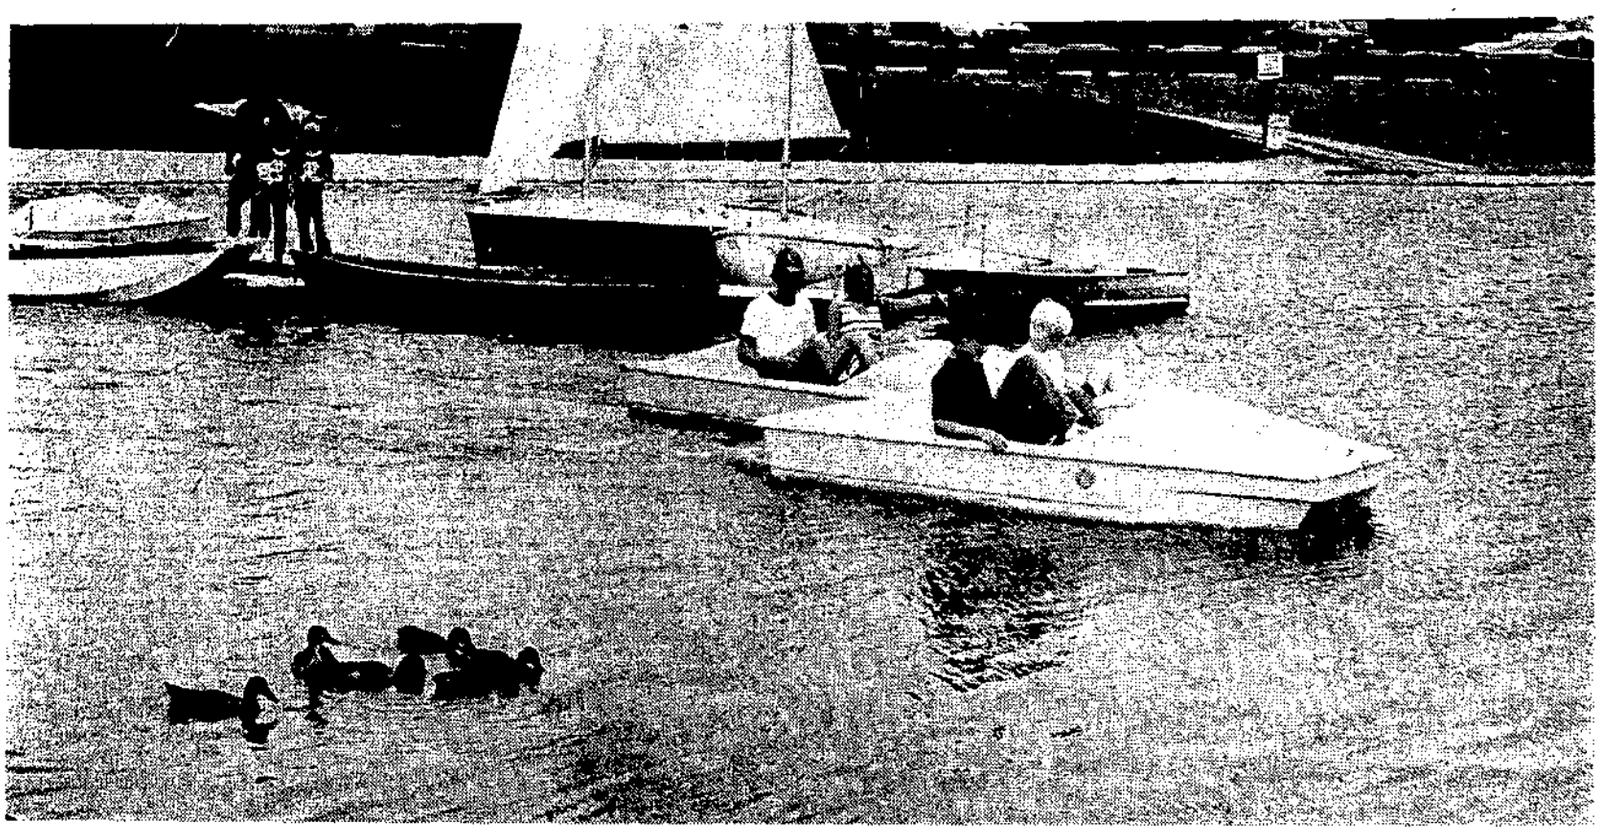
MOST NORTHWEST suburbs, except Des Plaines, have experienced severe water shortages during the summer months in recent years, despite efforts to dig more wells. Lawn sprinkling restrictions are common in many area communities during the summer.

According to the engineering studies prepared for DAMP, a joint DAMP-Tree Towns operation would include an intake pipe in Lake Michigan in Glencoe at Lake-Cook Road.

The transmission main would be put in along the Chicago and North Western Ry. outer belt line right-of-way, connecting to a filtration plant near River and Central roads in Des Plaines. Both DAMP and Tree Towns would be served by the filtration plant.

DAMP's share of the cost would be paid by a $20,097,000 bond issue paid off from water revenues over a 40-year period. Cost to member communities per thousand gallons of water was estimated in the engineering report at 44 cents under this plan. However, increases in construction and interest costs could raise that price by the time the water system is completed.

Member communities would be expected to add to the 44-cent per thousand gallon price when selling water to individual residents and businesses in order to pay for maintenance of local water systems.



DUCKS AND KIDS enjoy Lake Opeka this summer at Howard and Lee streets in Des Plaines. Paddle boats can be rented for $1 per half hour and canoes, rowboats and sailboats can be rented with a family season pass from the Des Plaines Park District. Children under age 12 must wear life preservers offered free at the rental station and must be accompanied by an adult. Below, Bob Stokwell of the park district, helps Mark Kaitchuck and Bob Zebleckis, cast off.

Full-Time City Planner To Begin Work July 31

Des Plaines' first full-time city planner will begin work July 31, according to city officials.

Michael Richardson, 30, a native of Minneapolis, a Vietnam war veteran and a former department chairman for a Wisconsin planning agency, will begin his job by helping city officials revise a three-volume, federally financed, proposed Des Plaines comprehensive plan, officials said.

Richardson has been the chief land use planner since last December for the East Central Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission, which has its headquarters in Appleton, Wisc.

As the land use planner, Richardson reviewed zoning amendment changes and subdivision plats for a nine county area, wrote zoning and official map ordinances, and updated regional land use poans.

He also has worked for Rock Island County, the Illinois Planning and Zoning Commission and the Bi-State Metropolitan Planning Commission.

He did a natural resources and public facilities study for Rock Island County, and a capital improvement program for Moline. Richardson conducted recreational land studies, population and transportation studies, and also helped small villages and cities to participate in federally-funded planning programs.

His educational experience includes a bachelor of science degree from Wisconsin State University, where he majored in geography and economics. He received a master's degree from Eastern Michigan University in 1967 in urban geography.

While in graduate school he was employed as a planning aide by the city of Ypsilanti, Mich., doing land surveys and compiling city plat maps.

Richardson served for five years in the Air Force as an intelligence officer. He received his training in aerial photo interpretation and military planning at Lowrey Air Force Base in Colorado, then served for one year in Vietnam.

For his work in Vietnam he received the Bronze Star and the Air Force Commendation medals. He then served in Alaska as chief of the intelligence plans and programs division of the Alaskan Air Command. He also served as an instructor in economics and geography at Anchorage Community College, a branch of the University of Alaska.

THE NEW city planner, who is married and has two children, was selected by a special panel of the Des Plaines Civil Service Commission. He will receive a salary of $1,249 a month, or about $15,000 a year, with a salary after four years of $1,518 a month, or more than $16,000 a year, according to the city comptroller's office.

Funds for hiring a planner were budgeted in March at the urging of several aldermen and the council's building controls and inspection committee.

In recommending creation of the new post, Ald. Arthur Erbach (5th) committee chairman, said a planner is needed because of the population growth in Des Plaines and the complexity of plans for downtown redevelopment.

Ald. Joseph Szabo (1st) told the council "the city is big enough and has enough growing pains, it needs someone full-time to make sure that growth is orderly."

Des Plaines, which has quadrupled its population since 1950 to about 60,000 residents, has employed private consultants

For Minority Groups In Suburbs, 'It's Catch-Up Time'

by DOUG RAY

"We're going to scratch the score until Mercurochrome won't cure it."

The strategy of the newly formed suburban chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) comes from the lips of Clyde Brooks, a small black man from Elk Grove Village.

For Brooks and his family, the suburban chapter was a long time coming. Seven years ago they broke the racial barrier by moving into that village.

"I've been through all this overt racism, isolation and harassment," he said, and outlined the suburban SCLC's goal as to prevent the same problems from being perpetuated on other minorities living in the Northwest suburbs.

During the last three months, the SCLC has been "scratching," attempting to draw the blood of racism from the suburbs. The next step, Brooks said, is to attack the pocketbook of businesses, municipalities and individuals.

Now under way is an SCLC study of every Northwest suburban community, outling the educational programs, housing provisions and employment opportunities for blacks and other minorities. Brooks said the federal government will provide an initial punch to provide minority opportunities where they are lacking.

"COMMUNITIES here have been resistant," Brooks said. "Take a look at the police departments, the fire departments. . . blacks aren't represented. According to federal laws they must abide by the Civil Rights Act in hiring."

The organization is counting on that long arm in Washington to require more minority opportunities. Brooks is optimistic because it was a federal branch that helped him move into Elk Grove Village.

"We went to the subdivision and were looking for houses," he recalls. "But it seemed there weren't any left for us."

A letter to the Federal Housing Administration shortly cleared the air of alleged discrimination and the Brooks family became residents of the development where supposedly there were no homes available.

"This is catch-up time," he said. Don't continue to talk about being our brother's keeper, but where violations occur we must work to correct them. If federal funds are withdrawn, these villages will come across."

Brooks contends there are other less obvious ways to promote a black presence in suburbia. "Black products could be promoted. . . contract with black enterprises, municipalities could invest money in black banks. . . it's not just hiring."

BUT WHAT can the SCLC do to deliver action with a membership of only 200, of which 90 per cent is white?

It begins with an offer of help, according to Brooks. "We want to be a liaison to solve racial problems. If this is not possible, then we must draw the attention of the public and the federal government," he continued.

If the passive programs fail, the next step is to call for help from the suburban SCLC's "big brother," the Chicago SCLC, headed by the Rev. C. T. Vivian and with a membership of thousands, mostly black.

That was done two months ago in Hanover Park, where a cross was burned to protest a black family moving into a fashionable subdivision. The television cameras followed Rev. Vivian to a Schaumburg church and then to Hanover Park Village Hall, where news conferences were held to protest the racial act.

Action came in the form of the Hanover Park Human Relations Board, which is pledged to help minorities there. If the board does not function as agreed upon, Rev. Vivian, with Brooks at his side, likely will make another trip to the village, this time with placards and a Chicago boycott of chain stores also located in Hanover Park.

"YOU HAVE TO understand that suburbia isn't exposed to a heterogenous society and this promotes ignorance. The suburbs have to be prepared for a multi-racial society. . . it's coming and only a matter of time.

"Elk Grove, Des Plaines, Arlington Heights, all these communities won't be the same in 10 years." The suburbs must move now toward minority group acceptance."

Brooks says the contention that the SCLC "is a group of troublemakers" must be overcome.

"That's just another stereotype," he said.

Kindergarten Pupil Busing Being Considered In Dist.

Busing of some kindergarten students from Parkview to Feehanville School next September is being considered by River Trails Dist. 26 as a solution to overcrowding.

Officials plan to contact parents of about 16 kindergarten students living on Ivy Lane, Azalea Lane, Azalea Place, Kiowa Lane and parts of Basswood and Quince Lanes. The school board has not yet made a final decision on the matter.

"We want parents to at least feel they will have some say in the matter," said board member Leora Rosen.

According to Supt. Tom Warden, Parkview does not have enough classroom space or teachers to accommodate the number of kindergartens registered for next year. He said other alternatives to the problem are holding three kindergarten sessions a day, sending Parkview sixth graders to some other school, or keeping large classes and hiring a teacher aide.

"WE COULD ALSO use a mobile unit, but the district doesn't have enough money to buy one," Warden said.

Warden said that 13 of the 16 parents have already requested bus transportation for their children. "So busing is not the issue. The issue is if parents want small or large class sizes," he said.

Board members asked which school the students would attend for first grade. Warden said he couldn't predict that far ahead since much of Dist. 26's enrollment depends on how many students attend parochial schools each year.

Sears Seeks To Subpoena 8 Newsmen

CHICAGO (UPI) — The prosecutor in the trial of Cook County State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan and 13 co-defendants Thursday filed motions to subpoena eight Chicago newsmen to testify in the case.

Special Prosecutor Barnabas Sears presumably would question the newsmen about a special televised re-enactment of the Dec. 4, 1969, weapons raid in which two Black Panther party leaders were killed.

The re-enactment was supervised by Hanrahan's office and allegedly gave a false account of some actions by the police raiding party.

Hanrahan and his co-defendants are charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice by covering up facts about the predawn raid on a West Side apartment in which Panther leaders Mark Clark and Fred Hampton died.

Sears sought subpoenas requiring testimony by Chicago Tribune columnist Robert Wiedrich; cameramen Charles Marshall and Edward Kaits of ABC-TV; WBBM-TV news director Al Mann and newsmen Harry Porterfield, Robert Berry of WBBM plus two unidentified WBBM-TV newsmen.

The request for subpoenas was presented to Cook County Circuit Court Judge Philip Romiti in compliance with a court policy requiring judicial approval of subpoenas for news media personnel.

Sears acted while the Hanrahan trial was in a one-day recess so attorneys in the case could participate in a legal seminar at Northwestern University.

The city spent about $30,000 between 1967 and 1969 as its share of a federally backed $93,000 study for a comprehensive plan, which has been under council discussion. In 1970, the council paid $1,643 for planning consultant fees, according to City Comptroller Duane Blietz and City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach.

The major product of private consultants was the three volume proposed city plan, intended to set priorities for the city until 1990. Consultants also helped develop a proposed revised city zoning ordinance and created proposals for higher-density zoning in the downtown area.

Attention For Each Child

Paul can't read.

He failed the first grade last spring and seeing all his friends pass him by makes him feel defeated. When the teacher sounded out words for him as he tried to read, he just couldn't understand. Paul didn't hear her words.

Des Plaines elementary school students like Paul are given individual instruction this summer through a federally funded special education program at Plainfield School.

According to William Walter, Plainfield principal, the program "provides services to those children who are educationally disadvantaged." The program emphasizes help for children from low-income families, children with a learning disability, children with poor coordination, children from non-English speaking homes, and children who are frequently moved from school to school.

The students are given individual attention, with an average of seven children per teacher. A different lesson is prepared for each child each day according to his particular needs. Each child's teacher during the school year is interviewed concerning his learning problem. Each child participating in the program is given diagnostic testing by a psychologist and a nurse the first day and results show most students are weak in reading and math skills, said Walter.

STUDENTS like Paul may have a "figu r e-ground" dysfunction. When the teacher talks to him, Paul isn't able to differentiate the sound of her voice from other noise in the classroom. Some children have a similar problem visually. They see all the words on a printed page but they can't pick out just one. Children with these learning disabilities have a difficult time learning to read, identify letters of the alphabet, or adding 2 plus 2.

Instructional materials from all 13 of the district's schools are loaned to the program to help each child with his learning problem. Flash cards, games, English translation tapes, reading machines, and special textbooks are included.

One machine flashes words on a screen at a fraction of a second teaching the student to concentrate, read and understand the word in a short amount of time. Another teaching aid helps the student move his eyes from left to right and teaches him to differentiate shapes and depth perception.

Each child progresses at his own speed and he feels he's accomplishing something. He's confident.

There are 118 children enrolled in the five week program this summer, said Walter. Schools with a high percentage of low-income families in their area are eligible to participate. Seven Dist. 62 schools are included this year as well three parochial grade schools, St. Stephens, St. Mary's and Immanuel Lutheran.

Mikva To Open Office Here

U. S. Rep. Abner Mikva will open his Maine Township campaign headquarters, 716 Center St., Des Plaines, in a ceremony on July 29.

Nancy Stevenson, wife of U. S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, will speak at the gathering. Mikva and Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase will be on hand to meet and talk with township residents.

Volunteers from Maine Township will work in the new headquarters office under the direction of Gail and Bob Nebgen, 1422 Henry, Des Plaines and Judy Kitzes, 8904 Jody Ln., Des Plaines. Heading up the grand opening is Nona Geldbrook.

High School and college volunteers in the area will be directed by Bill Dickens and Dan Grippo, both Park Ridge residents and students at Maine South High School.

Mikva's campaign also has offices in Evanston, Winnetka, Skokie, and Northernick, 1719 Lee St., Des Plaiens.

Mikva, a resident of Evanston, moved to the new North Suburban 10th Congressional District last year from Chicago to run for reelection. He is opposed by Republican Samuel Young of Glenview.

Gas 'Price Wars' Over? Pump Prices Going Up

Motorists are starting to feel the pinch of higher gasoline pump prices at many area stations. But to several local dealers, this marks the first time in several months that they can cut back on losses caused by price wars.

The price wars, in which dealers cut their pump prices to beat the competition, have been severe in the Chicago metropolitan area for more than two years. Pump prices this summer dropped to 10-year record lows, from 5 to 9 cents below the normal price of approximately 40 cents a gallon. Now, for the first time in several months, the majority of the larger oil companies are participating in a move closer to the normal price level.

"We've taken three years of this price war business," said George Beach, owner of the Touhy and Elmhurst Standard Station in Des Plaines. "It used to be that only 40 per cent of the people in our business failed every year. Now three out of four new owners go broke within a year.

"SOMETIMES you wonder if it's worth it," he says. "The margin of profit is so low that you have to cut back somewhere when prices are down. You have to cut back on help or somewhere else.

"For every penny the price goes down below the normal price we lose $1,000 a month without the support of our oil company," he adds. Even when they do offer price subsidies, dealers lose money. Oil companies usually pay 70 per cent of the price below the normal 40.9 or 40.4 cents a gallon price for regular gasoline. The dealer pays 30 per cent.

Beach is happy the price is inching upward. "We've been up at the 39.9 cents a gallon pump price for regular for five days," he says. Dealers are supposed to sell more gasoline when the price is dropped, but it doesn't work that way, he says.

"We lose money on every cent below the normal price," agrees W. J. Miseska, owner of the Rolling Meadows Shell Station. He is charging 38.4 cents a gallon for regular gasoline. "As soon as the price moves up to the normal 40.9 cents a gallon then I pump more gasoline," Miseska says. "This is because people stop looking only at the price and they come in for our service or the brand name.

"Sure, there are always discounters who sell gasoline to the independents for a lower price so they can charge less," he adds. "I call them cutthroats."

"The major oil companies started the price wars," Miseska says. "Now they are trying to stop them because everyone else started to cut their prices even more than they intended."

If dealers have been consistently taking a loss on gasoline during the recent crash of price wars, what keeps many of the dealers in business? "You have to keep your back room busy with service customers," says Miseska. "You have to work longer hours. You have to take Shell's suggestions on how to run your business."

Every service station has a clique of loyal customers, according to Paul Madsen, an attendant at Jim's Industrial Standard service station in Arlington Heights. The station moved up to the 38.4 cents a gallon level for regular gasoline about a week ago, he says.

"We've moved up in the last couple of days to 35.9 cents a gallon for regular," according to Vern Holmes, owner of Elk Grove Texaco in Elk Grove Village. "Most stations in the area moved up, too," he notes.

"We do increase our volume by 30 to 50 per cent when the prices are lower than normal," he says. "But the people who are looking for rock-bottom prices don't come here.

MSD To Protest Zion Power Plant

The Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) announced yesterday it will formally protest the licensing of Commonwealth Edison Co.'s nuclear power plant on the shore of Lake Michigan at Zion.

The announcement was made following an executive session of the trustees — closed to the press and public — called because the district currently is involved in litigation with the power company.

Trustee Abe Eiserman suggested the board go into the closed door session when the subject of nuclear plants arose during the meeting of the MSD's Committee on Industrial Waste and Water Pollution.

After the announcement Eiserman said the district decided to intervene by filing a petition with the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC). He said that avenue was chosen over the alternative of attempting to stop the licensing through the courts because the district will gain a tactical advantage by approaching the AEC.

EISERMAN explained that if the district intervened through the courts, the district would have the burden of proving the operation of the plant will be detrimental to the public interest. By petitioning the AEC, Eiserman said, Edison will have the burden of proving the plants will not be detrimental.

Commonwealth Edison Co. has constructed two nuclear plants at the site. Neither has gone into operation yet, however, because they have not been licensed by the AEC.

If there was no intervention prior to July 29, the AEC automatically would have issued the necessary licenses.

Eiserman said the legal staff of the MSD will immediately begin to prepare the petition to the commission and said he expects the AEC will then set a date for a hearing on the protest.

The MSD is on record as opposing all nuclear power plants because of the danger such plants potentially represent to the waters of Lake Michigan. The trustees voted yesterday to intervene in any licensing of such plants until there are "adequate guarantees against the pollution of public waters."

THE QUICK ACTION by the board short-circuited the plans of representatives of the League of Woman Voters (LWV) to request the district intervene.

Catherine Quigg, of 49 S. Greeley St., Palatine, vice president of the LWV's section on Pollution and Environmental Problems, did not give a planned statement because of the board's action.

In her prepared statement, Mrs. Quigg said the power plants will routinely discharge gaseous and liquid radioactive wastes into the air and water. She charged that those low levels of radiation have lethal effects because they induce cancer in the froms of tumors and leukemia and also cause genetic damage.

Mrs. Quigg said the LWV objects to the "pollute now, study later" policy and called the approach a "travesty on our health and that of future generations."

A week ago Eiserman accused the AEC of keeping secret from the public the radiation dangers to Lake Michigan from nuclear power plants. He said the standards set by the AEC governing radioactive wastes does not protect the environment. He added the core-cooling system criteria set by the commission for nuclear power plants will not protect against poisoned drinking water in the event of a coolant failure.

Career Program Signup Slated At Harper College

Students interested in enrolling in any of five new career programs at Harper College may call now for a pre-registration appointment.

The new programs will be offered in the areas of air conditioning and refrigeration medical technology, food service management medical office assistance and legal technology. Students should call 359-4200 ext. 233 to make an appointment for preregistration, which is being held at the college between Aug. 1 and 4.

The legal technology program is the first of its kind to be developed at an Illinois Community College. The program, which will prepare students for employment as assistants to lawyers, offers a two-year associate degree or one-year certificate.

STUDENTS TAKING the medical technology program will be trained for employment as a medical office assistant or medical secretary in a physician's office, clinic or hospital. The program offers both a two-year associate degree and a 23-semester hour transcription certificate.

Also offered for the first time will be a certificate program in food service management. The evening program will supplement the associate degree program in food service management in operation since fall, 1969. After completion of the 15 credit hour program, students may continue to earn a degree. Graduates of the degree program will be qualified to work as food production supervisors, management trainees and small unit managers.

In response to community interest, the college is launching a pilot program to train students as medical laboratory technicians and operating room technicians. The two-year program prepares the student to take a written examination given by the board of registry of the American Society of Clinical Pathologists. Northwest Commmunity Hospital and Alexian Brothers Medical Center will provide laboratory facilities for the program and share costs.

Another new two-year associate degree program will be offered in the area of air conditioning and refrigeration. Students will be trained to repair and maintain cooling equipment.

Des Plaines Hosts 32-Team State Softball Tournament

by JIM COOK

Provided the monsoon season subsides in Des Plaines this weekend, the 1972 State 16-Inch Softball Tournament will unfold at two sites Saturday with the semi-finals and championship clashes Sunday.

For the seventh consecutive year, the Des Plaines Park District-hosted spectacle is sponsored by the Illinois Park and Recreational Society and will draw some of the finer teams in the state.

Thirty-two clubs have entered the two-day affair that will begin at both Algonquin School (Algonquin Rd. and Fifth Ave., one block east of Wolf Rd.) and Rand Park on Saturday and climax Sunday with the featured showdowns slated solely at Rand Park.

The contests will begin at 8:30 a.m. Saturday morning and run all day with semi-finals and championship series scheduled for noon on Sunday.

Each park district or recreational department in the state of Illinois was eligible to send one representative to the single-elimination tourney.

A showcase for area 16-inch softball, the Des Plaines extravaganza has always been one of the toughest tournaments in the nation. In the past two years, for example, the top three squads in the Des Plaines competition have placed first, second and third in the future-billed World Series of Softball.

Such standouts as So-Bees of Berwyn, the 1971 State Champion and 1971 runnerup in the World Series and the Bruins of Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows, 1971 State Runnerup and 1971 third place World Series finisher, are tabbed in favorites roles for the 1972 edition.

Other area entries include the Wally Antonozek-managed Villa Lounge Hustlers from Wheeling, Myron Silver's Rosati's Pizza out of Des Plaines, the Prospect Heights Raiders and Elk Grove-based Village Realty managed by Ken Kocolowski.

Schaumburg's entry is the Paddock Cannons managed by Rich Byrne while John Durso will lead Ned Singer's Sports Palatine representative.

Arlington Heights' Pit-N-Pub Cheetahs are managed by Don Schulze, the Rolling Meadows Raiders by Roy Woodruff and the Olson Care Enterprises Scrappers of Mount Prospect by Jack Olson.

Defending champion Berwyn drew the top seed in the tourney while the Bruins ranked second and Evanston third. A complete schedule for the tournment follows:

Fergie Is Cheated

Dear Sir:

National League All-Star manager Danny Murtaugh must have used a dart board to select his pitchers for the classic July 25. How else could he have overlooked Chicago Cub Ferguson Jenkins?

The rash of tough-luck games that he's lost this season is due primarily to his team's lack of hitting, but despite this, he's still managed to win 12 games. Only one other pitcher, Gary Nolan, had more wins as of Tuesday, but Murtaug still snubbed him.

What do you have to do? He's the NL's Cy Young Award winner in 1971, he's one of the workhorses in the league with nearly 200 innings pitched, his walks-to-strikeout ration is superb (37 to 119) and his 2.85 earned run average is better than some of the guys Murtaugh did pick!

Let's put the selection of all-star pitchers into the hands of the fans, too. At least we'll pick the most deserving ones.

IRA HAS A BOOSTER

Dear Sirs,

This may sound stupid, but Ira Berkow really knows his beat. Berkow did some fine articles on the Cubs a while back in your paper and now has done a great first part feature on the Sox.

Why don't some of the Chicago writers dig up some interesting things like he has done? Maybe they are too close to the scene. All I know is he is the best man-local writer you run and I have yet to read a poorly done piece from his typewriter.

Keep using him!

ABC, FRINK — DOUBLE DISTORTION

Dear Herald Sports

I just heard the other day that Bill Frink was going to be working with the regular ABC-TV sports crew at Munich. Ugh! They must really be hurting to get a guy like this, so weak and nondescript.

The other night he ended his show by saying, "In a late game on the coast, KC is going against the Angels with Joel Horlen doing the pitching. Here's hoping OUR man comes out on top, Fahey!"

Fahey Flynn gave him a doubletake. Besides getting "KC" wrong (the A's have been playing in Oakland for several years), he intoned that Horlen was still with the Sox.

Flynn, although not a sports announcer, realized Frink's mistake and said, "Our man?"

Frink came back, "Is that what I said?"

"Yes, you did, Bill," chuckled Fahey.

Frink, now breaking into a giggle, replied, "Well, I said 'our' because there might be some A's fans in the audience."

Unbelievable!

If ABC carries through its plan to use Frink, it will add insult to injury. Not only will I have to watch the Olympics with all the ghosts caused by the new (bleep) Sears building, I'll also have the distorted, giggly face of Frink uttering his usual nothings from Germany.

LETTERS CAMPAIGN

Dear Herald:

This may not be very timely because the White Sox have been doing poorly lately. But I would like to remind Sox fans that this is the last season the team has a contract for WFLD-TV (Channel 32) to televise its games.

I would hate to think of a whole summer — if not with WFLD, then with some other station. I'm sure other Sox fans will agree. Even though the team is slipping now, they have played many exciting games all year. They are still in second place, pretty darn good for such a young team, and stayed close to Oakland for a while. It is no disgrace to lose out to a team as good as Oakland.

I would hatt to think of a whole summer with no Sox games on the tube. So, now for my pitch: Why don't all of us Sox fans write to WFLD and tell them how we feel? Don't think it won't make a difference if they get enough letters.

Now is the time for all good fans to come to the aid of the White Sox.

THE HULL THING — AGAIN

Dear Staff:

Although everyone is getting tired of hearing and talking abut Bobby Hull and his Great Escape. I think the other side of the story should be listened to.

What I mean is, almost everyone has been saying that they don't blame Bobby for going because anyone in his right mind would accept a chance for more money. As usual, they all paint Arthur Wirtz and the Hawk management as villains.

Well, I for one (and I may be the only one) don't go along with this. You would think that Hull would show some loyalty for this city after all it has done for him (remember that fans pay the salaries). Besides, Bobby could have made as much or more in the next 10 years from his Hawk salary and outside endorsements combined as he will get from Winnipeg and the World Hockey Association. Don't forget that the Hawks offered Hull the biggest contract in NHL history.

I cannot agree with a player leaving just like that, for no other reason than money. Is there no more to hockey than dollars and cents? If so, that is a sad commentary on the world of sports.

Park Ridge Opposes All-Star Cast

An interesting potpourri of talent is provided by the Ninth District American Legion all-star baseball team, which will take on Park Ridge tomorrow at 4 p.m. at Recreation Park in Arlington Heights.

Park Ridge, as local legion fans know, surprised everyone by beating Arlington Heights twice in three days last weekend to move into first place for the first time just before the specified deadline Sunday evening. Thus, Ridge earned the right to take on the all-stars.

This will be the league's second annual attraction. Last year a big crowd turned out to see Logan Square rally for four runs in the eighth inning for a 6-4 victory.

As do most all-star units, this one has every ingredient desirable on the diamond. Explosive bats are featured throughout the 25-man squad, which has two players at each position except pitchers.

The eight-man pitching staff (six righties, two lefties) is to a man made up of forbidding arms which have been as stingy in giving up runs and hits as George Halas and Arthur Wirtz in giving out free bonuses.

And don't forget defensive ability. This was a definite consideration in the selections made by league coaches. Plenty of fleet feet and sure hands will be on display.

All of this would suggest that any team bold enough to take on the all-stars would not stand a chance. But this is not the case when you consider the way Park Ridge has been playing. Just the fact that it swept all three games from Arlington Heights this year speaks highly for Ridge, since Arlington had a 12-game winning streak earlier and win 20 of its first 23.

More than one coach has picked Park Ridge as a likely league and tournament winner because of its all-around solidarity and fine pitching. Although the squad is handicapped by a heavy schedule during these few days, it will be able to substitute freely for this occasion.

Manager Bob Grybash of Palatine — who has Des Plaines' Merv Fink and Logan Square's Larry Nomellini as his coaches — will probably work each player in for about half of the game.

The pitchers who will toil the most will probably be those who are the most rested. Several are on teams which also have games bunching up about now. (There have been several rainouts lately and the Ninth District season must end by this Wednesday if the tournament is to begin Thursday as scheduled).

Boys named first at each position who will probably be starters are Steve Scholten of Des Plaines at catcher, Joe Bombicino of Logan Square at first base, Bert Newman of Arlington Heights at second, Randy Jespersen of Des Plaines at shortstop and Rich Luzinski of Des Plaines at third.

Others at those positions, in the same order, are Pat Broderick of Arlington, Keith Steelman of Palatine, Rick Wisniewski of Norwood Park, Bill Arkus of Palatine and Dave Zare of Arlington.

Pitchers include George Pattec of Palatine; Ken Martin, Terry Smith and Mike Cook of Logan Square; Mark Leonhard and Jim Hopkins of Arlington; Larry Monroe of Des Plaines and Tom Clark of Norwood Park.

Ten different high schools are represented on the squad as well as all seven Ninth District teams. Arlington Heights and Logan Square each placed six players, Des Plaines and Palatine each have five and Norwood Park and Schiller Park two apiece.

A new special attraction this year will be a baserunning contest before the gme, starting at 3:45. One runner will represent each team and be clocked all the way around the bases. They will be Mark Newman, Bobowski, Chen, Hauswirth, Steve Sarcia of Park Ridge, Wisniewski and Bellah.

Park Ridge's top pitchers thus far have been Greg Ciezadlo with a 6-1 record, Scott Jones with 4-2 and Fred Parker with 3-3. Hot hitters for Ridge are Russ Anderson and Ciezadlo with averages over .400; Charlie Fahrner and Mickey Drews with better than .300; and Bill Aimers and Jones, both in the high .200's.

All in all, it ought to be quite an exhibition — if the weatherman will change his recent script and cooperate.

Owner Groups Can Make Or Break Condos

Condominium ownership can be a satisfying way of life, if everything goes right. But it can be utterly frustrating if the people who live in the condominium building make a shambles of the owners' association that's responsible for running the property.

"In fact, many people who buy condominiums don't even realize they must become part of an owners' association and abide by its rules until they're presented with the final papers at the closing

"This is an aspect of condominium living that isn't often talked about when the developer is trying to sell you a condominium," according to William D. Sally, vice president of Baird & Warner, Inc., and general manager of the firm's property management division.

Even if the developer does the maximum to get the condominium off on the right foot, once the building is completely sold out, it's up to the owners to keep it running. And that's where the trouble can start, Sally said.

Here's the story:

A condominium building really is made up of two parts: the apartments themselves which are individually owned by the residents, and the common elements, which include the grounds, lobby, elevators, halls, stairways, etc.

Each owner of an apartment also owns a percentage of these common elements. Along with the ownership of the common elements goes a proportionate responsibility to pay for the upkeep and maintenance of these items and the building

For instance, there are the costs of heat and water There are the costs of electricity to operate elevators and lights in the lobby and parking areas. The janitor and doorman must be hired and paid.

There are taxes and insurance on the common elements. A reserve should be set up for replacement of equipment and repairs All of these mean the condominium owner gets an assessment each month in addition to paying for his mortgage, taxes, and insurance on his own apartment.

"If paying for the common elements were all there was to it, the problem would be simple," Sally said. "However, certain policy decisions have to be made, and the building has to be managed. That's where the owners' association comes in."

This association is responsible for all policy decisions relating to the building. It's set up on democratic principles. All owners of condominium apartments become members of the association. They have votes in proportion to the cost of their apartment to the cost of the building as a whole.

Actual decisions of the owners' association are made by a board of directors elected by all the other members. It's up to this board to determine what has to be done to keep the condominium running, and to see that owners pay their fair share of the upkeep. If costs go up, the board must increase the assessments to each owner. A strong board can do much to keep the condominium running on an even keel; a weak board can invite disaster.

"At first, when the developer begins selling condominiums, he really is the majority owner, and his ownership interest diminishes as units are sold," Sally says. "He therefore dominates the owners' association, and it is in his interest to see that the building is properly run. So he usually retains a professional property management firm to manage the building for him."

However, once the condominium is 75 to 80 per cent sold out, the development turns over the management and control of property to the owners, and they are then responsible for running it.

The property management firm that originally was retained by the developer typically has a three to five-year contract. In most cases, this contract is still in efect when the building is turned over to the owners, and so the property management firm when the contract runs management.

Depending on the amenities and prestige of the property, and the complexity of managing it, the management firm's charge for condominiums could be any where from 5 to 16 per cent of the gross assessment charges. Seeing these charges, the condominium board of directors may be tempted to cut costs as soon as possible by terminating the management firm xwhen the contract runs out and managing the property themselves.

"This is particularly apt to happen if the owners consist of businessmen, lawyers, accountants, and other professionals who feel that managing a condominium is easy," Sally said.

But most owner's associations falter when it comes to property management. They haven't the experience or patience. Most important, the members begin fighting among themselves, since they don't have the teamwork necessary to keep up with the day-to-day problems of running the building. This is characteristic of a weak board with every member clamoring tso have his say.

A recent case cited by House & Home magazine shows what can happen. One codominium owner investigated the books kept by the board of directors and found gross over-spending and irresponsible neglect in record-keeping. The board wasn't putting money aside for emergencies The manager who was hired to oversee maintenance was criticized for her policies.

The upset owner sent a 20-page letter reporting her findings to the other condominium residents, and the result was a major confrontation at the next association meeting. Lawsuits were threatened. Later, several owners sold and moved because of what happened.

As House & Home reported it, the biggest disadvantage in this situation is that there is no productive way to handle dissent. Too much depends on the leadership talent that happens to buy intoo the property. If there are too many chiefs and no Indians, the result can be trouble.

A Technique For Resting The Mind

Transcendental Meditation — Key To World Peace?

by JEAN CAFARELLA

Are you tired, overwrought, nervous, or generally up tight? Have you suffered every type of Excedrin headache?

Hang in there, people — Maharishi Mahesh Yogi recommends for your transcendental meditation (TM for short).

Transcendental meditation involves ridding the mind of all thoughts and all experiencing of the senses. You sit in a chair, relax, and empty your head of frustrations.

For those who are wondering, transcendental meditation is not as strange as it sounds. Dennis Bottom, a teacher of TM, lectured to about 80 people at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library Wednesday night, explaining the meditation is not a religion, philosophy, sacrifice, diet or way of life.

TM is basically a mental technique for resting the mind and body, which is recommended for 15 to 20 minutes in the morning and late afternoon.

FOR THOSE WHO decide to practice TM daily, its advocates promise great things. They say TM will expand awareness, develop creative intelligence, improve perception, make people less tired, make them happier and (if enough people practice it) lead to world peace.

"When man's intellect fails," says Maharishi, "he picks up a stick. If only 10 per cent of the world practiced transcendental meditation, we would have peace."

There is some medical evidence that TM can make people more easy going. Bottom said TM gives the body twice as much rest as a full night of deep sleep.

Several doctors at the Harvard Medical Center found TM produced a 20 per cent drop in metabolism, which includes breath rate, oxygen consumption, and cardiac output. TM also reduces blood lactate, which is a sign of anxiety; the reduction therefore makes a person less nervous.

The theory behind TM involves three levels of experience: the senses, the thinking process, and pure consciousness.

"The mind is like an ocean, with activity of the senses at the surface and thought in the middle, while pure consciousness is the foundation," said Bottom. TM teaches that thoughts are most profound in the pure consciousness state, as heat is hottest near the fire.

As a thought reaches the sense stage, it has become complicated and diffused by what happens all around a person. Bottom said that TM tries to get back to the source of the thought, pure consciousness, which improves mental abilities.

TM IS NOT A process of concentration on a single idea. It is merely being "conscious." Nevertheless, the person remains alert should someone decide to talk to him during meditation.

By relaxing the body and mind before day and night activities, TM makes a person more alert, said Bottom. Tensions, aches, and pains are reduced, and practicers of TM find they are less tired by their work.

"It's like shooting an arrow at a target," said Bottom. "The experienced archer knows you must draw the arrow backwards in order to propel it forward more surely and accurately. In the same way, a person goes back into a restful state, which increases his energy to plunge forward into activities."

Bottom said this decrease in tension naturally produces improved behavior toward others. "You feel more stable, secure, and happy. This extends to your family and environment," he said.

The program for learning TM is done in seven steps. The first two steps are introductory lectures on what TM is, its history, and some explanation of technique. Next is an interview of a few minutes with the instructor.

THE LAST FOUR sessions are taken up with actual instruction on how to meditate. In a week's time anyone can learn the process. This is followed by periodic checks to make sure a person has not begun concentrating on the relaxation, which defeats the purpose. The relaxing must be entirely natural.

Many colleges are now offering courses about TM, and there is presently a bill in the state legislature stating that TM should be taught in all schools.

County Wheel Tax Suit Goes To Court Today

Arguments are expected to be heard today in the class action suit challenging the constitutionality of Cook County's tax on vehicles owned by unincorporated area residents.

The suit was filed in April on behalf of the Prospect Heights Improvement Association and the Cook County School Bus Co., Inc. of unincorporated Elk Grove Township. The case has been continued several times since it was first filed.

The tax imposes yearly charges on all vehicles in unincorporated areas. Similar to municipal vehicle stickers, the tax is $10-$15 for cars and various rates for trucks.

THE SUIT contends the tax is unconstitutional because it imposes a charge on only a portion of the county's citizens. According to Edward Berman, attorney for the plaintiffs, "It is collected from a limited number of county citizens who get no additional benefit from paying it."

The revenue from the tax had been slated for the county general fund, but two weeks ago, Cook County Board Pres. George W. Dunne announced the revenue would go instead to the sheriff's department. Cook County Sheriff's police are responsible for patrolling unincorporated areas.

Dunne made the announcement after listening to protests over the tax from a group of residents from Rich, Thornton, Bloom and Bremen townships.

One of the grounds for the suit was that while money was being collected from only some of the citizens, it would be used for all the citizens. Berman said Dunne's announcement would have no effect on the strength of his case. He did say, however, that the state's attorney plans to introduce Dunne's announcement as evidence on behalf of the county.

Cat Nuisance Law To Be Prepared

City Atty. Robert DiLeonardi was authorized Monday to prepare an ordinance amendment setting up fines and penalties for cat owners who allow their pets to interfere with the rights and property of their neighbors.

The council is expected to study this proposed amendment to the city's nuisance ordinance at the Aug. 7 council meeting. The proposed amendment was created by the council's city code and judiciary committee, which is also studying laws to prevent residents from keeping wild animals or farm animals in their homes.

The council rejected a proposal by Ald. Howard Thomas (6th), which would have required cats to be given rabies shots. Ald. Thomas withdrew his proposal after hearing that no cases of rabies had been reported in Des Plaines in almost a decade, and that the state and county do not require rabies shots.

On Pom Pon Squad

Nancy Lunak, 872 Munroe Circle, Des Plaines, a freshman in business education at Western Illinois University, has been selected as a member of the Western Wrangles, the school's official pom pon squad.

St. Mary's Graduate

Geralyn Pederson of Des Plaines recently received a bachelor of arts degree at St. Mary's College in Winona, Minn.

White Oak — True King Of Forest

If oaks are "kings of the hardwood forest," then the white oak — Illinois' new official state tree — is "king of kings."

That's the opinion expressed in the opening paragraph of a publication. "Silvical Characteristics of the White Oak," released in 1953 by the USDA Forest Service.

And the evidence is hard to dispute.

Within its natural range, which includes practically all of the eastern one-half of the United States, the white oak is usually considered the most important of many oak species. For centuries the white oak has been admired for its beauty, sturdiness, longevity and wood quality.

The white oak is a large tree, normally reaching 100 feet in heights and four feet in diameter. Trees 150-feet tall, eight feet in diameter and 600-years-old have been found.

IN DENSE FOREST stands, white oaks grow tall and straight, free of side branches for more than one-half of their height. In the open, however, the trees develop broad crowns with far-reaching limbs, making them useful as ornamental and shade trees.

White oak wood is heavy, strong, close-grained, and light-brown in color and has many uses, including construction, shipbuilding, barrel-making, furniture, interior finishing and flooring.

Before the white oak was officially designated as Illinois' state tree, that distinction belonged to a nondescript oak, commonly called the "native" oak

No one was exactly sure which of the many oak species common to Illinois was the "native," although many assumed it referred to either the white or the bur oak.

The Illinois legislature left the question up to the school children of Illinois. During the past winter, they cast their ballots and when the votes were tallied early this spring, the white oak was officially dubbed "Illinois State Tree "

One now stands on the Illinois Capitol grounds, planted there by Gov Richard B. Ogilvie during recent Arbor Day ceremonies. The tree was provided by the Illinois Technical Forestry Association (ITFA), an association of 150 professional foresters in Illinois.

Robert Young, University of Illinois Extension forester and ITFA secretary, says that although the white oak generally has the reputation of being a "slow-grower" that reputation is only partially deserved.

"EARLY GROWTH may be slower than other oaks, and under certain conditions, white oaks may be outgrown by other trees, white oaks grow faster in height than nearby hickories, and nearly as fast as black oak and red oak."

Notwithstanding its slow-growth reputation, the white oak is prized for forest, highway and ornamental plantings

Young says white oak planting stocks are available from many commercial nurseries and should be even more readily available in the future

New plantings should be made in the early spring, however.

THE WHITE OAK — called "king of kings" — in a 1953 USDA Forest Service publication — was officially designated Illinois state tree after being selected by school children throughout the state. The species which normally grows 100 feet high and 4 feet in diameter is admired for its beauty, sturdiness, longevity and wood quality.

Police Rookie A Recent Bridegroom

Newest member of the Des Plaines police force, Jerry Max Liggett, who graduated from the Police Academy July 18, is also a newcomer in the field of matrimony.

He and Diane Rosendahl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Rosendahl, 339 S. Plum Grove Road, Palatine, were married June 17 at 2:30 p.m. at St. Theresa's Catholic Church in Palatine. Jerry is the son of Mr and Mrs. Max Liggett, 587 Webford St., Des Plaines.

Their double ring ceremony was conducted by Father James Kehoe against an altar background of white chrysanthemums. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Her Empire style gown was of white organdy trimmed in Chantilly lace and pearls. To it was attached an organdy and lace train. From her pearl covered crown fell a shoulder length veil. She carried a cascade of phalaenopsis orchids and blue stephanotis.

DIANE'S SISTER, Debra, served as maid of honor. She and the other bridesmaids were in blue and white print organdy over silk. Their dresses were styled with scoop necks, puff sleeves and Empire waists, and each girl wore a pale blue veil matching her dress.

Sheryl Molway of Palatine and Nancy Eckert of Oak Lawn, a school roommate of the bride, were the other bridal attendants All the girls carried nosegay bouquets of blue and white daisies.

The groom's party included Jerry's three brothers Jack Liggett as best man, Jeff as a groomsman and Jay as an usher Also a groomsman was Vernon Selley of Algonquin, while Jimmy Zucco,

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Liggett

the groom's cousin, of Park Ridge, served as an usher.

THE RECEPTION was held at the Arlington Heights Elks Club, where 120 guests enjoyed dinner and dancing The groom's grandfather, Chester Hunter, served as official photographer at both wedding and reception.

Diane and Jerry are now living in the Winmoor Garden Apartments in Sleepy Hollow Diane is a graduate of William Fremd High School She attended Western Illinois University and is now a senior at Northern Illinois University in DeKalb where she is majoring in elementary education.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: We've got so many wasps that it's become a hazard just to walk around the house during warm days. Is there some good spray we can use to shoo them away flom our place? — Hilda W.

Having been through this a few times, I can feel for you Just spraying around the house isn't going to do anything You've got to locate the nest where they retire to at night. Then cover yourself completely to protect yourself from counterattack and spray the nest just before darkness with any of the home insecticide sprays. You will kill most of them Just remember the nests are what you go for — after the wasps have retired — and don't take chances. Put on gloves, veils, anything to keep from being exposed because, as you undoubtedly know, wasp bites can be highly dangerous

Dear Dorothy You once wrote something about what to use on white shoes which doesn't make them chalky like they get when using white shoe polish. What was it? — Nancy M

Any of the cleaning sprays will do the trick. Do think, though, that regular polish does cover up the scuff marks

Tip to brides: When adding eggs to a hot mixture, first add a little of the hot mixture to the eggs, stirring constantly, then a little more of the hot mixture, still stirring Then reverse it and add the eggs to the hot mixture, still stirring

Dear Dorothy· How can I get chocolate milk stains out of a white acrylic sweater? — Mrs. Bob Romines.

Toilet Training

NEW YORK (UPI) —Many mothers expect toilet training to be completed by the time child is two years old. According to a report in "Modern Medicine," a journal for doctors, this expectation often is unrealistic. Coercive toilet training, what's more, can result in behaviour problems. Drs. James A Stehbems and David L. Silber, of the University of Iowa, recommend a parent-doctor discussion on the subject before child is a year old.

Packing Tips

Next time you're packing, put shoes into old stockings or socks. The shine will be protected.
